FACTS THAT THE PROPRIETORS ARE PREPARED TO PROVE—
That the Sydney Elite Rink is the largest skating rink in Australia. That it is the best ventilated rink in Australia. That it has the best band of any rink in Australia. That on account of its double floor not half the noise is made by the skaters. That when the immense building is crowded to its utmost capacity the music can be heard distinctly in all parts of the building. That, in case of fire, 5000 people could leave the building in less than thirty seconds. That the management does not try to mislead the public by false advertisements. That we are the Originators, not the imitators, of all the New and Popular Attractions and Improvements that have been brought before the Roller-skating Public of Australia. That the public unanimously acknowledge that the Sydney Elite Rink is the best appointed and managed Rink in Australia. That our Patrons are the Elite of Sydney.

NOTE.—The Elite of Sydney cannot be misled by other advertisements. They still patronise the Elite Rink, and one and all proclaim it the largest and most beautiful Rink in Australia, the hardwood floor far superior to any floor they ever skated on.

WHAT THE PRESS SAYS:—
"The plunge into real water, and the subsequent appearance of Mr. Rignold and Mr. Whyte dripping from their stage-bath was a startling novelty that quite fulfilled expectation as an effective sensation."
—S. M. HERALD

"Then Mr. Rignold took a header from the bridge and emerged with the rescued, dripping but triumphant. Both actors were called with rapturous shouts before the act drop."
—DAILY TELEGRAPH.

"Everyone in Sydney will be inclined to throng to see Mr. Rignold take a really sensational header from a sufficiently high bridge into real water, but even without this novelty it may be certainly said the 'Lights o' London' is 'a safe draw.'"
—EVENING NEWS.

"The drowning scene and the rescue were acted with marvellously realistic effect, and the audience fairly screamed with surprise and delight."
—AUS. STAR.

"The sensation of the evening, however, was the Regent's Park Canal Scene, and when Mr. Rignold dived in after Preene, and was seen swimming bravely to the rescue, the whole house cheered wildly on an unmistakably new and effective sensation."
—S. LIFE.

"The real water scene is a magnificent success. Mr. Rignold dives in with a header that sends him nearly across the stage, and elicited tremendous cheers from a crowded house."
—SUNDAY TIMES.

"The 'Lights o' London' certainly bids fair to outshine all rivals in public favour for some time to come, and will have, we trust, a long and successful season."
—SUNDAY NEWS.

The company is formed for the purpose of acquiring and completely taking over all rights and obligations under contracts of purchase recently made of the properties, businesses, and assets of the companies and owners hereunder set out, which include nearly all the present kauri forests alienated from the Crown, and the most important sawmill interests in the North Island of New Zealand, and for completing such contracts, and carrying on, and working all, or so many as the directors may think fit of such sawmills, most of which are at present in full operation, with the view to trade principally in sawn and dressed wood, and for any other purposes mentioned in the Memorandum of Association that may be required.

These contracts the vendors have, after negotiations, conducted at great expense and trouble, and extending over a considerable period, been able to secure on extraordinarily favourable terms, being aided thereto by the extreme competition between the numerous proprietors.

The documents themselves, or certified copies, can be inspected at the offices of the solicitors to the company, in Melbourne and Auckland, together with an approximate statement of the purchase monies, so far as they can be ascertained. It is impossible at present to state these purchase moneys exactly for various reasons, such as that the purchases include large stocks of timber of yet undetermined quantities; in some instances the purchases are going businesses, and some of the contracts are for the future supply of timber to be paid for at specified rates. The vendors to the company are —Messrs. George Holdship, Harvey Patterson, John Sharp, William Smith, George Napier Turner, William Harper, John Moodie, George Lush, George Shaw, Robert J. Harvey, George Hay Mann, Matthew Lang, Matthew Henry Davies, Edwin C. Elliott, John H. Patterson, Alexander Fraser Ross, Michael Willis Fergusson, David Blair, Charles F. Orr, and Thomas Christian; and the following are the principal concerns which they have acquired, viz. :—

AUCKLAND TIMBER COMPANY, LIMITED,

including this company's mills at Sydney, Auckland, Port Charles, Whangaroa, Mongonui, and Kennedy's Bay, with rights to forests and freehold lands in the immediate neighbourhood. The Sydney property has an area of about five acres, with a valuable frontage to Sydney Harbour, the mill and site being valued at the present time at £40,000. The Auckland mill site has also a large water frontage, of greatly increasing value, and the mill is most complete and extensive, and is valued at £60,000. The Kauri Timber Company is to take over with these properties the steamers Terror, Yankee Doodle, and Hokianga, and the schooners Mariner, Kauri, and Rata, and the whole of this company's assets and liabilities as a going concern.

NEW ZEALAND TIMBER COMPANY, LIMITED,

including mills at Auckland, Whangaparoa (two mills), on Freeman's Bay, with freeholds, including lands believed to be auriferous. The cutters Fanny, Willie, Gipsey, and the barges Progress and Waitemata, and several punts, boats, &c., are also taken over by the Company. On the property there are three miles of tramway, with three locomotives, 5 trucks and gear. The town leaseholds have valuable frontages to the main streets. This property is to be taken as a going concern from 31st December last.

In addition to the foregoing, there are several smaller purchases of the Vendors, of which particulars are not yet to hand all of which the Company will take over.

The following is a short summary of the Properties above specified, and their values, as estimated by the Vendors, viz. :—

About 1,563,000,000ft. (as most carefully estimated by competent experts) of SPLENDID KAURI TIMBER, which, at a low valuation of one shilling per 100ft., amounts to say...	£781,500
28 MILLS in full working order, together with Booms, Dams, Tramways and Rolling Stock, Cattle, Horses, and all Water Rights and Appurtenances, valued at, say... ...	£400,000
STOCKS OF TIMBER, ready or nearly ready for market, say...	£217,000
	£1,398,500

This valuation is exclusive of any estimate for the undermentioned Lands, apart from the Timber, viz :—

146,000 ACRES FREEHOLD, AND

257,000 ACRES LEASEHOLD LAND,

having various terms up to 60 years to run, which can be converted into Freehold on payment of a small sum per acre.

Neither is any estimate included in respect of large Gum Deposits to be found on the lands which the Company will acquire, and from which a considerable revenue is expected.

Nor for the large quantities of Kahikatea (White Pine), Rimu, and Totara Timbers, dense forests of which occupy part of the lands the Company is to acquire, and which are of great value.

Part of the property acquired from the
NEW ZEALAND TIMBER COMPANY, Limited,
comprises some
26,476 ACRES OF FREEHOLD, which has a frontage of 8½ miles to the COROMANDEL GOLDFIELD,

and it is generally believed that large and payable gold and silver deposits are to be found thereon.

The Company will also be entitled to all or any contracts made by the vendors, not specified in this prospectus, without further payment than the cost for which the vendors obtained them.

The Vendors are, by the agreement with the Company, to receive 150,000 fully paid-up shares; and the Company is to take the position of the Vendors under the contracts, to recoup them such part of the purchase-money as has already been paid, to provide for payment of the balance, take the legal transfers, &c., and generally carry out the contracts, including certain obligations of the various concerns according to the terms of the contracts, but the Vendors are to receive all discounts to be allowed thereunder for prompt payment.

The Directors are in a position to secure the services for a definite period, at remunerations to be fixed, of Messrs. David Blair, of Melbourne, and George Holdship, of Auckland, and, with their experienced management and intimate knowledge of the trade, as well as the economy and efficiency of a united control of the whole of the properties, the Directors confidently anticipate increasingly satisfactory dividends, and the Vendors guarantee the first four yearly dividends at the rate of ten per cent per annum, either personally or by the guarantee of a Guarantee Company.

The first annual meeting to declare dividends will be held in October, 1889.

The Annual Export of Kauri Timber from New Zealand, according to the latest statistics, is estimated by the Vendors as follows, viz. :—

To Victoria	10,000,000 feet.
New South Wales	10,000,000 "
South Australia ... Western Australia Queensland ... Tasmania	5,000,000 "
Making a yearly export of	25,000,000 feet
The Annual consumption in New Zealand and the adjacent Islands has been carefully estimated at	35,000,000 "
Making an Annual Output of	60,000,000 feet.

The Directors, from their long experience of the trade, are confident that the Company will not only be able to do business to this extent, but that year by year, as the appreciation and demand for kauri increases, a larger business may be expected.

Taking, however, the full extent of the Company's business to be, annually, as above, the profits, after making all necessary deductions for Sinking Fund, &c., are estimated at much more than amply sufficient to pay the guaranteed dividend.

The only charges to be borne by the Company, beyond the expenses of completing the contracts, are the usual charges for brokerage, advertising, and other preliminary expenses.

The Memorandum and Articles of Association, with the various contracts hereinbefore referred to, or certified copies thereof, plans of the properties and the Agreement between the Vendors and the Company, are now lying for inspection at the offices of the Solicitors for the Company in Melbourne and Auckland.

The accompanying extracts indicate the opinions of competent authorities and the growing appreciation of Kauri Timber in the Colonies and Great Britain.

Applications for Shares will be received until the 21st day of July instant, which will be deemed the date of application by the Secretary, at the Temporary Offices of the Company, 22a, Market Buildings, Market-street, Melbourne, and by Mr. George Holdship, at the Offices of the Auckland Timber Company, Limited, in Auckland, and through any of the Brokers of the Company.

Dated at Melbourne, this 7th day of July, 1888.

EXTRACTS REFERRED TO IN PROSPECTUS.

The following extracts are from the evidence given by Mr. Allison Smith, Locomotive Superintendent on the Victorian Railways, before the Forests Commission in April, 1887 :—

Your position, both in New Zealand and here, affords you exceptional opportunities of knowing the value of colonial timbers?—Yes.

Would you be good enough to say if any of the colonial timbers are used in New Zealand?—Nothing else but colonial timber is used.

And what timber principally?—For the framework, both of carriages and waggons, blue gum and ironbark.

Grown where?—On this side. Some of it comes from Tasmania, and some from New South Wales—jarrah and some of the other gums are also used. We do not know the names of them over there so well as they are known here, but all the eucalyptus timbers are used exclusively for the framing of carriages and waggons, and nothing else has been used there for the last twelve years.

You have spoken of the framework; now as to the other parts?—As to the other parts, we use kauri and rimu principally.

Are both these New Zealand timbers?—Yes, both of these are New Zealand timbers.

That applies to the carriages?—Carriages and waggons.

Are the sides of the waggons kauri also?—Yes, both sides, ends and floors.

Do you find that that wood answers as well as the hardwood you have been speaking of for the frames?—No, these timbers are pines, and are not specially suitable for framework. They take the place of the Baltic timber which is used here for similar purposes.

In Victoria?—In Victoria; so that you are bringing interior timber all the way from the Baltic, when you can get New Zealand timber close at hand, and of better quality.

And of what kind of timber are the frameworks of carriages constructed in Victoria?—A large quantity of blackwood has been used, and also large quantities of teakwood imported from Rangoon.

Do you consider that the teak is equal to the hardwood of New Zealand?—There are many advantages in teak. It is a light timber, and easily worked, but it is a very expensive one, and I think that, under the circumstances, the balance would be in favour of the Colonial timber by a very long way.

So that this curious state of things exists at the present time in New Zealand—they are constructing carriages and waggons of Australian timber, when we in Australia are constructing our carriages and waggons of Indian timber?—Not waggons—carriages.

Carriages only?—Yes; but in the waggons a great deal of timber from the Baltic is used.

Notwithstanding that the Australian timber——?—New Zealand timber is more suitable for the sides and ends and floors.

But for the frames?—For the frames, blackwood is used from Tasmania.

I think you do not quite follow me. What I desire to put is this, that you state that in New Zealand they use Australian timber for the frames?—Yes.

And in Victoria they use what timber?—In Victoria they use both blackwood and teak.

But no Australian hardwood?—No, not Australian hardwood as distinguished from blackwood.

So that a country away from Australia is using Australian timber while Australia itself is ignoring it?—Yes.

Is it cheaper?—Yes; and I like it better.

What kinds do you recommend?—Ironbark gives the best results, but if they are well seasoned all the timbers are good.

I suppose you have had some tests applied to enable you to say?—Yes, many tests.

Have you any figures to show the results of those tests?—Yes; I have not got them with me, but I will put in a table.

What quantity of Australian timber do you suppose could be used by the department per annum?—Do you mean used by the department itself, and also used for the department in the shape of contracts?

Quite so.—The quantity is enormous, but I cannot tell you without reference to the storekeeper.

And you know no valid reason why it should not be used?—No; and, in fact, we have already built an experimental car to show that it can be done here. The Commissioner's carriage is built entirely of ironbark and kauri.

And that is a success?—Yes.

And if it were adopted by the Railway Department for sides and floors, a large trade would be developed?—Yes, no doubt it would.

Do those figures apply to Victoria or New Zealand?—Is that the price landed here or the price in New Zealand?—It is hard to say exactly. The mere cost of bringing it over in schooners from the Kaikoura or Auckland is not very great. It is only about five days by schooner.

Does anything of interest strike you about the question of timber?—A point that has often suggested itself to me here is, that I see such enormous quantities of Baltic timber imported into the colony of Victoria when there is really a very much better timber in the shape of pine wood to be got in New Zealand.

A number of the pines which have been grown here have been planted—have you tried them?—No, I have not tried them; but they would not be large enough yet for timber. You see the great value of the kauri pine is that it grows about 120 feet long and perfectly straight; and the trees grow as much as eight feet in thickness in the trunk, and there is not a single knot to be found in the timber at all.

In which part of New Zealand are they to be found?—In the North Island.

If not useful to us, it would be to posterity?—Yes; and it is the most useful timber I have ever come across anywhere. It is useful for house-building, for ship-building, for rolling-stock of every description; in fact, for every purpose you can put timber kauri is useful.

Is it subject to white ants?—I do not think so. We have no white ants in New Zealand, so I do not know whether it is subject to them or not; but I think not. It is full of resin.

Would you recommend the planting of kauri, then, in preference to any other pine?—Yes. I do not know a more useful tree in the world. I might say that the question of New Zealand timber has been written about by Dr. Hector over there; and if it would be any use to you, I might get one of his reports.

In a Report by Messrs. Ransome and Co., on the Practical Tests of Colonial Timbers in connection with the Colonial and Indian Exhibition at Stanley Works, King's-road, Chelsea, October 8th, 1886, the following remarks appear :—

"Kauri (Dammara Australis).—This is undoubtedly the best of all soft woods. During the trials, a door was constructed, casks made, straight and circular mouldings struck, match-boarding prepared, and engineers' patterns built. For all the above purposes the practical men who witnessed the trials agreed that the wood was perfect. It planes across the end of the grain quite as well and smoothly as with it; it stains well, takes a good polish, and would be valuable for bedroom furniture. This timber has been imported regularly into this country, though in rather small quantities, for several years past; the last cargo was sold for from 8s to 8s 6d per cubic foot. The tree, which is found in the province of Auckland only, attains a height of 120ft., with a maximum diameter of 15ft. The plank sent to be experimented on was 9ft. 6in. wide, absolutely clear of knots and shakes, and apparently as true as when first sawn from the log."

In a Report on the Durability of New Zealand Timbers in Constructive Works, prepared for the New Zealand Government by Mr. T. Kirk, F.L.S., it is stated with regard to Kauri :—

"The kauri is the finest tree in New Zealand, and produces the most valuable timber. It is restricted to the northern part of the North Island, and does not occur in any quantity south of a line drawn from Port Waikato to Tauranga, although solitary trees or small groups are found as far south as Maketu on the east coast, and Kawhia on the west. It attains the height of 120 (to 160 ft. and upwards; clean, symmetrical trunks may be seen from 50 to 80 or even 100 ft. in length, varying from 5 to 12 ft. in and upwards in diameter. The timber has acquired a reputation above all New Zealand kinds from its value for masts, spars, and other purposes of naval architecture, which led to its being exported for use in the British dockyards about the commencement of the present century.

"Except for general building purposes, its use has been chiefly confined to the North Island, where there is abundant evidence of its durability for more than 30 years in some of the old mission buildings at the Bay of Islands, the weather-boarding of which exhibits no signs of decay. The same must be said of some of the oldest houses of the City of Auckland, and in other parts of the province, although I have been unable to obtain trustworthy evidence of their existence for more than 25 or 26 years, as in all the towns most of the old buildings have been removed to make way for improvements.

"Kauri has been employed, in conjunction with totara, for the upper timbers of the Auckland Wharf, the largest work of the kind in the colony, with the most satisfactory results. Braces, stringers, and tie-beams are in good condition after being eighteen years in use. The greater portion of the old Wynyard pier was recently removed in the formation of the Waikato railway, when many of the timbers were found sound, although others were much decayed, after fully twenty-three years' service.

"It has been extensively used for bridge timbers with the best results, but I am not aware of any instance of older date than the Auckland Wharf.

"The superiority of kauri to Tasmanian blue gum, under heavy wear and tear, has been demonstrated by the use of both timbers on the Auckland Wharf, when the former was found to last twice as long as the latter, under severe tests.

"At the Tauphi coal mines, sleepers were in good condition after from five to nine years' use. It has been used on the tramways of the Thames goldfield, where it is sound and good after being five years in use. Mr. A. Sheath, inspector of telegraph lines for the North Island, informs me that the kauri kerbing opposite Government House, Auckland, was taken up after being laid eighteen years, and was then perfectly sound.

"It has been employed for tramway rails on the Thames goldfield, and was nearly everywhere found in excellent condition after five years' wear and tear. At the Waihato coal mines it has been employed for the same purpose for nine years, and is still serviceable, which is remarkable, as the rails were cut from small-sized trees growing in the neighbourhood. Totara and rimu rails laid at the same time have perished, the former probably from having been also sawn out of young timber.

"On the Thames goldfield it is used for mine props, struts, and cap-pieces, and maintains its character for durability, although for this purpose tanekaha and black birch are often used on account of their smaller cost.

"Does he strongly recommend the kauri also?—Yes.

"As useful for all purposes that softwood is used for?—

For nearly every purpose that timber can be put to.

"And you think that, with Victorian hardwood and New Zealand kauri, you could build, to the best advantage, all the rolling-stock required by the Victorian Railways?—Yes, I am certain that can be done, for I did it for ten years in New Zealand, so there is no question about it."

The following extract from the Scotch Supplement of the Timber Trades Journal of 5th May, 1888, gives some idea of the prospect of opening up a good trade with the Home markets :—

"The cargo of kauri pine recently landed here ex Aurora from Kaipara, New Zealand, was offered by Messrs. Allison, Cousland, and Co., at their auction sale on 3rd instant, the catalogue also comprising a varied assortment of other wood goods, viz., Quebec pine deals and planks, pitch pine deals, parcels of N. S. black walnut logs, &c. As have been before noticed in your columns, the above arrival of kauri pine is the first full cargo of this wood imported into Clyde, and the result of the public sale has been awaited with considerable interest.

"A large company assembled, and there was a fair amount of competition, the result being that the greater part of the cargo was disposed of, and at good prices, particulars of which are understood."

This Company is formed for the purpose of securing the Sir Garnet P. C., Glengarry P. C., and Highland Mary No. 3 S. B., three distinct mines, on the Caledonia and Highland Mary line of reef at Croydon, and comprising an area of twelve men's ground.

The gentlemen associated with the forming of this Company have every confidence in placing it before their friends and the public as a sound mining investment.

Judging from results already obtained, and the present prospects of each of the mines, there is sufficient stone in the stopes from the 120ft. levels to more than return the subscribed capital, and dividends may be expected from the very first crushing.

The work done in each mine proves the reef to be rich and large, between well-defined walls. Therefore, with judicious and frugal management and the necessary machinery, good results must be obtained.

The subscribed working capital will be expended in providing the necessary machinery for crushing and working the mine, and provide for the raising of a large body of quartz during the completion of the machinery.

No prospecting has to be done in any way. All the dead work necessary will be to open up the mines and prepare the shafts for working the property on a very much larger scale than hitherto.

The reef has been proved highly payable for over 2000ft. along the line, and the Highland Mary No. 2 (which is recognised by everyone as one of the most valuable mines in Queensland) is only 100ft. off our northern boundary, while the Sir Garnet United and the Nos. 3 and 4 Sir Garnet companies are on our southern boundary.

This line of reef is blocked off from end to end, and even extended blocks; but it is expected by many that the block shafts will have to go a great depth before cutting the reef.

CRUSHINGS TO THE END OF APRIL.

Sir Garnet P.C. ...	... 549 tons,	yielded	2019oz. gold
Glengarry P.C. ...	... 156 „	„	437oz. „
No. 3 S.B., Highland Mary, including surface stone...	... 94 „	„	98oz. „
	799 tons.		2554oz. gold.

The last crushing of the Sir Garnet, taken from the lowest level, not included in the above, and just put through the mill, yielded 525oz. per 100 tons.

The Highland Mary No. 1 South yielded 761oz. gold from 343 tons of quartz.

With such unquestionable returns it is deemed unnecessary to give sensational assay results or exhibit parcels of specimen stone.

A map showing the Croydon Goldfield and the workings of this reef can be seen at the office of the Company.

The registered office of the Company to be in Sydney, and a local agent will be appointed at Croydon in the interest of the shareholders in New South Wales and Victoria.

Mr. Webster, whose report appears on this prospectus, has held responsible positions as Mining Manager at Charters Towers for several years, and has several valuable properties under his supervision at Croydon, and great confidence is felt in his statements upon these properties.

REPORT BY ALEX. J. WEBSTER, MINING MANAGER.

Croydon, April 28, 1888.

The Sir Garnet P. C. is situated on the south end of the Highland Mary line of reef, and consists of an area of 200ft. along the line of reef by 400ft. in width. 549 tons already crushed from this claim has yielded 2019oz. of gold, averaging a little over 3oz. 13dwt. to the ton.

Work Done.—An underlie shaft has been sunk a depth, from the outcrop, of 100ft., the reef varying in size from 10in. to 2ft. 6in. in thickness. This claim has not been worked to advantage, through want of proper system in working.

The Glengarry P. C. adjoins the Sir Garnet, and has the same area. The greatest depth obtained on the underlie is 120ft. There was an early crushing of 156 tons, which yielded 437oz. of gold, and another crushing lately of 370 tons, which yielded 765oz. of gold, making, from the two crushings, a total of 1202oz. of gold.

The reef varies from 2ft. to 3ft. 6in. thick of clean quartz.

No. 3 S. B. Highland Mary adjoins the Glengarry, and has also an area of 200ft. by 400ft. This claim has been proved from the surface, by an underlie shaft of 130ft., carrying a splendid reef, measuring from 2ft. to 4ft. in thickness the whole length of the underlie workings. The first crushing of 94 tons yielded 98oz. of gold. 150 tons now awaiting crushing at the mill looks like 2oz.

The total area of the three (3) claims is 600ft. by 400ft. The total quantity of quartz crushed, viz., 1263 tons, has yielded 3844oz. of gold, worth £3 per oz.

Averaging the reef in the three claims, as far as the ground is proved by the underlie workings, the body of quartz will be fully 2ft. 6in.; but say 2ft. thick, and by a depth of 100ft. by 600ft. along the line of reef, which is already proved beyond that depth. From this depth to the surface 6000 tons of quartz should be raised, and average, say, 2oz. to the ton (considerably below the average yield already obtained), this would give 12,000oz. of gold, or £36,000 sterling.

These claims, under the management of an experienced mining manager, should give this output of 6000 tons—£36,000 worth of gold—in 13 or 14 months.

The first and most important work to be done is to erect a substantial brace, and connect it with the main underlie shaft, with a double tram-road from the brace to the lowest depths. This brace and main underlie shaft would command the working of the three (3) claims from peg to peg, and the head work of sinking and driving levels could always be continued without interfering with the other workings.

I can therefore safely recommend the property, and, if worked systematically, the purchase money and expenses should be cleared off in 14 months, from the quartz in the stopes at the present depth.

ALEX. J. WEBSTER,
Mining Manager, Croydon.

A Sydney Syndicate has very recently purchased the Highland Mary No. 2 South (300ft. by 400ft.) for the sum of £12,000. This property is distant only 100ft. from the northern boundary of the No. 3B Highland Mary.

The following is an extract from the Croydon Golden Age, dated February 25th, 1888:—

"The Highland Mary No. 3 s.n.—Some distance from the cap of the reef a straight shaft was sunk which cut the reef at 30ft. The reef has been sunk on the underlie for 27ft., and is now 2ft. 6in. thick in the bottom of the shaft.

"The stone is estimated to yield over 2oz.

"The Glengarry P.C.—The reef in the bottom of the underlie shaft is 2ft. 6in. thick, showing good gold; but to work it more economically, a straight shaft is now being put down at some distance from the cap of the reef.

"The Sir Garnet P.C. is the next claim to the Glengarry, they are on a splendid shoot of stone; and this week completed a crushing of 223oz. from 40 tons of stone. They have another 100 tons to stope of the same quality, which will be at grass in five weeks. At the bottom of the underlie shaft, 100ft. from the cap, the reef is from 2ft. to 2ft. 6in. thick of nearly 7oz. stone."

REPORT BY W. H. BARKER, Esq., CROYDON.

Sydney, May 15, 1888.

The Sir Garnet P.C. and the Glengarry P.C., Gold Mines, Croydon.—I know these properties well; they are undoubtedly two of the best properties on the field—the reef being rich, true, and unbroken, and the walls clean and well defined. When I last inspected the properties there were thousands of tons of stone in sight.

WM. H. YARKER.

REPORT BY P. J. MANGAN.

Croydon, June 11, 1888.

In accordance with your written request, I have made a careful inspection of the mines named in your note, viz., Sir Garnet, P.C. "Glengarry," and No. 3 B South Highland Mary, and beg to submit the following report thereon, together with sketch plan:—

The Sir Garnet, area 200ft. x 400ft. and situated on the Highland Mary line of reef, and should have been known as No. 5 of that celebrated line. This mine has been worked from the outcrop to a depth of nearly 35ft. on the underlie by surface cuttings, from which 378 tons of stone were crushed, yielding 1033oz. of gold. A shaft was then sunk 40ft. from the cutting, which bottomed at a depth of 27ft.; from this straight shaft an underlie was put down a further depth of 25ft., at which point levels were put in north and south, said levels being about 100ft. deep from the outcrop. Nineteen and a half tons of stone crushed from this depth gave a return of 160oz. gold, assay value £3 0s 10d per oz., an increase in quality as in quantity—the surface stone assaying £2 14s 6d. Thirty-five feet from this shaft another shaft has been sunk, owing principally to the fact that the air in the mine was bad, and as a means of ventilation. This shaft is 32ft. deep and is connected by a level with the underlie shaft. The ground has been stoped from this level to within about 12ft. of the surface cutting.

The face of stone, at the time of my visit, averaging 22in., with a clay dig over the reef, which, together with the soft pliable nature of the rock, renders it a very easily worked mine. Five hundred and nine (509) tons have been crushed from this claim for a yield of eighteen hundred and ninety (1890) oz. There is about 40 tons of stone at grass.

The Glengarry area is 200 x 400. This mine has been proved to a depth of 134ft. from the outcrop of the reef, and has 2 shafts and several surface cuttings. In this claim there is a splendid reef all along the low level, averaging 3ft. in width, while in the stopes and towards the surface the quartz is being taken out without having to remove any mullock whatever, and will fully average 2ft. in thickness, and, like the Sir Garnet, having a soft clay seam over the quartz, makes it easy ground to work; and, judging by the size of reef in surface cuttings exposed to view, and the stone in sight in the levels and stopes, the output of stone from this claim should equal that of any mine in Croydon. There has been five hundred and twenty-nine tons of stone crushed from this claim for a yield of thirteen hundred and eighty-seven ounces of gold, and has at present 40 tons of stone at grass.

No 3 B South Highland Mary, 200 x 400 ft., joins the Glengarry and has two shafts—one 12ft. and one 30ft., connected by underlie—sunk to a depth of 120ft. from the outcrop. The stone in this claim, though equal in size to the Glengarry, having an average width of fully 2ft., was comparatively poor on the surface and down to 80ft. on the underlie; since that depth, and down to the present, the stone has improved in quality. One hundred and forty-three tons of stone have been crushed from this claim for a yield of one hundred and fifty-four ounces.

The three mining claims described in the above form a block, in area 600 x 400 ft., having a frontage of 600ft. by a depth of 400ft., and could be worked from one centrally situated shaft, or an underlie shaft from surface would work the whole block of ground. The above-mentioned mining claims I consider to be, taken together, one of the best mining properties on Croydon, and will be at once dividend-paying. The value of this property may be estimated to some extent by the fact of there being blocks and extended blocks on it. At this date there are about 100 tons of ore at grass.

Yours obediently,
P. J. MANGAN,
Mining Manager.

This Company is being formed to acquire the valuable coal property known as portion of the Redhead Estate, about eight miles distant from the Shipping Staiths at the Port of Newcastle, with which it is to be connected by the Government and the Redhead Railway. The property is adjacent to the Burwood, Waratah, Lambton, Newcastle properties, and is in close proximity to the A. A. Company and Wallsend Collieries. The seam proposed to be worked is the Borehole or A. A. Company's seam, the quality of which improves as it is worked towards the Pacific Ocean, as has been demonstrated at the Stockton and Burwood Collieries.

The Vendors have secured a lease for 99 years on terms of 1000 acres at a royalty of 6d per ton. They have also applied for the right to mine under 1280 acres of the foreshore.

Already a considerable sum has been spent in developing this property, in sinking a shaft 14ft. in diameter, in a suitable position, to a depth of 209ft., for a working or air-shaft, as may be determined; and putting down a series of bores to prove the various coal seams; and so confident are the present proprietors of the bona-fide character of the undertaking that they do not ask any cash, but are content to take the whole of their interest in shares.

A report upon the value of the various seams and value of the property has been obtained from Dr. Robertson, F.G.S., F.R.G.S. In the report also of the Government Geologist of New South Wales, C. S. Wilkinson, F.G.S., the following occurs:—"Considering the immense deposits of marketable coal which this estate contains, and the advantages afforded either for the construction of a line of railway for the conveyance of the coal to the Government shipping cranes at the port of Newcastle, or for the shipment at Lake Macquarie when the improvements to the entrance have been effected, there can be no doubt that this will become one of the most valuable coal-mining properties in the colony."

This property possesses the following advantages:—

1st. Four proved seams as per results of the boring. It is, however, at present proposed to work the Borehole seam only.

2nd. Easy access to the Government shipping cranes, thus causing the Government charges for traction and shipping to come within 10d per ton as against the charge of 1s 3d paid by other collieries, being a saving of 5d per ton.

3rd.—The exceptionally low royalty of 6d per ton, as against 11d and 1s per ton paid by other leading collieries, the two items of saving on the low traction and royalty rates will mean on an output of 150,000 tons per annum, a saving equal to £5625 per annum, or equal to a dividend of nearly 5 per cent. on the capital of the Company.

4th.—Cheap cost of working and getting the coal. The cost of working and getting, with an output of 150,000 tons per annum, is estimated at, including royalty, large coal at 7s 2d, and small coal at 2s 10d per ton. Taking an output of 150,000 tons per annum, consisting of—

112,500 tons large, selling at 11s ...	£61,875
37,500 tons small, selling at 6s ...	11,250
		£73,125
The cost of—
112,500 tons large, 7s. 2d. ...	£40,312 10 0
37,500 tons small, 2s 10d. ...	5,312 10 0
		45,625
Profit for twelve months' work ...		£27,500

This would give a return of 22½ per cent. on the capital of the Company.

The Provisional Directors and their friends have applied for 40,000 contributing shares.

A most favourable arrangement has been made by which in consideration of the payment by this Company of a fixed sum of £15,000, to cover cost of construction and maintenance of railway line, "the right of running their coal free on the Redhead line of railway is secured for the whole term of 99 years," thus placing this Company in an exceptionally advantageous position as compared with other collieries.

The vendors agree to sell the lease and improvements for 60,000 paid-up ordinary shares. A contract, dated June 27th, 1888, has been entered into between Charles Frederick Stokes and Ayrault Burns of the one part, and the Redhead Company of the other part, providing for the leasing of the property on the above terms.

There are no other contracts entered into by the Company.

Applications for shares should be made on the form accompanying this prospectus, and sent with the deposit to the Company's brokers. In any case where no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned to the applicant in full, and when the number of shares allotted is less than the number applied, the surplus will be credited in reduction of the amount payable on the shares allotted.

If the shares are not taken up, the application money will be returned in full.

The shares will be allotted as far as practicable in the order of application.

The cost of floating, brokerage, and legal expenses will be a first charge on the assets of the Company.

Prospectuses and forms of application can be obtained at the office of the broker.

The object of this Company is to acquire and carry on the extensive and prosperous Roller Milling business of Henry Hayes, Esq., now well-known as the Riverine Roller Flour Mills, Wagga Wagga.

The proprietor has been induced to form this business into a Company, with a view to a necessary extension of operations in milling, and making advances against grain, the agricultural area in the district of Wagga Wagga extending so rapidly as to necessitate the operations of a Company such as that proposed, to successfully meet the increasing supply.

The property to be taken over by the Company comprises Hayes' Riverine Patent Steel Roller Mills, standing on two acres of freehold land, at the junction of Baylis and Edward streets, Wagga Wagga, and in close proximity to the railway station, from which a line of rails to the mills will shortly be laid down.

The mill buildings are extensive, and substantially built of brick, on the designs of the famous Roller Milling Manufacturer, Henry Simons, of Buda Pesth and Manchester, for the reception of his machinery, which is on the well-known Austro-Hungarian system of gradual reduction.

The machinery was erected under the personal supervision of Mr. E. C. Elliott, the colonial representative of Mr. H. Simons, the whole of the buildings having been specially constructed with a view to perfect economy in working.

The store adjoining the mill is a large two-storied brick building, fitted with every modern appliance, and has a storage capacity of 25,000 bushels of grain; in addition to which capacious sheds have been erected, with a further capacity of 100,000 bushels.

The wheat-cleaning machinery is distinct from the mill, and is one of the most complete plants in the colony, embodying the latest and most improved types of English and American manufacture, and with a capacity of 4400 bushels of wheat in 24 hours.

The engine power has been supplied by Messrs. Ruston, Proctor, and Co., of Lincoln, England.

The offices are situated in a separate brick building erected for that purpose, and have every convenience necessary, including telephonic communication with all the business centres.

The whole of the buildings are lighted by electricity.

With the property will also be taken over the goodwill of the business, and all the rolling stock, plant, lorries, drays, and horses connected with it.

The vendor having purchased 240,000 bushels of prime wheat early in the season, offers the Company the opportunity of purchase at cost price, thus at once insuring a large profit and the benefit of a prospective rise in grain. This may be considered a very important asset to the Company, and it also assures the mill a continuous run till the next season's wheat becomes available.

The vendor does not require immediate settlement for the wheat, but will take payment as it is manufactured into flour.

This business is, without question, one of the most successful and lucrative in the colony, and the reputation the vendor has obtained for his flour is well now established.

The Riverine Roller Mill flour ranks as a top brand, and commands the highest price in the Sydney market.

The consistency of colour and strength for which this flour has become famous is not only due to perfection of machinery, but to the fact that the mill has only dealt with wheat produced in this district, which for climate and soil has proved itself adapted for the production of the best wheat known, and has never used foreign and inferior grain.

The demand for the Riverine Roller Mill flour in Sydney and the locality has always exceeded the supply, and although the mill has been running night and day for the past twelve months, there is no flour at present in stock.

The mill is now turning out weekly 216 tons of fine flour, known as "The Cream of Snow Brand."

A commodious building, containing horizontal engine and boiler, occupied by an Ice Company at a high rental, will also be taken over by the Company.

The price to be paid by the Company for the entire property and business, as a going concern, is £25,000 in cash and 30,000 shares paid up to 10s.

As a proof of his confidence in the prosperity of the business under the management of the Company, the Vendor guarantees 10 per cent. per annum on the paid-up capital for a period of three years, and will deposit 20,000 shares, paid up to 10s, as security for the fulfilment of this guarantee.

The net profit on last year's operations, £10,719, shows 20 per cent. on the capital invested.

The freehold buildings and machinery have been valued by Messrs. E. C. Elliott and Co., milling engineers, the total of these values being £30,000.

The Vendors agree not to connect himself with the milling industry in this district for a period of 12 years, and will enter into an agreement with the Company to act as Managing Director for three years, at a salary to be fixed by the Directors.

The Provisional Directors feel sanguine that the whole of the subscribed capital will be returned to the Shareholders within six years.

The Vendor will pay all charges of Advertising, Printing, and Brokerage.

Immediate application is necessary, as already more than three-fourth of the shares have been applied for.

THE SHARE LIST WILL CLOSE ON SATURDAY, 7th JULY.

The Property now placed before the public consists of three 4-acre gold leases, situated at Little River, near Braidwood, for which the present proprietors have given £2200 cash, and 3000 fully paid-up shares. But so satisfied are they of the genuineness of the mine that they have preferred to take paid-up shares in the proposed company in lieu of cash.

The Shares offered to the public are for the purpose of procuring proper machinery. The mine has up to the present paid more than working expenses, although stone has been carted a distance of 23 miles to Forsyth's Mill, Bell's Creek, where 143 tons gave the handsome return of 197oz. of free gold. In this the pyrites were not treated. Expense of carting has been so great that the present proprietors have determined to erect machinery nearer the mine, and for that reason have purchased the right to a water-race exerting 20 h.p.

It is not considered that more than four shillings per share will be called up, as this will be ample for machinery.

The following returns will show quantity of gold contained in pyrites:—Four tons of stone crushed at battery gave 16½oz. of gold; while following is the result of three tons of stone sent to Melbourne and Sydney:—

20cwt. 0qr. 0lb. treated at Sydney Royal Mint gave 5oz. 10dwt. of standard gold.
20cwt. 2qr. 0lb. treated by A. Parker and Co., Melbourne, gave 4oz. 2dwt. 12gr. of standard gold.
20cwt. 2qr. 0lb. treated by Parks and Lacy, Sydney, gave 5oz. 5dwt. 18gr. of standard gold.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF THE DAY DAWN GOLD-MINE, BRAIDWOOD.

Dear Sirs,—

As requested, I visited your property known as the "Day Dawn," Little River, Braidwood, and find a shaft has been sunk 55 feet, with well-defined reef about 2 feet 6 inches wide at bottom. The reef trends in N.E. by S.W. direction, and is traceable about 300 feet along surface, and as far as I could see embraces two classes of stone. On the hanging wall side is about 12 inches of really splendid stone, and between this vein and footwall is 3 inches of fluking, which also carries good gold. The remainder I also assayed, with result of 2oz. 18dwt. to the ton. It is evident the hanging wall side of the reef is the richest, as much more free gold is visible. I "dollied" stone along course of reef, and obtained in all cases payable prospects. About 150ft. from this shaft a drive has been put in the side of the hill, from which 3 tons of stone gave a return of 16dwt. free gold to the ton. There is a considerable quantity of pyrites in this stone, from which the gold would not have been saved in the crushing referred to. As I am satisfied that rich gold is carried in all the pyrites, no battery would be complete without concentrating appliances. The water-race purchased by you would exert a power equal to about 20 h.p., the present wheel being only about 12 h.p., and driving a small Huntingdon roller battery and rock breaker. This machinery is altogether unequal to requirements, being without any of the usual fittings. I need hardly point out the great advantage of this race, affording as it will all the necessary power for driving the machinery.

I may sum up my account of my visit by saying that this mine has one of the best shows I have seen for many years, and is worthy of the expenditure of whatever money is required to open it up thoroughly. Instead of sinking small shafts like those I saw (and I may mention that mining has been carried on in a very crude fashion) a main shaft should be sunk to cut the lode at about 150ft., with view to driving at different levels. As the reef dips 1 in 7 only, it will be seen that this course is advisable. This could be done while stone is being taken from present levels.

The kind country and the facility thus afforded for easy sinking, without even the use of powder, is another very important element towards the success of this mine.

(Signed) ISAAC GRANT, Mining Expert.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF THE DAY DAWN GOLD MINE, BRAIDWOOD.

Gentlemen,—

In accordance with your instructions I visited the Day Dawn Reef, Little River, about ten miles from Braidwood. The property consists of three four-acre leases, embracing 1900ft. on the line of reef, which runs in a north-easterly direction, underlaying, I should judge, about 1 in 10 westerly in soft country. The average width of the reef is from 14in. at 50ft. level to 2ft. 3in. at 80ft. level.

Work Done.—A prospecting shaft has been sunk to a depth of 45ft., having good stone at bottom, whilst a main working shaft is now being put down and a level put in at 80ft., cutting the reef and showing splendid stone, averaging about 1½oz. free gold, and as much as 4oz. more in the pyrites. For the 50ft. between these shafts equally rich stone can be traced, and this alone shows several hundred tons of stone, averaging, I found, about 1½oz. free gold and from 3oz. to 4oz. in the pyrites. An excellent water-race on the Little River, with unfailing supply of water, has been secured, and works the small mill erected. This mill is incomplete, and a much larger one, with latest appliances, should be erected, as the pyrites are rich in gold. No plant would be complete without concentrating apparatus.

The quantity of stone in sight and the great richness of the reef compels me to express the opinion that this mine will yield more than ordinary returns on the amount of capital invested.

Yours truly,
(Signed) CHARLES COLBERT,
Mining Manager.

This Company is being formed for the purpose of reconstructing the present Maryville Colliery Company, Limited, under an agreement which is proposed to be made between W. B. Bradley, of the first part; the present Maryville Colliery Company, Limited, of the second part; the Shareholders of the present Maryville Colliery Company, Limited, of the third part; and a Trustee for the New Company, of the fourth part; and a draft of which agreement can be seen at the office of the New Company's Solicitors, Pitt and Bond streets, Sydney.

The principal reasons and purposes for which the present Maryville Colliery Company, Limited, is being reconstructed, are as follows:—

The sum of £10,500, which was produced by the issue of 30,000 Shares in the old Company, having been found inadequate for the development of the property, private capital had to be obtained to complete the satisfactory opening out of the mine. It is now desired to liquidate this encumbrance by an issue of 30,000 Contributing Shares as above; but as the Directors of the old Company have been advised that the recent English case, in re the Almada and Tirito Company, has decided that new Shares issued by way of increase of capital cannot be issued as either wholly or partly paid-up, but that section 57 of the Companies Act only provides for the issue of fully paid up shares, for a consideration other than cash; and that the only way of doing so is by reconstructing the Company, it has been decided to reconstruct the old Company by the formation of a new Company on the terms above mentioned—terms which, considering the present profitable working of the Colliery, and the briskness of the coal trade, offer extraordinary inducement to investors, more especially as the Colliery is thoroughly equipped, and the weekly profit on the coal raised will be free of any charge outside of general working expenses.

The sum required to be liquidated, subject to the fluctuations of the account current, is £14,000, which under the before mentioned draft agreement, may be arranged for by instalments ranging over a period of 18 months.

The property consists of an area comprising 97 acres, only four of which have so far been worked, and the lease is current to the year 1904, subject to a royalty of 1s per ton on large coal and 4d per ton on small, together with £5 per acre per annum for any surface lands used by the Company.

The colliery is now in efficient working order, having good main and air shafts, and other workings, in strict accordance with the Mining Act regulations. An average weekly output can now be raised, which, with economical working, will leave a profit of £125 weekly, or £6500 per annum, without taking into consideration the increase in the output as the underground workings extend.

A seam of splendid coal, 9ft. 11in. thick, is now being worked towards the Wickham and Bullock Island side, and on the western boundary the Ferndale Colliery is working profitably seams of 12ft. thick, proving incontestably the extent of the Company's coal area.

Herewith is the report of Mr. John Thomas, Coal Viewer for the Victorian Government, also a local plan of the property, from which latter it will be seen that the Maryville Colliery adjoins several of the best coal mines in the Newcastle district.

REPORT ON THE MARYVILLE COLLIERY.

This Colliery is situated at Wickham, near the city of Newcastle, in the county of Northumberland, and within 500 or 600 yards of the Bullock Island hydraulic cranes.

I took a section of the seam at the face of No. 1 Bord, in H heading, with the following results:—

COAL BANDS.

—	Feet.	Inches.	Feet.	Inches.
Roof Shale ...	...	...	...	...	6ft. of solid coal, to be worked by a system known as Ripping Back.
Top Coal ...	6	0	...	...
Morgan ...	—	...	2	0
Little Tops ...	1	0	...	...	Present working face on Little Tops and Bottom Coal.
Jerry ...	—	...	...	10
Bottom Coal ...	3	8	—	...
Floor — hard sandstone ...	...	...	...	...
	10	8	2	10	13—6

Thus we have in 13ft. 6in. of ground, 10ft. 8in. of excellent coal.

The rippings, after having driven the several bords and headings to their respective distances or boundaries, as the case may be, leave a magnificent bed of coal, 6ft. in thickness in one coal, to bring back.

The section in the air-shaft shows a thicker bed of coal than at the respective faces in the several bords I visited, although the manager agrees with me that the section given is a fair average of the coal now being worked. I would not recommend the pillars to be worked without due precaution being taken by the management, and this, I may add, will have to be left to the skill, penetration, and good judgment of the mining manager in charge of the underground workings, in order to ascertain the quality of the roof, and its adaptability for working with safety to property and the men's lives. The yield per acre of this coal, including the rippings, will equal fully 15,000 tons per acre, so that a good area remains to be wrought of very excellent coal, being, as most people are aware, a continuation of the celebrated Borehole seam, or No. 5, in the upper carboniferous series of the Newcastle coal basin, and is identical with the coal now worked at Minmi, Co-operative, Wallsend, Old Lambton, New Lambton, Waratah, Hetton, Ferndale, Wickham and Bullock Island, A. A. Company, Newcastle, and Burwood Collieries.

In proceeding north-west and west from the present faces, a roll or pinch-up may be occasionally expected, but I do not think it of much importance. The rolling-stock, as far as it goes, appears in good repair, but in order to ensure success and a larger output, additional waggons will be required. Additional skips will also be required for underground purposes.

It should be borne in mind that good railway trucks are always in demand by the various colliery owners in the district at a good rental. The demand for the Borehole seam at present is something enormous, and as a common sequence a fair share of the trade must fall to the lot of Maryville. It is also a proverbially known fact that the Borehole small yields a greater profit at all the collieries than the round screened coal.

The fracture in the coal appears to lie about parallel with the cleavage in the floor, i.e., nearly horizontal, and I fail to observe any of that vertical fracture in the coal which is so indicative of brittleness, and which was the case near the winding shaft; so that upon the whole the prospects before the shareholders appear good.

The output at present (having so recently put down the air shaft, and effected the intersection with the main shaft) is about sixty tons per day, exclusive of small coal, and, I may add, daily increasing, so that I see no difficulty, within a short space of time, of working three to four hundred tons per day, ex small, for many years to come, provided additional rolling-stock be at once provided.

JOHN THOMAS,
Mining Engineer and Coal Viewer for the Victorian Government.
Newcastle, N. S. W., May 5, 1888.

Mr. Thomas' suggestions as to the increase of rolling-stock have been fully acted upon since the date of his report, and the mine, as before stated, is now thoroughly equipped.

Since issuing the prospectus of the Great Greta Coal Company, Limited, negotiations have taken place between the owners of the Greta Colliery and the directors of the Great Greta Coal Company, Limited, resulting in the purchase of the Greta Colliery Leases, containing an area of 680 acres, including sundry rights associated with it, and the whole of their existing contracts for coal, &c., so that this company will at once possess an active, going, and profitable property, which is now yielding a handsome profit; and as the same management, rolling stock, railway, and plant, will serve to work the two companies united, a large saving will thereby be made; and as the directors of the Great Greta Colliery have agreed to amalgamate with the Greta Colliery now working, and have arranged to form the associated collieries into one company under the name of the "Greta Coal Company, Limited," and on account of the large quantity of plant at the Greta Colliery available, are enabled to work the two collieries for less capital than was originally intended for the Great Greta Company alone, the shareholders will thereby secure one of the most valuable and largest coal properties in New South Wales.

The present owners of the properties have agreed to transfer their mineral rights over the Great Greta Estates, comprising an area of 3120 acres, which are held under lease for 99 years at the small royalty of 6d per ton for large and 3d per ton for small coal, together with their agreement for the purchase of Greta Colliery, and have agreed to accept as consideration for the transfer 15,000 paid-up shares, and 30,000 paid up to £1 and liable for £1, and have also agreed to purchase 15,000 contributing shares, liable for £2, in the Greta Coal Company, Limited; the new Company taking over the contract for the purchase of Greta, with all plant, contracts, railway, rolling stock—including 196 waggons and 325 skips, winding engines, buildings, &c.—at cost price. The operations of the Company are in full swing, there being 11 ships now loading with Greta coal for foreign ports in Newcastle harbour, and contracts in hand for the whole output for the next four months.

The present output of the Greta Colliery is very large, and it is confidently anticipated that the output will be increased in three months, by working an additional shift, to 200,000 tons per annum, which will add considerably to the profits. It is proposed to erect a simple machine, which will make the small coal marketable, and will enable the company to have about 30,000 tons of nuts and small coal for sale per annum, the sale of which has been neglected in the past, and will be a great additional source of profit.

The demand for Greta coal is a constantly increasing one, the great proof of which is that during the temporary depression last year in the coal trade, Greta Colliery was unable to keep pace with its orders, and lost no time. There are now large contracts for coal for steamboat companies, gas, railways, and domestic purposes, and thirty-three (33) ships are now under charter from different ports to load with Greta coal. Orders for 70,000 tons are at present in hand.

It is estimated that the profits from the colliery, with an output of 200,000 tons large and 30,000 tons small, will, at the present rates, give a dividend of over 15 per cent., even if it is all called up, viz., £150,000 (but it is not anticipated that the capital will exceed £100,000 for some time, as the capabilities of the property will only be gradually extended), calculated from the date of registration of the company, and this without calculating any output and profit resulting from the working of the 3120 acres above referred to, which it is proposed to develop without delay.

The capital will amply provide for the proper working of both properties, as the existing railway will simply require extension into the Greta Coal Company's property, and the existing rolling stock increased progressively as required. When the company is formed, active operations will be commenced on the whole of its ground, so as to obtain as quickly as possible as large an output as is practicable. When this position is arrived at, the output of the company's colliery will be capable of supplying a trade of 400,000 tons per annum, at a minimum cost for management, and the dividend-paying power of the Company will be only limited by the demand which is, at present very great, Greta coal daily gaining its true place as the nearest approach to the best English coals. The rolling stock of the Greta Colliery will be taken over as hereinbefore provided for, and paid for by this company, which at present is producing and carrying to Newcastle for shipment at the rate of 140,000 tons per annum, yielding the annual profit as above stated.

The Company is formed to acquire and work the valuable coal properties situated at Greta, on the Great Northern Railway, Newcastle, as per locality plan annexed, and comprises 3120 acres, known as the Great Greta Coal Company's Estate, which is held under lease of 6d per ton for a period of 99 years, and 680 acres, known as the celebrated Greta Colliery, making a total of about 3800 acres, containing nearly three times as much marketable coal per acre as any coalfield in Newcastle, together with the whole of the plant, rolling-stock (including railway, 196 waggons, skips, boiler engines), pumping machinery, winding plant, houses, miners' cottages, horses, and everything in complete working order, which enables this most successful colliery to carry on its trade.

ESTIMATION OF PROFITS.

The following estimate is based on an output of 200,000 tons of large coal, and 30,000 tons of small coal, which the present Greta Colliery, with improved haulage, is capable of supplying. When the Company's new estate is developed the output can be increased to nearly double, and the cost will be considerably less per ton.

Output—200,000 tons large coal...		£14,750 0 0
„ 30,000 tons small coal at 6s ...	£5,000 0 0
Less royalty and traction contingencies, 2s 10d ...	4,250 0 0
		4,750 0 0
		£19,500 0 0

The capital called to enable these results to be accomplished is expected not to exceed £125,000; so that, when this output is arrived at it is estimated that the dividends will be very large, without taking into the calculation the proposed development of the Company's new estate, from which the coal can be very cheaply worked.

THE KIDNEYS.

SYMPTOMS:
PAINS IN LOINS,
HIGH COLOURED OR COLOURLESS URINE,
INCONTINENCE,
FEVER IN THE PARTS.

Thousands of people have taken bottle after bottle of medicine, under the impression that they were suffering from Bright's Disease, or some other Kidney malady. A correct diagnosis or examination, in nine cases out of ten, would demonstrate the fact that the trouble lay in the Liver, the Stomach, or the Blood. This delusion is consequent upon the varied, startling, or alarming advertisements bearing upon Kidney Disease, which, in embracing the symptoms of Dyspepsia and Liver and Blood complaints proper, are regarded by thousands as proof positive that they, too, have fallen victims to Bright's Disease, or some other form of Kidney affections. In ninety-nine cases out of every hundred, when you experience the symptoms found at the head of this article, you will find that Impure Blood, Dyspepsia, and Biliousness are the fathers of the symptoms; and any remedy that will give tone and healthful action to those organs will remove the last vestige of Kidney Disease. In a large majority of cases the Kidneys suffer purely from sympathy, as do other organs. Purify the blood, rouse the torpid Liver to action, strengthen the Stomach, and it will invariably disperse all traces of Kidney Disease. It is a proven and substantial fact that, with a healthy Stomach and Liver, no such thing as Kidney Complaint was ever known.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

LONDON, June 1.

The House of Commons re-assembled yesterday, after the Whitsuntide recess, which had been spread over the Derby Day, so that a formal adjournment over that day had been avoided, and the usual debate and division thereon evaded. Only about one-third of the members have as yet returned to town, and it will be next week before the plans of campaign for the remainder of the session begin to take form. Already speculation is rife as to the chances of getting the County Government Bill through Parliament this session without throwing almost everything else overboard, unless other things be saved by an autumn session. Four days a week are to be devoted to the bill in committee—Monday and Thursday evenings and Tuesday and Friday mornings, from 2 to 7, private members getting from 9 to 1 a.m., so that adjournment at midnight becomes impossible two nights out of four if private members can keep a house till 1. The notices of amendments to the bill are formidable in number. The licensing clauses will be fiercely debated if the Government cling to the doctrine of compensation for withdrawal, unless the trade itself finds the money; and even that solution is not quite agreeable to the customers of publichouses, who imagine that it will be they who will pay in the long run. The Government will probably avail themselves of the legal decision that there is no vested interest in renewal to modify their proposals in such a way as to ward off temperance opposition without offending the trade. The creation of county aldermen is regarded as another blot in the bill, and this may ultimately be found to be deck cargo to be thrown over under stress of weather.

The first evening after the holidays was, as usual, devoted to Committee of Supply, and was spent chiefly upon the Foreign office vote. A good deal of time was devoted to Samoa, and some of the most significant utterances in the debate were warnings to the Government that the time had arrived when the interests of the colonies could not be ignored, and when, if we wished to retain their allegiance, we must adopt an Imperial policy as distinct from an European policy determined by our English relations. One of the apostles of this doctrine is Mr. Wm. M'Arthur, nephew of the late Alderman Sir W. M'Arthur, and son of Mr. A. M'Arthur, member for Leicester. He is a young man of considerable ability, confidence, and promise. Unfortunately, he has his father's weakness of voice, which diminishes his effectiveness as a speaker; but, notwithstanding this drawback, he commands the ear of the House, and bids fair to become known as "the member for Australia" on the Liberal side.

Colonel King-Harman has returned from the Cape much better in health for his holiday, and we are now waiting to see whether he will verify the current gossip that he means to resign his post as Assistant Parliamentary Secretary for Ireland. If he does he ought to do so either to-night or to-morrow, because the bill providing a salary for the office which he holds comes on for a further stage on Monday night, and the Irish members persist in their determination to fight it inch by inch. But, inasmuch as their hostility is directed more against the holder of the office than the post itself, it is quite possible that the announcement of the gallant colonel's resignation might mitigate the force of their opposition and induce them to let the measure pass quietly. However, in expectation of the fight over it, Mr. Parnell has issued an urgent whip to his followers to be in their places on Monday night. One effect of the new rules of the House of Commons has been to lessen the interest of the Irish members in its proceedings, and the difficulty now placed in the way of creating disturbances has led many of them to absent themselves from attendance. Just before the Whitsuntide holidays there were as many as 20 of Mr. Parnell's followers who had pleaded the stringency of the new rules of procedure as an excuse for remaining in Ireland and looking after their own affairs, instead of attending to those of the nation. If the Parnellite party had been able to poll their full strength on the occasion of the division on Mr. Heneage's amendment to the King-Harman Salary Bill, the Ministry would have been defeated, and Mr. Parnell hopes to bring about this result on Monday. He will have the assistance of a formidable ally in the person of Lord Randolph Churchill, who has announced his intention of opposing the measure. Mr. Balfour has unmistakably made a blunder over the measure. The Conservatives keenly regret that he did not appoint Colonel King-Harman to one of the junior lordships of the Treasury, in which case he would have had his thousand pounds a year salary, and the duties of assistant Parliamentary Irish Secretary might have been transferred to him without Parliament being asked to vote any money on his account.

It strikes one as being a reflection upon Mr. Chamberlain's political astuteness that he should be seeking to identify himself so closely as he is doing with a man like Lord Randolph Churchill. The right hon. member for Birmingham has obtained the assistance of the noble member for Paddington in connection with his pet scheme for the extension of local government in Ireland, and the two are going to combine to force it on Lord Salisbury's acceptance. How they propose to effect this is not clear. A man's influence with the Government depends on the strength of his following in Parliament. Lord Randolph Churchill absolutely has no following in the House of Commons, and Mr. Chamberlain's party does not number certainly more than a dozen. Any action which the Government may take in the direction of Irish affairs will depend far more upon the initiative of Lord Hartington than upon that of Mr. Chamberlain; and if the noble marquis does not approve of the hand of the Ministry being forced, the efforts of Lord Randolph and Mr. Chamberlain will be attended with little effect. Mr. Chamberlain seems to have been more annoyed than a philosophical statesman ought to be at the coldness of the reception accorded to the scheme of local government for Ireland which was enunciated in the columns of the Birmingham Daily Post a week ago. In his speech at Birmingham on Monday he dwelt at great length upon this plan, and, though he did not avow his authorship of it, the loving care with which he touched upon its details is sufficient, if anything were needed, to stamp him as its originator. But his proposal has had quite as much attention bestowed upon it as it deserves. The Irish Nationalists are perfectly frank on the point. They admit that it would go a long way towards satisfying their material needs; and, so far, they would accept it gratefully, but it would do nothing in the way of gratifying their sentimental aspirations, and therefore they would only take it as an instalment of what they consider is their due. The Ministerial attitude is, that the present session shall be devoted to English business, and that it is as yet too soon to disclose their future policy with regard to Ireland. Such being the case, it is not easy to see what Mr. Chamberlain can hope to gain by identifying himself with Lord Randolph Churchill in the task of annoying the Government.

All classes of the English people, from the Queen and Prince of Wales downwards, are watching with the greatest anxiety the state of Mr. Bright's health. There is no English statesman who is more widely popular. Mr. Gladstone has his 50 years of Parliamentary life to point to, but Mr. Bright was known as the Tribune of the People and the Father of Free Trade when Mr. Gladstone's reputation was only that of a promising statesman. Of late Mr. Bright has lived a very quiet life, and has, I believe, never once spoken in the present House of Commons. He has been tolerably regular in his attendances at St. Stephen's—that is to say, he has gone down to the House just to show himself, but has rarely, for reasons I have previously alluded to, spent any time actually in the Legislative Chamber. Most of his time while in London is passed at the Reform Club, where he amuses himself by playing at billiards with his old friends, and occasionally giving a little good advice to Mr. Buckle, the brilliant young editor of the Times. For about 20 years he has been a teetotaller, but he always relishes a mild cigar. In spite of his severance from the bulk of the Liberal party he has lost none of his former friends, and it is an understood thing amongst the Gladstonians that he is to be allowed to declaim to any extent on the immorality of a Home Rule policy without provoking a reply.

Another prominent Unionist politician whose condition has been causing some anxiety is Lord Hartington. The noble marquis has been suffering severely from want of sleep, but it is understood that he has derived considerable benefit from the change of air and scenery which he has obtained during the excess.

The Royal Family use the telegraph wire pretty freely. It is said that during the Queen's recent stay in Florence her Majesty's bill for telegrams despatched on private business alone amounted to upwards of £300. This sum, however, would to a great extent be accounted for by the telegrams which the Queen was in the habit of sending with regard to the critical condition of the Emperor of Germany.

The Messageries steamer Caledonien, which starts for Australia at the end of this month, will be the last vessel of that line to call at Mauritius. Henceforward the Messageries steamers will go to the Seychelles Islands, and thence direct to Adelaide. The Seychelles Company have just purchased a large coaling station in the Seychelles Group from the British Admiralty.

It is said that Mme. Melba, the Australian prima donna, who is now singing with such eclat at Covent Garden Theatre, two years ago consulted some of the leaders of the musical world in London as to the chances of success she would have on the operatic stage. These gentlemen, amongst whom was Sir Arthur Sullivan, told her that, although her voice was very good for an amateur, she would never do well in a professional capacity. But within two years of that forecast Mme. Melba had earned laurels on the operatic stage both in Brussels and London.

Mr. Chamberlain is becoming more popular amongst what are called "smart" people every day. He has accepted an invitation to join a party for Ascot races which is being made up by Lady Mandeville, wife of Lord Mandeville, better known as "Kim," the eldest son and heir of the Duke of Manchester. Lady Mandeville is an American lady.

A committee of noblemen and gentlemen has been formed to collect subscriptions for a fund to raise a statue to the Prince of Wales in the Royal School of Music, in commemoration of his Royal Highness's silver wedding. Count Gleichen is to be the sculptor.

Much speculation exists in colonial circles as to the nominations for the colonial Governorships which will shortly fall vacant. But the Colonial Office is keeping its secrets so well, that, except Mr. Raikes, the Postmaster-General, and Sir John Gorst are both supposed to be in the running, no hint of its intentions has been allowed to escape. It is, however, believed that there will be no opening in New Zealand; but that Sir W. Jervois will be reappointed for a further term in that colony. It is also understood that Sir John Pope Hennessy will not return to Mauritius. He has served long enough to entitle him to a pension; and he means to claim the same, and retire from the diplomatic world, though he is not unlikely to come forward in the realm of politics.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal—whose real name is Grimston—have sent their son to Harrow—where he is living in the same house as the son of Lord Randolph Churchill. The two boys are good friends, and both exhibit great power of memory and ability in recitation. Master Grimston is very fond of Shakespeare, while Master Churchill affects Byron.

The proposal by the University of Cambridge to confer the dignity of LL.D., or honoris causa, on Lord Randolph Churchill is exciting manifestations of disapprobation on the part of many persons connected with that seat of learning. The idea originated in this way. The Senate intend to confer the degree on Prince Albert Victor, and it is usual, when a Royal personage receives this distinction, to select a few prominent individuals to share it with him. An intimation was made to the Senate that it would be agreeable to the Prince of Wales that Lord Randolph Churchill and Earl Roseberry should be amongst those thus chosen, and the University authorities were forced to comply with this hint. The Prince of Wales' selection of Lord Randolph creates surprise because the noble lord and the heir apparent had a rather stormy scene some years ago at the time of the scandal concerning the Duke of Marlborough—then Marquis of Blandford—and the Countess of Aylesford. Lord Randolph intimated pretty plainly that he considered the Prince not wholly free from responsibility for the bad ways into which his elder brother had fallen; and since that occasion the noble lord has been believed to be in the black books of Marlborough House.

It is interesting to observe how completely Royal Oak Day has passed out of public notice, so far, at least, as London is concerned. Not many years ago every person who laid claim to loyalty and respectability sported a sprig of oak on May 29th, but there were no signs of the observance of this custom last Tuesday. Primrose Day would appear to have completely eclipsed Royal Oak Day as a festival of popular observance.

Mr. W. H. Mallock, author of "Is Life Worth Living?" is preparing a melodrama for the stage. This is a distinctly new departure, for no one suspected the cynical, philosophical Mr. Mallock, who, by the way, is one of the leader writers on the Standard, of any aspirations in the direction of dramatic authorship.

Strawberry Hill, the residence of Horace Walpole in the last century, and which, up to a few years ago, was famous in the present century as the abode of Frances, Countess of Waldegrave, who exercised her splendid hospitalities there, is about to be sold.

It is becoming the fashion for ladies attending concerts and other places of evening amusement, to take knitting or crochet work with them, after the custom of our grandmothers.

Dr. Joseph Parker, the well-known Nonconformist preacher, proposes to lead the City Temple to the Salvation Army for some of their services. Dr. Parker is nothing if not eccentric.

An attempt is being made to introduce naphtha launches on the Thames instead of steam launches. They are cleaner and easier to work, but the smell of the naphtha is perceptible for a long distance in the trail of the vessel.

Lady Colin Campbell has an article in the current number of the Art Journal on the play recently performed at the house of Mr. Herkomer, the artist.

Lord Cranbourne, M.P., the eldest son of the Marquis of Salisbury, who recently went on a tour to the West Indies for his health, has returned to England without having derived much benefit from his trip.

There is a rumour that the Rev. Charles Spurgeon contemplates rallying round him such of the members of the Baptist community as share his peculiar views, and forming a new religious denomination. It ought, however, to be borne in mind that not long ago Mr. Spurgeon expressed himself opposed to the idea of founding a new sect.

Mr. Patchett Martin has ready for publication a collection of stories and sketches by Australian writers, entitled "Oak Boughs and Wattle Blossom." The book when published will probably be dedicated to the Chief Justice of Victoria.

SMOKING IN RAILWAY CARRIAGES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I crave space in your paper to ventilate what appears to me a gross injustice to a section of the travelling public, viz., the annoyance and inconvenience to which females and non-smokers are subjected by fellows who indulge in this beastly habit. As most of your readers are doubtless aware, the American cars, which compose three parts of the accommodation provided by the workmen's trains, are insufficient to seat the whole of intending passengers, who are therefore obliged to seek room in the small carriages at the front or rear of the trains. Times without number have I seen these carriages invaded by smokers with as much assurance as if they had a perfect right to do so. I have also seen them warned by the railway officials that they were rendering themselves liable to a penalty for smoking in a carriage not provided for that purpose, the effect of such warning being the pocketing of the pipe until the train was clear of the station, when they puffed away to their heart's content. It is a well-known fact that smoking tends to make those who indulge in it indifferent to the comfort of others, and my experience goes to confirm it. In connection with this nuisance there is another matter which requires attention. I allude to the practice of smoking upon railway premises. If I remember rightly, the railway bylaws provide a penalty for any person found smoking in or upon any railway buildings or platforms. Hundreds of cases of infringement of this bylaw occur every day; and, although in many instances they take place under the noses of railway servants, they are invariably allowed to pass. As a remedy for what I draw attention to in the former part of my letter, I would suggest that half of the small carriages be set apart solely for the use of smokers, and marked to that effect, and that any person smoking in any carriage other than those so marked should be dealt with as the law provides, and that for the other matter all porters, guards, &c., be instructed to exercise increased vigilance, and endeavour in every instance to enforce the law and secure a conviction. Trusting that I have said sufficient to remedy the existing state of affairs, and prevent the bylaws from any longer being a laughing-stock to those who daily transgress them with impunity,

I am, &c.,
NO BACCA.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, May 25.

A superficial calm prevails over Europe at this moment. The surface is smooth, like that of a summer sea, enlivened and relieved by the dash of the ever-moving waters on the lurking reefs. Whether it is an effect of holiday time, or a real improvement in the state of affairs, or, as many think, a consequence of the prolonged agony of the German Emperor, who is a power for peace, there is a lull, a decrease in the fever of apprehension which has been felt for so many months. The politicians, keen and watchful—the financiers, alert yet confident—retain the quiet sense that the hour of peril will be deferred to a later period which has distinguished them throughout the excitement of the last eight months; and ordinary folk, who are only stirred by great sensations, have lapsed into unapprehensive tranquillity. I say this despite the fact that there has been a small panic about our national defences, which has not gone very deep; and the other fact, that the Government is really anxious to strengthen the Empire as much as it can, with an eye to the still threatening future. The reasons for diminished apprehensions are not very clear, seeing that the causes which produced them originally are unimpaired; but although a change may come at any hour, still at the present time there is a singular quiet—especially when compared with the season of unrest through which we have passed since the late Emperor William fell sick last autumn—and an impression that we are safe from disturbance for another year.

We live in a world of appearances which the proverb and experience tell us are deceitful, and, of course, the actual calm may be broken as roughly as that of 1870, when old officials declared there was "not a cloud on the horizon." If there are no lowering masses of storm-clouds visible in the sky, there are what Louis Napoleon once called "points noirs," and a great many of them. For example, how can we regard as other than a dark symptom the necessity which has obliged Austria to canton more troops in Galicia? That is a direct consequence of the arrival of more Russians on her frontier. One fresh division has come upon the north, and another on the south-east, and although their march was notified, and is now provided against, that does not lessen the peril involved in these gatherings of armed men, separated from each other only by a geographical line. All the regiments raised in Galicia have been or are to be, established there in addition to those on the spot. The large bodies of cavalry which have been hutted in that province all the winter will be, probably now are, increased, and the videttes will look at each other across a boundary which runs through a plain. For Galicia is absolutely open to the North and East. The permanent obstacles, in the shape of rivers and fortresses, lie further west, and there is nothing, except an army, to stop an invader either from Poland or Podolia and Volhynia, until he approaches Cracow and Przemayl, and perhaps Jaroslav. Consequently, the increase of troops in Russia and Poland calls for an increase in Galicia. But how long is this rivalry to go on? It is not indistinctly intimated that the Russians assembled will be still further augmented "in the autumn," when the annual manœuvres, which are fixed for a period earlier than usual, will leave behind them a part—perhaps a large part—of their strength. In short, the Russian army before next September will have gradually edged westward, pointing to Roumania on one side, and Gallicia on the other; and how long will Austria be able to bear the stress of that menacing accumulation? The policy of St. Petersburg, or rather Moscow, is to be ready for coming events in the East, and although Prince Bismarck says he does not see why the next crisis should not be deferred until 1899, others cannot be so optimistic, being unable to imagine how the armed truce, so crushing in its pressure on the resources of bordering States, can last until then. We have now a black spot in this quarter, and we are told that it will be blacker in the autumn, which is by no means a tranquillising statement; yet the world of to-day does not suffer itself to be disturbed, nor will until the tempest breaks out in the East or the West.

For although the most virulent symptoms are displayed between the Ægean and the Baltic, they are not wanting, say, on the Moselle. Thoughtful observers, scanning the European chessboard, have always seen that Luxembourg was a pawn which, if moved, might have great effects. It nearly brought on a war in 1867. Louis Napoleon, looking for something which he could get as a counterpoise to the gains of Prussia in 1866, pressed the King of Holland to sell the duchy. The King yielded; the treaty was ready for signature, when Count Bismarck, as he then was, intervened, and the King backed down. Had Prussia, he said last February, been able to take up a more decided attitude than she did a great French war would have been the consequence. He took a medium position and prevented the sale, but had to withdraw the Prussian garrison and demolish the works of the old fortress. Now the question is cropping up again in a different shape. What is to become of the duchy when the King dies? It is attached at present to the crown by a personal union, but a German professor has put forward a contention that, on the death of the King, it cannot be inherited by the Crown Princess, but will revert to the German house of Nassau, and so become a part of the German Empire. That is an ominous contention, not only in itself, but because these legal demonstrations of right have frequently foreshadowed war. Now if the result insisted on should be at some time near fulfilment, is it conceivable that the French would be able to endure its completion, and would not the mere prospect of it set them aflame? It seems to me that the apparition of any claim, direct or indirect, to the Duchy of Luxembourg is a black spot, and a very ugly one. It comes at a moment also when the relations of French and Germans on the Alsatian border are extremely unpleasant, and threaten to be more so, when the Germans complain of unneighbourly treatment, and have begun something like reprisals and when the actual state of French internal politics is such that the outcome is more than ever uncertain. There is no immediate danger, for the king is still living, and though not strong, may live for some time; but the matter is well deserving attention, because the Germans have always regarded Luxembourg as part of Germany, and are not likely to give up the belief. All the more so as Prince Bismarck, in his great speech, said he was convinced that if Germany were involved in a war with France, a Russian war would not immediately follow. Whether or not he still holds that opinion, the new Luxembourg incident, even in its present shadowy shape, should not be lost to view.

The Eastern sources of disturbance seem to have been rather enlarged. Roumania is quiet, the Russian provocation having failed so far. Bulgaria is rather more demonstrative in the way of indicating a desire for complete independence, and showing more confidence in her Prince. It is in Macedonia that the signs are the worst. That country has been subjected to the combined operations of Greek and Russian agents, who are preparing the ground for anything that may happen in the higher spheres, and alarming, not only the Turks, but the Bulgarians, for the latter claim the greater part of Macedonia as their inheritance, and would fight the Greeks for it at any time—if permitted. The Bulgarian Exarch has been put up to insist on the appointment of bishops, and the Greek patriarch probably needed no prompting to oppose him. Nothing, however, will come of these "fribbles and frabbles," unless it suits some great Power or Powers. The same may be said of the Servian longings for pieces of Macedonia, which are equally distasteful to the Bulgars, though not so distasteful to the Greeks. For the present, it does not suit anybody that there should be a serious quarrel in these unquiet countries, and, in reality, they cannot stir effectively without permission. Next to the reinforcement of the Austrian garrison in Gallicia, the worst new sign comes from Montenegro. The Prince of the Black Mountain has styled Russia "Protector of all the Slavs," which is not only offensive to the Porte, but to Austria, and even Germany has some millions of Slav subjects. From his fastness, also, certain "brigands" have been allowed or induced to enter the Herzegovina and try to raise an insurrection. So far they have failed, for the Austrians do not, like the Turks, suffer such insurgents to be long at large. Yet, beyond using language which is offensive, the Prince does not appear to have done anything indicative of coming strife. He is, however, a pensioner of Russia, sure to do her bidding, and his son-in-law, Kara George, claims the throne of Servia. There are also some mutterings in Crete, always the portents of a storm, if pushed to revolt, which has not yet come; and an evident uneasiness is perceptible in all these half barbarous countries. What wild work they would make with each other if let alone!

A few days ago a report was circulated that Prince Bismarck had expressed certain opinions showing unexpected confidence in Russia. A denial sharply followed and, indeed, it was plain that he could not have said what was imputed to him. He has not in the least changed his position in regard to that power. It is the same now as it was last February, and a reference to the speech he then delivered, the purport of which seems to be already forgotten, will show what that position is. He said that, although Russia had developed bellicose intentions and turned from her old friends, that was no reason why he should not fulfil his obligations and his promises. She has no pretext for war. "We have endeavoured to maintain the old relations with Russia, but we do not run after anybody." Germany has made her own arrangements with other Powers, and fears none. He is, therefore, in a state of friendly suspicion towards Russia, suspecting not the Czar, but the Panslavists, who have just succeeded in restoring the whilom dismissed General Bogdanovitz to office, and have otherwise displayed their animosity. Bismarck's position is official friendliness, tempered by severe precaution based on permanent strength. The main point to notice at present is his atttitude on the Bulgarian question. If the speech is read attentively, it will be seen that he is willing to give Russia the position in Bulgaria which she attained under the Berlin Treaty—a predominant one—provided she can recover it by diplomatic action. All through he impliedly rejects the use of force, but sets no limits to moral means. He will support "such claims of Russia as are compatible with the decisions of the Berlin Congress," but will neither recommend nor sanction the use of force. That makes the task of Russia so difficult. Moreover, it should be noted that he put great limitations on his reference to the interest of Germany in the Balkans and the Eastern question generally. What he said was that Germany is not primarily interested in it. Other Powers are; she is not. But that adverb is a big qualification, and the sentence in which it occurs does not bear the interpretation put on it—"that he will not throw away a Pomeranian grenadier to prevent Russia from reaching Constantinople." In the first case—possibly in all cases—he will not, but the word used leaves it free to him to cut in whenever the stage may be reached where the interest of Germany begins. The part he has recently played, and still plays at Stamboul, shows that he employed the qualification seriously—in other words, meant what he said. If Russia uses force, and Austria and Italy resist, how is the other ally of the triple league to keep clear? Besides, his military plans enable him to "put a million of men on each frontier." One million, therefore, will look towards Russia; and Stamboul can be defended in Poland and the Baltic Provinces as well as on the Danube and in Eastern Roumelia. These facts are called to mind not only because the purport of the great speech is already half forgotten, but was and is much misinterpreted. Yet it is still the key to the political situation, and really means what it says.

PARISIAN GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, May 25.

The Whitsun fêtes, favoured with brilliant weather, have been celebrated with all the usual observances. The churches have been beautifully decorated with foliage and flowers and crowded with worshippers who, having got through with an early morning service, spent the rest of the day in some of the various suburban haunts of pleasure-seekers, or profited by the cheap excursion trains for a few hours by the sea. The various picture galleries and other exhibitions were crowded throughout the day, and the theatres during the evening.

The two Chambers having given themselves a holiday, Parliamentary questions have been biding their time, but will doubtless undergo angry discussion in both Houses, as soon as their members re-assemble.

The health of the Emperor of Brazil is again undergoing a crisis, so severe that there seems but little probility of his being able to return to his own dominions. Happily, the position of his successor, his daughter, the Princess Regent, appears to be so surely established as to promise the orderly and peaceful continuance of the existing régime now happily ennobled by the absolute and immediate abolition of slavery—a measure due to the determination of the Princess Regent, and carried into execution by her, despite the efforts of the pro-slavery party to prevent, or, at least, to delay, the carrying out of the abolition programme.

The marvellous improvement in the health of the German Emperor still continues. Free from fever, appetite returning and strength improving, he has been able to take carriage exercise, as well as to spend several hours each day in the park, which surrounds the Castle of Charlottenburg. Each time that he has been seen, the manifestations of the public have been of the most enthusiastic description. The Emperor, who has taken the most active interest in the matrimonial arrangements of his second son, Prince Henry, has been able to be present at the marriage, which took place yesterday, in presence of all the Imperial family, and a numerous concourse of royal guests in the chapel of the Charlottenburg Palace, where special care had been taken to provide easy seats for him and for the Empress Dowager, who, despite her paralytic and other heavy troubles, succeeded in bearing the fatigue of the occasion. Mourning being laid aside for the day, the spectacle presented was equally gay and splendid. The bride, Princess Irene of Hesse, looked lovely; the bridegroom shared the admiration of beholders, being handsome, intelligent, and beloved for his amiability. The decorations, illuminations, &c., were as splendid as such things usually are; the wedding feast, presided over by the Empress Victoria and the Crown Prince, was magnificent, and the young pair went off, at 3 o'clock, by special train, to spend their honeymoon in the Castle of Erdmannsdorff. Before leaving they paid a visit to the Empress Dowager and the Emperor. Too tired to appear at the dinner, the Emperor drank to their happiness, and seemed gay and happy. The young pair were warmly cheered on their way to the station.

Queen Victoria has presented the bride with a splendid trousseau and a diadem of brilliants and pearls. The Empress Eugenie has sent her a very valuable bread basket in silver, and the Prince of Wales has conveyed to Berlin the many rich and valuable gifts sent to her by the various members of the English Royal Family, who, while rejoicing over the marriage of their German cousin with a bride of the orthodox rank and quality, are much displeased with the discovery that Prince George of Wales has been imitating the example of Prince Oscar of Sweden and losing his heart to a lovely Scotch maiden, daughter of one of the oldest of the noble family of North Britain, but without a drop of royal blood in her veins, and equally without fortune. Strong opposition is being made to the Prince's determination to marry his lady-love—a determination in which it is believed that he will persist, notwithstanding.

Two or three other royal romances are affording materials for popular gossip; among others, the conjugal troubles of the King and Queen of Servia. King Milan, now in Vienna, to consider the proposals of reconciliation which the Emperor Francis Joseph is trying to get accepted between his niece and her husband. King Milan is said to be looking worn and pale, and to have aged rapidly under the double pressure of the affairs of State and of his domestic relations. The Servian King is lavishly hospitable, and his Royal fêtes at Belgrade are far more splendid and costly than the Imperial ones given in Vienna. Everything that can be furnished by Paris is ordered from this city; flowers, fruits, bonbons, and the elements of delicious repasts are sent to Belgrade by the most brilliant "furnishing shops" of the Boulevards. Everything in the Royal establishment is on the most splendid costly scale; as, for instance, a dinner service in Austrian china, decorated by the best artists in Vienna, which cost the trifle of 80,000 florins. But the Servian Court, though extravagant, is not gay. The absence of the beautiful young queen and the little crown prince casts a gloom over the capital. [torn] country wishes to know why Queen Nathalie [torn] return, as it is known that she is willing to [torn] king consents. But it appears that the [torn] tween the royal pair originated in polit[torn] which the queen's strong Russian pre[torn] her to adopt a course prejudicial [torn] calculated to consolidate the reign [torn]

The quarrel between the D[torn] his sister (whose non-royal m[torn] Reningen has never been acknowledged by the heir to the defunct Hanoverian royalty) is understood to be on the eve of settlement, thanks to the action of Queen Victoria, who has a warm affection for Princess Frederika, and succeeded in enlisting the kindly efforts of the Austrian Emperor in the task of bringing the Duke of Cumberland to an understanding with his sister.

The second birthday of the tiny King of Spain, celebrated a fortnight ago in Madrid by the great festival given—as noticed in a former letter—by the Queen-Regent to the children of the primary schools of the capital, and also by the opening of the Barcelona Exhibition on the day when his lively and promising little Majesty entered on the second year of his life and reign, has just been celebrated in this city by the giving of a superb fete in honour of the event by the Spanish Ambassador to the French Government. The President and Madame Carnot, all the diplomatic grandees, the Ministers, all the principal Spaniards of this city, and a large representation of the aristocratic element of Parisian society, were at this splendid festival.

As for the reception of the Queen-Regent in the provinces of Aragon and Catalonia, it is certain that no Spanish Sovereign has received, during the last half century, ovations comparable to those which have everywhere welcomed the Regent and the little king; and the importance of these is rendered immensely more significant by the fact that all parties concur in these manifestations of loyal confidence and acceptance. Thus at Saragossa the eminent chiefs of the Republican party, Messrs. Escosura and Sancho, presented themselves with the other notabilities at the palace occupied by the Queen and her family, and expressed their cordial good wishes for the Sovereign and her Government. The evident cordiality of Escosura, one of the principal leaders of the Republican party, is much remarked as indicating the probable acceptance of constitutional monarchy by his party, for he wound up a conservative speech, addressed to the Queen-Regent, by saying:—"I wish your Majesty and your children, madame, a happiness equal to that which I desire for my wife and for my children."

At Barcelona the succession of receptions, entertainments, and festivities of all kinds has been most brilliant. The 32 great war-ships anchored in the harbour offer a most splendid spectacle; and the firing of salutes in honour of the Queen and the baby-king has shaken all the buildings in the town, to the admiration of their inhabitants. So splendid a marine spectacle has never been witnessed on any former occasion. The Queen-Regent, the Dukes of Edinburgh and Genoa, the commanders of squadrons, the diplomatic corps, and the other distinguished visitors have been exchanging visits; and there have been dinners and lunches on board of frigates and in the Palace of the Queen, and gala performances at the principal theatres.

M. Ferdinand de Lesseps has had a fall from his horse, when riding with his five youngest boys, mounted on their respective ponies; but he seems none the worse for the accident. The Chamber is expected to authorise the issue of Panama stock after the holidays.

Lord Lytton has given a banquet to the Lord Mayor of London and his wife. Most of the Ministers were present, and will doubtless make much of the distinguished visitor, who has come to see after the interests of the British section of the great show of next year.

Lucas, who shot Louise Michel, has just been tried, and partly through the generous efforts of his victim, has been acquitted, on the ground of imbecility and habitual drunkenness. The famous Louise has just brought out her play, "The Red Cock," in one of the pretty theatres of the external boulevards. The building was filled to suffocation; but no one has been able to understand the play, which appeared to be a jumble of nonsensical incoherencies, meant to be bitter attacks on all that is; the affair has consequently proved a failure. Much angry alarm has followed the discovery that a quantity of forgeries of 500 franc notes on the Bank of France are in circulation, and that the bank refuses to pay them. A lawsuit has been commenced to settle the question of the bank's liability. As it is considered to be certain that the bank, from niggardly economy, has failed to supply itself with a model which forgers could not imitate, it is believed that the trial will end with a judgment adverse to that establishment, and that it will be compelled to make good the losses of those who have taken these forged notes in the belief that they were genuine. Already commerce here is seriously disturbed, no one daring to take bank-notes in payment for goods. It is known that 45 notes of 500 francs each are already in circulation, and that many others have been issued, of various amounts, so that the panic is a very serious one.

The project for a bridge over the channel, alluded to in a former letter, is assuming more tangible and scientific proportions. The author of this bold scheme is M. Hersent, ex-president of the Society of Civil Engineers, assisted by the experts of the great Creuzat Company. It is proposed to build the bridge in spans of 550 yards; it is to weigh 2 million tons, and to cost 32 millions sterling. The project is to submitted to the examination of an international committee of engineers. Meantime the present tax of 10d. per head levied on passengers arriving in or going out of the harbours of Calais and Boulogne is to be raised to 1s. 6d. in order to furnish funds for improving them. Nine-tenths of the passengers by these routes being British subjects, the tax falls mainly on the Queen's lieges.

So severe an outbreak of poisoning has just occurred in Hyeres consequent on the drinking of the sham wine of a popular local "manufacturer" that general alarm has been created all over France; the "wine" so constantly drank by all but the richest classes being known to be the product of ingenious chemical manipulation, having nothing to do with the juice of the grape. The bodies of the victims are being examined, and the "manufacturer" is arrested; but the evil is on too vast a scale to be effectually grappled with by the police. Australian wines ought to find a large sale in this country.

Signor Bozza has invented a means of telegraphing music to any distance by means of a powerful battery.

The editor of a Corsican paper, having received from Paris a journal containing an article which he judged to be insulting to him, started by the first boat for France, came straight on to Paris, and immediately sent his seconds to arrange for a duel between himself and the journalist who had roused his ire. The latter being at Barcelona, to report on the fetes in the columns of his journal, the demand for the duel was transmitted to him by telegraph. The Parisian writer has telegraphed back, accepting the duel, and stating that he was just starting for Paris, and that the fight can come off as soon as he arrives.

The French Government has placed so many difficulties in the way of Germans coming into France that the German Government is establishing, by way of reprisals, stringent requisitions of passports for all who enter Alsace and Lorraine, whether to stay or merely to pass through. French anger is consequently inveighing with renewed bitterness against Germany, and threatening "revenge." The calmness with which France invents hostile measures of all kinds against the rest of the world is only equalled by the fury with which she resents the adoption of similar measures on the part of her neighbours.

The dog show opened two days ago, and is admitted to be one of the finest and most interesting ever assembled on this side of the Channel. The flower show is unusually fine, with, among other marvels, a collection of orchids worth tens of thousands of pounds, and that is driving the worshippers of that flower wild with admiration and envy.

The Boulanger craze is persistent; organisation for and against the would-be Cæsar, will be chronicled in a future letter.

A crusade against smokers (says an English paper) is being carried on by a society in Manchester known as the English Anti-Tobacco Society and Anti-Narcotic League. Smokers will be interested to know that they spend £16,000,000 a year upon their favourite weed. An American lady, who has collected some facts with reference to tobacco, professes to have discovered that no cannibals would eat a man who smelt of smoke. This is regarded as a remarkable fact, because the weed is supposed originally [torn] have been found at San Salvador, where Columbus saw [torn] atives smoking it in the form of a cigar.

"Ay, marry! now unmuzzle your wisdom."—ROSALIND.

Eighteen "Constitutional Act Protestants" against fifteen wiser Quistists resolved to reassert for the ——nth time that the Council does and always did possess the power of amending money bills, and bills imposing burdens on Chinamen, or any other persons—in short, had just the same right of scarifying Assembly legislation that the Assembly has of doing the same good turn to that of the Council—their powers being, in fact, co-extensive with Parliament's powers of legislating for "Peace, Welfare, and Good Government"—these abstractions being, with us, the colonial equivalents of Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity so beloved in another place. Thirty years ago the Council passed a similar resolution, and, I believe, warmed it up a few years ago; and many a time has the doctrine of co-equal and co-ordinate legislative power been passionately asserted in the non-representative Chamber; but alas! only to be ignored or repudiated in the other. So it will go on until the crack of doom—which means the date when the Royal assent will be given to an Act making the Council elective, and will define its legislative authority in big type. But to return to the resolution itself. I have already given my opinion. Mr. Barton's Previous Question—that comical form of procedure which exhibits the opponents of the proposal voting For, and the mover and seconder and other advocates of the proposal voting Against it—was obviously the most sensible way of dealing with a difficulty which practically did not exist when the debate was taken; because the Assembly had already agreed with the amendments of the Council out of which the "protest" issued. Of course if there had been any doubt that the claim to equal powers might get stale unless periodically restated, and warmed up by a little mild debating, those who held that doubt might be excused for taking steps to obtain a fresh insertion of their ancient manifesto in Hansard. But for all practical purposes, the debate of Thursday (such as it was) was a waste of time, and a waste of energy; and, without sufficient reason, compelled some Conscript Fathers to put up with a scratch dinner in the Parliamentary refreshment-room.

For persuading the Assembly that the amendments of the Council in their Chinese Eviction and Persecution Bill ought not to be further contested, Sir Henry Parkes deserves that a white mark be put against his name, and the Assembly, or the sensible majority thereof, should not go without a word of praise for refusing to fight their legislative neighbours on the absurd point raised by Mr. Speaker Young, who really ought to be ashamed of himself and his "vagaries." This momentous bill, big with the fate of Knutsford and Cathay; of Parkes, cheap labour Melville, Botany Bay; of cabbages we eat, but ought to throw away; and many other issues grave enough to make us shudder; now that we have appeased the almighty crowd by this great sin-offering, is now, thank heaven, done with. It will go next week to Lord Carrington for the Queen's assent, which I suppose has been in fact already given to it in anticipation by the Home Secretary. The law officers of the Crown will not be likely to stick up the bill, by reporting it to be one which, under the Governor's instructions, he ought to reserve; for the code of rules which governs the Queen's representative in ordinary cases must be taken to have been superseded for this sacred measure by the Home Secretary's dispensation—at least, if we have not been deceived about the purport of that gracious telegram; and as, according to Professor Pearson, we are a sovereign people, who pay 20s. in the pound—or, if I may for once borrow a phrase from Mr. Harry Rickards, "awful near it"—it only remains for the Chinese Emperor to accredit Mr. Mandarin Quong Tart as his Ambassador to her Britannic Majesty's sovereign colony of Australia, lately New South Wales (I am only anticipating a little), and to arm him with sufficiently large diplomatic powers to secure a modus vivendi between "Pigtail" and "Australian" brands of cabbages and salades.

Roughly speaking, from the point where the little Edwards River flows into the Murray, as far upward as Tocumwal or thereabout, the River Murray has been closed by our Government against fishing-nets for a year. This has been done under the authority of the Inland Waters Fisheries Act, passed last year, to prevent (as I am given to understand) the net fishermen of those parts (mostly Victorians) from bringing about the extinction of the Murray cod, and the still more delicious golden perch. The closure, as proclaimed, is of the waters within three named counties of New South Wales—Wakool, Townsend, and Cadell. Of course this proclamation "raised Cain" among the men who made such a good living by netting the Murray and its affluents for the benefit of the Melbourne market, and it appears that the Victorian press—always blue-mouldy for an over-the-border fight—is very anxious to interpose its foolish ægis between them and our authorities, and to make a political réchauffé out of a very stale dish by warming up this pretended fishermen's grievance; for, behold! does not Melbourne get its only eatable fish from the streams and rivers which belong to New South Wales? And probably Victorian Ministers will not be greatly indisposed to fan the flame, by way of retaliation for certain acts both of omission and commission on the part of our Government, under which the Victorian people are supposed to be snorting. The fishermen claim, so it is said, the right to fish all over the River Murray, and at any rate on the Victorian side. The trouble seems to be that the authorities of our colony may interpret the proclamation as including the whole of the Murray between the Edwards and Tocumwal, because an Act of Parliament declares that, except for purposes of Customs and navigation, "the whole watercourse of the River Murray from its source to the Eastern boundary of South Australia is, and shall be, within the territory of New South Wales." Here beginneth, I dare say, the first chapter of the great fisheries dispute between Victoria and New South Wales, to settle which an intercolonial conference may have to be summoned, to be followed by a solemn and extensive appeal to the Privy Council. Meanwhile the Victorian Government have called out their reserves, manned their batteries and their navy, put their mines and torpedoes on a war footing, and mobilised themselves generally, as if we were going to war with them to enforce this Murray-Cod proclamation. It makes one shudder to think that the next thing our inflammable neighbours may do might be to seize Mr. Burdett Smith and keep him as a guarantee of our pacific intentions. Then, of course, we should cry "Havoc!" and ask Sir Henry Parkes to be good enough to behave himself as our Dictator, with salary and appointments to match. And we should afterwards suspend the Habeas Corpus Act, to show those Supreme Court Judges of ours that we can suspend it, and to show our dear neighbours that we can go one better than their stock tax.

The correspondence in the Herald on the Mutual Provident Society's Pension Scheme has now ceased, the editor having just cried out "Hold, enough!" But there are other newspapers; and Mr. M'Elhone may break out again in one or more of them before the vote is taken. I must confess that I am against the mover of this vote of censure on all points; but he may nevertheless be right in law while wrong in equity. And at this point I desire to overrule the dictum of Lord Chancellor Grossmith as reported by Gilbert and Sullivan in ex parte "Iolanthe." The dictum is as follows:—

> "The law is the true embodiment
> Of everything that's excellent—
> It has no kind of fault or flaw,
> And I, my Lords, embody the law."

The first proposition here is simply untenable. The law is not what it is declared to be by the Lord Chancellor; but equity is; and he must be taken to have meant equity. Well, that point being set at rest, we may proceed to Mr. M'Elhone's grievance. Now, are not those directors under an equitable obligation of settling this matter of the so-called pensions? and of doing so by granting the equivalent in money—of claims that had accrued or were accruing? The Chief Justice, Mr. Salomons, and Mr. C. B. Stephen have said Yes. Mr. Heydon and Mr. Robert Smith (of Norton, Smith, and Westgarth, a solicitor learned in the law!) have said No.

* * * * *

But Mr. Smith (according to Mr. Walker) must be considered as having voted on both sides. His vote may therefore be cancelled out of the equation, unless, perhaps, the fact of his having discarded the M'Elhonian-Heydon view of the "law" in favour of the Darley-Salomons-Stephen view of the "equity," deserves to be recorded on the credit side of the case for the "pensioners." Mr. M'Elhone, it is true, accounts for the strength of the equitable argument and the consensus of three of the most considerable and best-paid lawyers in the colony, on the hypothesis that they gave their opinions on the case as submitted to them; the implication being that Mr. Heydon didn't; but if there be anything in that rather shadowy contention, the recantation of Mr. Robert Smith ought to make the scale of Astræa's weighing-machine, which holds the opinions of a Chief Justice, a Queen's Counsel and ex-Chief-Justice, and a Barrister of high renown, who might have been a Supreme Court Judge had he liked,—all these three being reinforced by the opinion of a gentleman admitted by Mr. M'Elhone to be perhaps the most consummate solicitor in the colony,—I say to make that scale loaded with so much law to surely, and not slowly touch the earth. Therefore, in all humility let me hope that the action of the directors will be vigorously supported by the result of the ballot, and that Mr. M'Elhone will not be greatly encouraged to take this latest of his grievances to the Supreme Court and the Privy Council, unless at his own expense. "The widows and orphans" who are being robbed won't be able to vote, but if they could they might do worse than each vote away a few shillings out of their future inheritances, to prevent even the breath of repudiation from tainting the honour as yet unsullied of our greatest charity—the A. M. P. As against the honour of that society, even Mr. M'Elhone, with Mr. Heydon and Mr. Smith thrown in, ought not to predominate.

I feel bound to stick to my opinion that it would have been better for us if the Calliope had been commissioned to destroy the Newcastle derelict; still I trust that I am not such a churl as to begrudge their due meed of praise to Major Penrose, Commander Lee of the Naval Artillery, and the non-commissioned torpedologists who, to use the eloquent language of General Richardson at the last Soudan banquet, "leaving their warm firesides, their clubs, their punctual dividends, and their comfortable wives" (I am not quite sure about these adjectives), departed at the call of duty to a place several miles off shore infested, no doubt, with the microbes of sea sickness, with sharks, and other deadly perils of the sea, to say nothing of deadlier perils in the form of guncotton and those other fell explosives with which the Major and the Commander and their comrades were associated, perhaps only a frail bulkhead separating them from—Vesuvius. Therefore (speaking, I hope, in the name of many sympathetic Nouswalians) it should be an early and a pleasant duty to welcome the Major and the Commander and the rest of them upon their return safe and sound to Port Jackson, and the comforts of terra firma, after a highly successful expedition. The Legislature will, for their part, not be ungrateful; I mean, of course, that the Premier will propose and pass a resolution conveying the thanks of Parliament to the returned wreck annihilators. Afterwards, we will request the Fountain of Honour to promote Major Penrose, and to make Commander Lee a Commander of St. Michael and St. George. We can bestow on the others a few police magistrateships, and similar rewards commensurate with their deserts. For my own part, I must confess that the specially satisfactory thing about this expedition is the proof of the comparative harmlessness of "ground mines," unless they are exploded when in actual contact with a ship's bottom or her side. Certain mackarel suffered, it is true, from the 400lb. charge slung under that mysterious wreck now no more (the fish always seem to suffer on such occasions), but the wreck herself seemed little the worse for it. This is reassuring to humane people, if not to the Torpedo Corps. But, perhaps, our future enemy will give that corps fair play, and in that spirit of chivalrous war, which was not extinct with Fontenoy, would slow down when running past the batteries, so as to allow our men to fix their torpedoes to vital parts of the doomed ironclads. Meanwhile, I would suggest that, in order to test the destructive range of our ground mines, Professor Penrose and Major Threlfall, with any other desirable electricians, should experimentally measure the limits of their explosive calamity. This could be easily done by towing a few of our unseaworthy ships and hulks over the aforesaid mines, exploding them at the exact moment of vertical superposition. After a few weeks of this kind of practice we should perhaps know what our enemies would have to expect, and mercifully inform them.

I don't know much about the rights and wrongs of the dispute between the Sydney Liedertafel and the Orpheus Club, but I cannot but think that it is to be regretted that the former society gave any occasion for criticism. We have not so much good music in Sydney that we can well afford to make a choice between two societies, each of which offers its own attractions. There ought not to be any rivalry between them. Jealousy is, perhaps, inevitable between individuals and churches, but jealousy between societies which equally profess a high aim ought to be regarded as despicable. It is quite possible that the members of each society thought that in this case they were wronged by the other. For myself, I can only speak for one of them. I can testify to the crowded attendance at Aarons' Hotel, but I would fain hope that it was due rather to the attractions of the programme than to any desire to protest against the action of the Liedertafel. And the performance certainly deserved a hearty recognition. Other societies have done, and are doing, good work for us; but there is none which gives us the opportunities of hearing chamber music of a high class which we have owed to the Orpheus Club during the past year. Those who have had the advantage of being present at the concerts which have been provided in such a self-sacrificing spirit by the performing members of the committee will be glad to observe that the dismal vaticinations at one time current about the future of the club are likely to be happily disappointed. So far from there being a likelihood of the failure of the enterprise, there seems to be every probability that it will continue to grow in strength and importance. The decision of the committee to admit a further body of members to the number of 300 will not only add to the usefulness of their work by extending the sphere of its operations, but will come as a welcome concession to many whose applications were too long delayed at the beginning of the club's existence.

WOMAN'S COLUMN.

A WOMAN'S TALK TO WOMEN.

MEMOIRS OF A PRINCESS.

"To prepare us for complete living is the function which education has to discharge, and the only rational mode of judging of an educational course is to judge in what degree it discharges such functions." So writes Herbert Spencer, and it may be interesting to apply this text to the training that fell to the lot of the daughters of the nobility of France in the 18th century, now that we have before us such a full and realistic account of the conventional education of those times in the memoirs of the young Polish Princess, Hélène Meissalski, who passed eight years of her life, from 8 to 16, in the convent of L'Abbage-aux-bois. She began writing these memoirs at the age of 10, and her shrewd powers of observation, insight into human nature and knowledge how to deal with it, are soon apparent even in her childish descriptions of her companions and teachers. The general plan of the educational course was evidently to make the young girls accomplished women of the world, the future "grandes dames" of Paris and of the Court; and with a great deal of the good nun's training we are heartily in sympathy. No doubt the high moral tone and scorn of anything mean which prevailed amongst the pupils was the result of the personal influence of Mme. de Rochechouart, the "sister" who reigned supreme as head of the school. Her portrait is best given in Hélène's own words: "Tall, well made, a pretty foot, a hand delicate and white, splendid teeth, large black eyes, a proud and serious look, and a charming smile." Her manner of controlling and rebuking the pupils under her charge is well described by her small admirer on one or two occasions, and the reading of these passages ought to be a great encouragement for all times for those placed in similar positions of responsibility, as showing how intensely justice is appreciated by the youthful mind, even though at the moment such appreciation may not be apparent. On one occasion the pupils had discovered they could talk through an underground opening in the garden to a little scullion who was employed in the next house in the kitchen of the Comte de Beaumanoir. With girlish mischief, and partly for the delight of doing something they knew would be forbidden, they held daily conversations with this small but enterprising retainer, and some of them went the length of confiding to him their names, though, of course, he could not see their faces; one of these conversations was overheard by the sister in charge, and the occurrence at once reported to Madame de Rochechouart. This is how Hélène describes she dealt with the matter:—"Madame de Rochechouart did not think it worth while to come into the schoolroom to speak to us about such an adventure. In the evening when the roll was called, she congratulated us on the charming conquest we had made, and said we must have very delicate tastes and very elevated sentiments to prize so much the conversation of a scullion; and as for those who had allowed him to call them by their names, she had no doubt he would some day come and claim his former privileges, and that would not fail to charm their relations. Thus she thoroughly humiliated us without scolding us in the least. Hélène's love for this noble woman increased as she grew old enough to appreciate the elevation of her character, and to understand the secret springs of her conduct; but we who read between the lines often catch glimpses also of the secret griefs and inarticulate longings and aspirations to which such an ardent soul, set in such narrow surroundings, must necessarily have been exposed. Her work was doubtless her consolation, and the companionship of a few chosen friends and pupils her relaxation. These chosen few were in the habit of meeting every evening in her room, and passing an hour or two in conversation or reading. "I may say," writes the young Princess, "that Mme. Rochechouart, her sister, Mme. St. Sulpice, and several other ladies of this set, showed an indifference almost amounting to contempt for whatever did not interest them particularly; they were always the last to know what was going on in the convent. It seemed to me that Mme. de Rochechouart and her sister had a manner and style that we each of us caught to a certain extent—I mean those of us who were most with her. The women of the world were astonished at the way in which we were able to express ourselves." As for the other nuns who were occupied in teaching, they, most of them, have their portraits drawn by the Princess in different parts of her memoirs, and she seems to enjoy a malicious little pleasure in writing these concise sketches:—"Mme. de Montluc, good, gentle, orderly, over-careful, and a tale-bearer; Mme. de Montbourcher, good, stupid, very ugly, believing in ghosts; Mme. de Freenes, ugly, good, a capital story-teller."

The six years in the convent were divided into three periods. Hélène was placed at first with other children of her age in what was known as the "classe bleue." Here is an exact description of the educational routine in that class:—"Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, rise in summer at 7, in winter at 7.30; be in one's seat in the schoolroom at 8 o'clock to await Madame de Rochechouart, who comes in at that hour. As soon as she leaves we learn and repeat our 'Catéchisme de Montpellier.' At 9 breakfast, at 9.30 mass, at 10 we read till 11. From 11 till 11.30 music lessons; from 11.30 till 12 drawing; from 12 till 1 geography and history; at 1 o'clock dinner; recreation till 3; from 3 to 4 writing and arithmetic; from 4 to 5 drawing lesson; refreshment and recreation till 6; from 6 to 7 we learn the harp or the clavecin; at 7 o'clock supper; at 9.30 we go to bed." The other days in the week were arranged in the same way, except that instead of taking lessons from masters who came to the convent, the children worked under the superintendence of the nuns; so that we see out of six hours' study during each day three were devoted to accomplishments, which Spencer reminds us with "the fine arts, belles lettres, and all those things which, as we say, constitute the efflorescence of civilisation, should be wholly subordinate to that instruction and discipline in which civilisation rests. As they occupy the leisure part of life, so should they occupy the leisure part of education." Admission to the next class, the "classe blanche," was only obtained after confirmation and receiving the first communion. Very little account is given us of the studies of this period, but a large portion of the time spent there was evidently devoted to religious teaching; and in view of the responsibilities their religion called upon them to undertake at that time, the young girls were doubtless expected to spend many hours in self-communings and examination of their inner life. But that Hélène's religious teaching had little real hold on her, one short quotation from her memoirs will show:—"I was being prepared for my confirmation, which was to take place at Whitsuntide. As the Archbishop was to come at that time, and as Mme. Quatre Temps (one of the nuns) was very Janseniste in her opinions, I took it into my head to say, in order to please her, that I feared the Archbishop, instead of confirming me in the Holy Spirit, might confirm me in the Evil Spirit." To be admitted to the "classe rouge" was the object of Hélène's ambition, and she writes of her work and duties there with evident pleasure. When reading of these duties we look back with admiration on the good common-sense and wise forethought that dictated their arrangement; for it must be remembered that most of the 162 pupils who were being educated at L'Abbaye and Bois were either to be married before they left the convent, or immediately on leaving, so that for them there was to be no period of home life and the learning of home duties; they went straight from conventual routine into a restless life of pleasure and display. In this, the highest class, their time seems to have been divided between studying, music, drawing, and elocution (for the exercise of which lastnamed accomplishment they had a perfectly appointed stage, on which they acted quite ambitious pieces), and taking a part in the domestic routine of the convent. Each pupil was expected to spend so many weeks in learning and applying these different branches of domestic routine; and this discipline must have given them a good insight into the methodical and orderly management of a household, and would be an excellent part of the training for us to copy now-a-days. In the sacristy and linen room they learnt to mend, embroider, and fold; in the dispensary, under experienced supervision, they made poultices and mixed draughts; in the library they had the charge of a large and valuable collection of books and old chronicles. They took a share in the work of the refectory and kitchen, and even attended to answering the door.

Of course much of the thrilling interest that we feel in reading these memoirs comes from the fact that many of the schoolfellows of the young Princess figured afterwards so prominently, and often so nobly, in that ghastly period of the Revolution that was so soon to follow—that period which, as Henry James says, "casts backwards a sort of supernatural light in the midst of which at times we seem to see a stage full of actors performing fantastic antics for our entertainment." How brilliantly that light falls on these pages as we read the girlishly-told story of the games amongst the lilac bushes in the old walled convent garden; of the childish successes on the convent stage, and of the elaborate costumes in which those successes were achieved. The poor girls seem all rushing on their fate. An undergound fire is rumbling and roaring beneath their feet, and they are dancing on the thin surface that covers it. Nothing can save them, for they are brought up in the supreme belief, either that the flames do not exist, or that they will continue to roar underground—that the surface will last for ever. An intelligent study of history might have given them an insight into what was going on around and underneath them, but history did not take a high rank amongst their studies, and the prizes for dancing and for history were considered of the same value. Their ancestors had bequeathed them high birth and titles, wealth, and—a revolution. Short time was to be allowed them for the "complete living" for which their education was intended to prepare them; but though the good nuns could not foresee it, one of the functions which that education well discharged was preparing their pupils to meet death with dignity and nobility. To quote from M. Lucien Percy, to whom we are indebted for bringing to light these very charming memoirs,—"The high opinion that these young girls had of their rank and of their birth helped to develop these sentiments of honour and of delicacy. They put into practice to no small extent the axiom "noblesse oblige," and the most severe reproach that could be addressed to them was that they had a mean spirit (l'âme basse)."

WOMEN'S BRAINS.

(From the Daily News.)

In a current number of the Englishwoman's Review, Miss Frances Power Cobbe refers to a recent discussion on the size of women's skulls and the weight of their brains, as compared with those of men. Miss Cobbe attaches little importance to the relative sizes of heads, and adduces in support of her unbelief the fact that Mrs. Somerville's head was the smallest she has ever seen. She also inquires who were the women on whose skulls Professor Romanes based his calculations. Miss Cobbe has some reason for asking the question. Some years ago when visiting the museum of the College of Surgeons, under the guidance of Professor Flower, she asked him to show her some of the best skulls of women in the collection. He replied that there were no good ones, as only the bodies of female paupers could be obtained for scientific purposes, those of women of the higher classes being unprocurable. Whereupon Miss Cobbe immediately asked the Professor if he would like to have her skull when she had done with it. The offer was eagerly accepted, and she added a codicil to her will bequeathing her skull to the College of Surgeons. The codicil has since been revoked, Miss Cobbe does not tell us why. If Professor Romanes was in the same position as the College of Surgeons with regard to female skulls, while at the same time he quoted the abnormal weight of brain of Thackeray, and gave the measurements of heads owned by men celebrated in letters and science, he has been guilty of some injustice to women's heads. But the smallness of Mrs. Somerville's head goes to show that there may be something in fineness of quality rather than in abundant quantity. Many stupid persons of both sexes have large heads. In some parts of England the term 'big head' is used synonymously with blockhead and thickhead. The only way by which to arrive at correct conclusions seems to be that suggested by Miss Cobbe herself, that intellectual women should bequeath their skulls to the Royal College of Surgeons.

WALKING OUT.

A breach of promise case, just reported, says the Daily News, throws some light upon the etiquette of courtship in that class of life in which "walking out together" is the recognised mode of making acquaintance. The defendant said that he had never intended to marry the plaintiff, whose counsel immediately protested against this statement by remarking, "But you walked her out." This was met by the defendant with the reply, "It would be a fine job if a man had to marry every girl he walked out with." It is to be feared that this gentleman was inconstant, and, in fact, the jury took that view. Walking out with a girl, if the promenades are sufficiently frequent, is regarded in much the same light as "asking papa" is in social circles of a somewhat higher range. Some months ago, in a case of defamation of character, the young woman who had been libelled said in evidence that she had walked out with the young Frenchman who was defendant in the action, but that she had only done so in order to try if she liked him, and, finding that she did not, she gave him up. It is a nice question of etiquette how many walks would be allowed on either side for this probationary stage, and whether a greater number would be permitted to the walking lady, as being more difficult of choice. Etiquette books are silent on the subject. They fly too high to touch these humble walks of life, and always seem to be written for those classes which ought not to need them. The unwritten law would seem to be that after a tentative walk or two, if the couple still persevere in selecting each other's companionship, the affair may be regarded as an engagement.

Walking out, in the poorer ranks of life, occasionally entails some expense upon the lady. The upright carriage, martial air, and smart uniform of a soldier commend him as a brilliant companion of the domestic servant; but the tremendous advantage that he confers, socially speaking, upon the partner of his rambles, carries with it a certain penalty, if so it can be called. The British soldier never has much money, and his expenses have to be paid by the fair maid whom he escorts. A guardsman costs a good deal, for he is generally thirsty, and even the richest of domestic servants cannot afford themselves too often the brilliant privilege of sharing the walks of so magnificent a creature. It has been reckoned that a Sunday out with one of these appendages costs between four and five shillings. Consequently a certain economy has to be observed, and during the intervals between the indulgence in the greater luxury the lady has to put up with a less expensive companion. A civilian does for every-day life, and the thrifty maiden saves on him, and puts away a little of her wages, not precisely for a rainy day, but for the glorious occasion when she can lead forth in triumph a costly, strapping, six-foot warrior. To be seen with him appears to be bliss enough, for the two are rarely observed to converse. The buxom cook, no longer in the heyday of her youth, who has put away a little money in the bank, is more often seen in company with a uniform than the younger and more attractive housemaid or nursegirl. The reason is that she can afford herself the pleasure of this social distinction, and can also dress in a manner befitting the occasion. This walking out is practically the only form of recreation in which girls of the working-classes can indulge. It is the bright side of their hard-working lives, and their thoughts dwell upon it, naturally enough, just as those of other girls rest upon probable tennis parties, dances, and water-picnics. That the humbler sisters love, equally with those above them in position, to wear fine clothes on those festive days cannot be wondered at, and that they invert the well-known sentiment of Burns and think more highly of a uniform than of the man it invests is no marvel when we remember how many of those whom education ought to have taught better seem quite to forget that the rank is but the guinea's stamp.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF THE APOCRYPHA.

(From the Daily News.)

The publication by Mr. Murray of Dr. Wace's critical and revised translation of "The Apocrypha," uniform with the "Speaker's Commentary," furnishes the text of an article in the new number of the Quarterly Review, which draws attention to many interesting particulars. Amongst these is the fact that the rejection of the Apocrypha by the English-speaking races has been the result not of ecclesiastical authority, but of popular feeling. Less than 20 years after the issue of the Authorised Version, as this writer observes, English Bibles began to be printed and sold without the Apocrypha, in defiance of the penalties threatened from Lambeth for the offence; and now of the myriads of English Bibles issued every year only the merest fraction comprise the Apocrypha. The great Bible Societies confine their enormous issues of the Scriptures to the canonical books, and absolutely refuse to aid in circulating those which are uncanonical. The strictly Anglican Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge keeps the complete Anglican Bible in stock to supply special demands for it; but these demands are found to bear an insignificant proportion to those which are made to it for Bibles unencumbered with the Apocrypha. It makes no difference, we are told, that within the United Kingdom the printing of the Authorised Version is not in the hands of any of the societies, but is restricted to a few privileged presses. The Universities and the Queen's printers, as we all know, make no scruple of dividing the Anglican Bible into its two parts, the canonical and the uncanonical, and supplying one without the other to their customers. The Commentaries on the Bible which pour forth from the press in an ever-growing stream, exhibit, it is observed, the same tendency. Moreover, in the new Revised Version, not the whole of the Anglican Bible has been dealt with, but only the canonical portion; and the work has been universally accepted as complete, as if there had been no such portion as the Apocrypha which had a claim to be considered. The Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States and the Church of Ireland, since it acquired the right of self-government, have exhibited a like spirit. Since the revised Lectionary of 1871, now adopted by the Scotch Episcopal Church, the total portion of the uncanonical books appointed to be read from the lecterns of our churches is less than one-fifth of that to which our forefathers for many generations were accustomed to listen. We are reminded, however, that besides the lesson two portions of the Apocrypha are permanently embedded in the Anglican book of Common Prayer.

THE MAGAZINES FOR JUNE.

FIRST NOTICE.

The two best things in the Contemporary Review are "Theological Romances" by Andrew Lang, and "Matthew Arnold," by H. D. Traill. Mr. Lang is far more severe on "Robert Elsmere"—the novel which has made such a sensation—than Mr. Gladstone was, and the reason is that he takes it far less seriously. Mr. Traill's article is at once critical and sympathetic. He loves Matthew Arnold, and yet sees his faults. The following estimate of his theological eccentricities is not only obviously true, but also exceedingly well expressed:—

> Some years ago, on the occasion of the issue of a cheap reprint of "Literature and Dogma," I endeavoured in the pages of this Review to investigate the validity of Mr. Arnold's theories of Scriptural interpretation, and to estimate the amount of acceptance which they were likely to obtain from those whom it was his avowed desire, and whom he so strangely conceived it to be his special mission, to instruct. On the former of these two questions I find nothing now to add to the observations which I then made. I thought then, and I still think, and what is more, I believe it to be the well-nigh universal opinion, that the critical canons by which Mr. Arnold sought to refine away what he regarded as the materialistic accretions on the creed of Christianity (but what are really of its essence as a definite system of doctrines derived from a supernatural origin, and possessing a supernatural sanction), were valueless for any practical purpose. I thought, and still think, that the whole of his teachings on this subject were in part futile and in part superfluous—superfluous because unneeded by those who have accepted with him the conclusions of modern science, and who, if they retain their belief in Christianity at all, are quite competent to devise their own "accommodation" for themselves; and futile because assured of rejection by those who, through ignorance of or repugnance to the scientific conclusions which are tending to destroy its supernatural element, still cling to their religion, "superstitions" and all. The assumption that there anywhere exists any considerable class of Christians in so curiously "mixed" a mental condition as to be at once anxious to reconcile to the dogmas of their faith with the informations of their reason, unable to do it for themselves, and willing to allow others to attempt it for them, was in itself an assumption of a highly doubtful kind; but the idea that if there were such persons they would find anything specially persuasive in Mr. Arnold's method of reasoning with them, or even in his manner of approaching them, appears to me to have been a positively monumental instance of self-deception.

Du reste, Mr. Henry Dunchley's sensible and manly article on "National Defence" is well worth reading, and so is Mr. Romanes' paper on "Recent Critics of Darwinism." In "The Invasion of Pauper Foreigners," Mr. Stephen W. Fox approaches a problem much resembling that of the Chinamen in Australia, but his purpose is merely to show that in England there has been no invasion worth speaking of.

The editor of the Cornhill has been extremely lucky in finding a man who can write as delightfully of animals as Gilbert White himself. Everybody should read the articles in the home number on "Badgers and Foxes." The picture of a fox's domestic economy is quite perfect in its way. "In a German Emigrant Ship" gives an appalling picture of dirt and bad management. "John Huxford's Hiatus" is a most pathetic story, and the idea of "The Eavesdropper" is good, and one cannot help reading the tale, but it would have been much better if not overloaded with somewhat weak jokes. The serials help to make a good number of this magazine.

There are perhaps no serials of the first rank running in any of the magazines; but "The Rogue" in Temple Bar may, at any rate, be said to be a thoroughly interesting and indeed absorbing story. "About Two Great Novelists" (Thackeray and Dickens), by Mrs. Herman Merivale; "Health Resort Vignettes," and "Bishop Wilberforce"—these are three charming papers, the best being the first.

It makes one positively sick and ill to read the awful papers in the Century on the "Plains and Prisons of Western Siberia." Such independent testimony to the disgusting cruelties and abominable maladministration of the Russian Government has a historical value, and the articles of the Century commissioner appeal to the conscience of the whole world. There is plenty of American humour in Mr. Eggleston's serial, "The Grayson's," and with some good short essays—notably one on "Matthew Arnold's Criticism," and another on "The Philosophy of Courage"—the number rises considerably above the usually high standard of the Century.

Mr. R. L. Stevenson contributes to Scribner's Magazine a charming paper on "Some Gentlemen of Fiction," which makes us wish for more. We would gladly hear what he has to say about the success (or failure) of Sir Walter Scott, George Eliot, Charlotte Brontë, and Lord Beaconsfield in drawing gentlemen. In his concluding sentences Mr. R. L. Stevenson rises to true eloquence. Speaking of Thackeray's "Newcomes" he says:—

> "I call it a gospel: it is the best I know. Error and suffering and failure and death, those calamities that our contemporaries paint upon so vast a scale—they are all depicted here, but in a more true proportion. We may return, before this picture, to the simple and ancient faith. We may be sure (although we know not why) that we give our lives, like coral insects, to build up insensibly, in the twilight of the seas of time, the reef of righteousness. And we may be sure (although we see not how) it is a thing worth doing."

Mr. Henry James begins a story called "A London Life," and there is an elaborately illustrated article on "The Building of a Railway."

In Blackwood's Magazine no article stands out from the rest; but the whole number is good—the best, indeed, that we have seen for some time. Especially to be recommended are the articles on "Mary Somerville," and on the "Pictures of the Year," and the pleasant literary gossip of the "Old Saloon." The paper on "Ireland and the Roman Catholic Church" gives the history of previous attempts by the Pope to influence Irish political morality, and is extremely interesting.

In Macmillan's Magazine Mr. B. R. Wise, late Attorney-General of New South Wales, writes on "A Menace to National Unity." His key-note is that Australia does not care to be embroiled in European politics, but is intensely interested in England's Asiatic concerns:—

> "The unity of the English Empire is a matter of especial concern to the Australian continent, on account of her commercial and political relations with China and the East. One of the latest, and certainly the most acute, observers of Australian politics, Baron Hübner, has called attention to the imminence of a gigantic struggle between the English and the Chinese races. This struggle will almost certainly break out in the Pacific, and Australia will be the first object of attack. Signs are already visible of political complications with the Chinese Empire; and it only needs that our trade with the East should continue for a generation to develop at its present rate of progress for the creation of numberless occasions for disputes and warfare. For the protection of this commerce, and the protection of our own country in the event of hostilities, the continuance of the English superiority in Asia is essential. Even now England is an Asiatic rather than a European Power. The ruler of India, the mistress of Hongkong and Singapore, she holds the key of the destinies of the Pacific. Australia is thus, politically speaking, England's neighbour, in spite of the 12,000 miles which separate her geographically from Great Britain. Accordingly the question of Imperial union comes more nearly home to us than to any other portion of the British Empire. Our future probably depends on the capacity of England to control the East."

After speaking of a selfish party of disunion in Australia and a silly party of union, neither of which in his opinion has much influence, Mr. Wise sums up as follows:—

> "That curious mixture of diffidence and self-assertion by which the Englishman at once recognises the true Australian, is far more than is at first perceived a product of our political institutions. Mere sentiment exercises its subtle influence over the minds of Australians in a way which Englishmen, looking at these colonies from the other side of the ocean, rarely remember. If the sentiment of union is strong to bind us to England, there is also a sentiment of dependence and inferiority, which might easily urge us to a foolish self-assertion. Union with England we gladly believe will come, but it must be the union of an equal with an equal, and not the union of a superior with a subordinate; so that it is no paradox to say that the first step towards union must be separation. We are manifestly not yet ready to take that step, and any public man would be guilty of little short of treason if he were to advocate it. We have first to unite among ourselves, and then we have to be prepared to hold our own against attack. Every year sees us approach more nearly to a federal union; and every year also will see, unless some inconsiderable pedantry should bring our destinies within the range of English party strife, a growing attachment towards England, founded upon a higher sense of public duty and a more judicious perception of national interest. The foes of union are those who, without a knowledge of the feelings or modes of life of the Australian people, are idly stirring irritating questions which admit of no solution."

"Two Schools of Art" is a trenchant reply to Mr. Furniss's recent proposal for an enlarged and more democratic Royal Academy. Mr. Walter Pater begins a paper on "Gaston de Latoure," and under the title of "A Brother of the Common Life," an anonymous writer gives us a biography of Thomas à Kempis.

THE LIVINGSTONE LECTURES.

A lecture was delivered by the Rev. Dr. T. Roseby, of Ballarat, Victoria, in the Pitt-street School-hall, last evening. The subject of the lecture was "The Genetic Unity of Nature Viewed in a Theistic and Christian Light." It was the inaugural lecture of a course to be delivered on the foundation by Mr. George Durham of a lectureship in Camden College in physical and natural science.

Mr. Durham presided, and said that the foundation was of a dual character, bursaries and lectures. The bursaries were for the purpose of assisting poor students. The name Livingstone was the best illustration he knew of the words "Work and Trust" by which the bursaries were known. There was one condition attaching to the bursaries. It was that should any widow's son apply, his application should receive the special consideration of the Senate. He had great pleasure in calling upon the lecturer.

The Rev. Dr. ROSEBY said that he could not forbear expressing the singular pleasure he experienced in being privileged to inaugurate an institution which he trusted, under God's blessing, may prove of no slight service to the cause of truth and to the efficiency of the ministry of their churches. He expressed his high appreciation of the wisdom and public spirit of the founder of the lectureship, whose desire and purpose are to save this seminary of theological learning, Camden College, from ever suffering from the besetting sin of all such institutions—an undue professional narrowness. This monumentum perenne will stand in years to come "for a testimony" that the founders of Camden College desired that its students should be men of robust and independent thought. And for this purpose no general subject could be selected more apt than physical and natural science. The lecturer went on to speak of the sun and the moon, their physical condition, the principle of gravitation, the tendency of matter to aggregate about a centre of attraction, and give to all bodies a spherical form, whence motion and matter came, and the existence of force as an ultimate datum of the universe co-ordinate with the existence of matter. He then said:—The forces of the material universe though extremely varied in their phenomena, are yet, as far as we are able to investigate them, all forms of one force. The reactions of organic chemistry are so strikingly similar to those of inorganic, the one set of forces is so inextricably bound up with the other, that it is difficult to persuade the student that vital phenomena have no such kinship with physical phenomena, as that physical force might not be raised to the form of vital, just as it is a matter of common experience for vital force to generate physical. All such transformations of force speak of the Immanent God. When vital force generates physical force, it is His work. And if inorganic force ever becomes vital, it becomes so by Him. It is to be frankly acknowledged, however, that we have absolutely no experience of any such transmutation from physical to vital force. We must not, it is true, pronounce a thing impossible because we have never seen it done, and still less because we are unable ourselves to do it. And we must be diffident in affirming that the laboratory of nature has never produced pro[illegible] man's chemical manipulation finds the ta[illegible] It startles one who has never given attentio[illegible] to be told that so homogeneous a substance as water is composed of two perfectly impalpable gases, one of which burns in the flame of this gas-jet, while the solid substance of the great globe itself is in large measure built up of the other. But more wonderful still is it to find that the atomic constitution and the mutual behaviour of the various material elements are such as to suggest in the strongest way to the mind of the chemist, that could he but lay hold of the protean substance—notwithstanding that, he would find these elements to be all forms of one. All material forces are resolvable into one force. All material elements give such evidence of kinship as to suggest the strong probability that they are all forms of one substance. The dream of chemists is that that substance is hydrogen. Add the further fact that the boundary line between physical and vital force, as between physical and spiritual substance, though so distinct, nay, so violently contrasted, in some respects, becomes here and there so faint that it is almost impossible to distinguish it, and that, at any rate, the closest affinity exists between them. But the combined labours of the chemist and the astronomer enable us to extend the induction to the solar system and to the stellar universe. The dull spectrum, crossed by bright lines of white light, seen in a spectroscopic view of the Great Nebula of Orion enables the observer to conclude with certainty that that stupendous object is largely gaseous. The dark lines in the spectrum of the giant Sirius show as certainly the presence of hydrogen there as in the waters of the Pacific Ocean. The whole of the visible universe is one. It is built up of the same material elements, which are one; and it is moved by the same physical forces, which are one. Let us turn from the material data, so to speak, of the visible universe—its mere matter and force—to consider the history of our pleasant and beautiful world. A bit of silurian slate picked up on the famous Black Hill at Ballarat, a bit of basaltic lava picked up as a bit of road metal in one of the streets of the same city, speak of the two great agents of water and fire. Now, heat being one of the great primal forces of nature, being one of those modes of motion of which all physical forces are but the interchangeable equivalents, I have no difficulty in understanding how the great fountain and reservoir of heat in the interior of the globe should give occasional indications of its existence in those volcanic outbursts of which this bit of basalt is one of the vestiges. The extent of this volcanic action all over Western Victoria is enormous. It covers an area of many hundreds of square miles. Its depth, in some of the deeper mines in Ballarat, ranges from 250 to nearly 400 feet. And although this later volcanic action in Western Victoria is confined to what geologists call the comparatively recent Pliocene Age, it must have been prolonged with intervals over an enormous range of time (though still within those Pliocene limits), from the fact that there are intercalated beds of sedimentary detritus 10, 20, 40ft. in thickness between the successive lava flows. In some instances those intercalated beds show that the successive outbursts must have been separated from each other by four distinct and distant intervals of time. And most interesting it is to see how the valleys and rivers of that Pliocene Age, the age to which all the auriferous drift of Victoria belongs, how those "ancient rivers" whose streams literally "ran down their golden sands," have now at length been discovered by the skill and patience of the miner—a whole river system discovered, followed, and traced for miles along the course of what the miners call "deep leads," hundreds of feet below the present surface! Silurian slate belongs to one of the oldest sedimentary formations of the globe. It is perhaps 60 million years, to take a moderate and recent estimate, since this piece of Silurian slate first found rest on its ancient ocean floor. One of the most elementary things that science teaches us is how ridiculously infinitesimal things miles and years are as units for measuring space and time. Our own sun is 92 million miles away, and the star that is nearest to us, our own sun's nearest neighbour, is separated from us by the vast interval of nearly 20 million million miles. And now, of what changes has this rock to tell us as having transpired during all those stupendous ages of geologic time? I will tell you. As originally deposited on the bed of that ancient sea, when Creation yet was young, when there existed, as far as our observations go, only such lowly forms of life as Graptolites and Trilobites, as originally deposited, I say this of Silurian slate, this solidified mud was horizontal in position. The water placed it, as it places all things, on aqueous level. But go and look at the Silurian slates of Black Hill to-day. Go and look at the same formation anywhere and everywhere along the Australian Cordillera, along its south-westerly curve in New South Wales, and along the course of the dividing range in Victoria; those originally horizontal slates and shales are horizontal no more. They are uptilted, folded, contorted at all angles, till you find some of them almost if not absolutely perpendicular. It tells us of a globe which once was hotter than it is to-day, which parting with its heat has kept on shrinking upon itself, cooking and, of course, contracting as it cools. What are the ridges and wrinkles, the elevations and depressions of the schoolboy's porridge, as he cools it with his hasty breath, but a miniature representation of the Alps and Himalayas, the Pacific and Atlantic depths of the great world. These uptilted Silurians tell us of the prolonged effects of lateral pressure and of fire. They tell us of a hot, cooling, contracting globe.

> "——sua non immemor artis,
> Omnia transformat sese in miracula rerum"—

The meeting closed with the singing of the Doxology.

THE DIVORCE EXTENSION BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—If, as one member of the House announced, the above bill was not considered in a religious point of view, a matter concerning which we have the most plain and positive directions from the lips of Christ, the reasonable inference by a reflecting mind is, that the whole of Parliamentary business is conducted in the same spirit, to the entire ignoring of conscientious and religious principle resulting from a true knowledge of the Most High; and where this does not exist it is nothing short of practical atheism, whether it be in the individual, the family, or the Government of the country. And under such circumstances prosperity in the true sense of the word cannot exist, but, on the other hand, evil to a lesser or greater extent. History verifies this. MEETINGS.

WATER AND SEWERAGE BOARD.

A meeting of the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board was held yesterday afternoon, in the board-room at the offices, Lower George-street. There were present Mr. T. Rowe, president; Mr. B. Palmer, vice-president; and Messrs. Bennett, J. D. Young, G. W. Lander, and J. Graham.

EXTENSION OF WATER SUPPLY.

The secretary, Mr. R. Bloxsome, read applications from residents of Fullcourt-street, Balmain; Homebush, St. Peters; Ulster-street, Paddington; Marshall-street, Newtown; and Bourke-street, Waterloo, asking for an extension of water supply; also one from Mr. Wise, of the Point Piper Estate, Wolseley-road, to which replies were ordered to be sent, intimating that as soon as pipes were available the works would be included in the contracts. A letter was read on the same subject from residents of St. Leonards, and a reply ordered to the effect that the work was being provided for. In the case of this suburb tanks are to be placed on the highest point of North Shore, into which the water will be pumped from Milson's Point, and thence reticulated. The council clerk at Leichhardt wrote stating that in consequence of that council having carried out the advertised levels of the street from Booth-street 15 chains north, portions of the water mains were now exposed. The engineer suggested that the council should engage their own men to excavate a trench and lower the main. This suggestion was adopted by the board. A letter was received from the Treasurer's department in reference to the payment of contingencies, advising that contingencies would be paid at the Treasury, and not out of the Board's advance fund of £1000.

THE BOARD OFFICES.

The PRESIDENT informed the members that nothing definite had yet been arranged in the matter of the location of the offices. The present offices were the property of the Government, and until such time as the Government sanctioned an alteration they would be obliged to occupy them.

THE BOARD'S OFFICERS.

In compliance with a request, the engineer reported that Mr. M'Fadyean, the assistant engineer, was identical with the gentleman recently appointed Mayor of Botany.

Mr. BENNETT accordingly moved—"That no officer of this board be allowed to hold the position of mayor or alderman, because the members of the municipal councils form the electoral bodies of a larger proportion of this board, and that the duties of this board being essentially of a municipal character, its officers stand in a different position from ordinary Civil servants towards the municipal bodies, and that occasions might arise when the officers of this board holding municipal honours might be placed in antagonistic positions to the board."

Mr. J. D. YOUNG seconded the motion.

Mr. GRAHAM suggested that Mr. M'Fadyean should be called upon to resign his mayoral duties.

It was the unanimous opinion of the Board that its officers should not hold municipal positions of any kind.

The motion was carried.

LEGAL OPINION REQUIRED.

On the motion of Mr. GRAHAM, it was decided that the board's solicitor be asked to obtain barrister's opinion on subsection 4 of section 34 of the Act with respect to the taxation of "lands." The words in the Act are water supplied to "lands and tenements," and it is felt that the rate might apply to unoccupied lands as well as tenements.

THE PIPE-LAYING AND TRENCHING CONTRACTS.

The PRESIDENT said, with regard to the decision to call for tenders for the opening and closing of trenches in the several districts where the water mains are to be laid, that a delay had opportunely occurred, and it was proposed to take advantage of it by reconsidering the matter, with a view to altering the contract system under which the work would be carried out by including the branch of pipe laying. He said he had given considerable attention to the subject, and believed that an enormous saving of expense could be effected, and greater facilities offered to the contractor, by combining the opening and closing of the trenches and pipe-laying. Under the existing system, contract and day-work men were brought into direct contact with each other, with the result that a vast difference was noticeable in the "stroke" performed; and that sometimes the contract men had to wait for the day-work men, and a feeling of incompatability existed between them. He thought it would be an infinitely better arrangement to place all the work under contract. If the system were adopted now the board might supply the lead and caulking material for the next six months, after which the contractor might be asked to find all the material. The day workmen employed now were paid for bad weather, when no work was done, a state of things that did not exist under contracts. If the Board desired the alteration, the Engineer would prepare the specifications for combining the whole of the work.

Mr. YOUNG thoroughly approved of the idea, remarking that it was almost enough to disorganise the contractor's men to see the day hands doing the "Government stroke."

Mr. BENNETT thought that the adoption of the scheme would mean the appointment of a large staff of supervisors.

Mr. YOUNG saw no necessity for increasing the staff of the board. If any further appointments were made the office would be overcrowded with men who would have nothing to do.

It was decided, after further discussion, to call for tenders for closing and opening the trenches with a supplementary or alternate tender for the laying of the pipes.

THE WATER RATE.

The PRESIDENT said he regretted that the figures upon which the board would be able to form a basis for striking a rate, were not ready for the use of the members. The clerks had been hard at work, but had not been able to get the calculations ready for this meeting, but he hoped to have them for the next meeting, when members would be able to discuss the question of the amount of rate to cover the amount of interest on the whole scheme. It was necessary to procure a lot of information before dealing with so important a matter. For instance they had to ascertain the assessed values of properties in the city and suburbs in order to arrive at an equitable rate. He was hopeful that it would be sixpence and under. (Hear, hear.) Sixpence in the £ up to £300, assessed value; 4d. from £300 to £700; 3d. from £700 to £1000; 2d. from £1000 to £4000; and 1d. from £4000 to £5000. This was the calculation being worked out at the present time, and would cover the 4 per cent. upon the £2,600,000 expenditure.

THE BYLAWS.

On the motion of Mr. GRAHAM, sub-section 7, of sec. 1 in the bylaws, being that relating to a rate of 9d. per 1000 gallons supplied to gardens and nurseries, for trade purposes, and to cricket grounds and public parks or gardens, was expunged.

Section 4 was altered to read,—"The board may supply water for building purposes at the rate of 5s. per room for dwellings, warehouses, hotels, commercial and public buildings, or by meter at 1s. 6d. per 1000 gallons."

Section 25 was altered to read,—"No person shall supply more than one property from one service connected with the mains of the board, except with the permission of the board."

TENDERS.

The tender of Mort and Co. for the pumping plant and machinery for the North Shore water supply at the sum of £532 was accepted.

The meeting then terminated.

ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

The monthly meeting of the New South Wales Zoological Society was held in the boardroom, at the Society's Grounds, Moore Park, yesterday afternoon. Mr. John Keep occupied the chair, and there were also present, Messrs. Charles Moore, C. H. Humphrey, Captain Guest, and W. H. Catlett (secretary). The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The bank pass-book belonging to the society showed a debit balance of £1239 19s. 5d. The secretary reported having paid away for wages, &c., the amount of £124 14s., and cheques were signed for various sums amounting to £108 8s. 2d. for the payment of current expenses. The secretary reported that the receipts from the gates for the five weeks ending 5th July amounted to £146 17s. 6d., from the elephants to £9 12s. 9d., and from the donkeys and ponies to £6 19s. 3d., making a total of £163 9s. 6d. The gate money represented the admission fees of 7488 visitors to the grounds, 4262 being adults and 3226 children. The gardens were also visited by 530 public school children, accompanied by 13 teachers, who were admitted free of charge. The new leopard houses as soon as they are painted and fenced in will be ready for the reception of the leopards and pumas. The floor of the enclosed verandah of Messrs. Quong Tart and Co.'s refreshment rooms has been relaid in concrete by the society's workmen, under Mr. Wm. Beaumont's direction, and will be ready for traffic in a week's time. On the 23rd June the lead on the roofs of the exit turnstiles was stripped off by thieves, and last Thursday night a considerable portion of the lead flushing of the large octagonal aviary was stolen. The Eutellus monkey, which was presented to the society by Mr. Archibald Forsyth, of Manilla House, Bourke-street, died on the 3rd instant, in all probability from cold. During the past month the society have acquired by purchase a dancing brown bear, from the Pyrenees, one rock wallaby, five mandarin ducks, one black swan, and a kagu from New Caledonia. UNION TERMINATING BUILDING SOCIETY, 55, Market-st.—The latest and best. Call for prospectus

M.L.A., D. Cormack, F. B. Gipps, and M. J. Hammond, and Alderman Simpson, Burwood. The chairman read the advertisement convening the meeting, and called upon Mr. M. J. Hammond to move the first resolution.

Mr. M. J. HAMMOND, who was received with applause, said it was quite time the people realised the position in which they were being placed with regard to the proposed new water rates. It would be no use complaining when once the rate was determined. Had the people been less apathetic and better governed seven years ago, they might have been spared that meeting. They were now committed to paying interest on a very heavy expenditure beside having to provide funds to keep the works in repair. That, to a great extent, might have been saved by better management. The question to be decided was, were they asked to pay more than was needed, and whether the rates proposed were fair and equitable? He maintained they were not fair. (Cheers.) A return recently laid before Parliament showed the total expenditure on the Nepean scheme to have been £2,100,000, yet the board were attempting to provide interest for £2,800,000, besides asking for £30,000 for working expenses annually. If that was the beginning of the board's work, then the sooner the taxpayers saw the end of it the better. (Loud applause.) £30,000 was more than would pay the working expenses of 30 municipalities, yet this one board wanted that amount. Allowing interest on £400,000, the cost of further extensions during the year, the board asked for £50,000 more than they had a right to. (Applause.) Providing for interest on 2½ millions at 4 per cent. would be £104,000; add to that working expenses £30,000, only £134,000 was needed. Mr. Hammond proceeded at some length to quote statistics to show that persons living outside municipalities would pay less than those assessed by the municipal councils. He was firmly convinced that the board had not considered every source from which they would derive revenue. He was sure from the figures in his possession that the total revenue would at least be £194,000. The fact of levying for more than was required savoured of waste and extravagance, which the people should rise up and protest against. (Applause.) If the 8d. in the £ was enforced it would fall heavily on the property holders. For instance, under the present system a house rated at 3s. 6d. per room paid 28s. per annum; under the proposed tariff of 8d. in the £ the owner would have to pay 34s., or 6s. 8d. more than at present; a house now paying 37s. 6d. would have to pay 50s.; one paying 56s. at present would be increased to £5; and one now contributing £3 3s. per annum would be increased to £7 10s. The increases were truly startling, and should not be tolerated. (Hear, hear.) At the present time the residents of Ashfield had to pay a 1s. municipal rate, and a 4d. lighting rate, in addition to which they were asked for [illegible]d. for water. They would soon have to pay a sewerage rate of 6d., and a land tax which would be equal to 10d. in the £ on the annual value; making in all a total of 3s. [illegible] the £—(hear, hear)—or 1s. 4d. in the £ more than had to be [illegible] in Melbourne. Bad as it was for the suburbs [illegible] ever so much worse for the city of Sydney [illegible] property-owners would have to pay away on[illegible] receipts from property for taxes. This [illegible] matter, when it was remembered that this is only a young country. Again, a miller who was engaged preparing food for the people, was charged 1s. 6d. per 1000 gallons for water used in his factory, while a florist, who, so to speak, wasted the commodity on flowers, was only charged 9d. per 1000 gallons. Food was of more importance than flowers. (Applause.) Was that a fair charge. (Cries of "No, no.") He had pleasure in proposing,—"That, in the opinion of this meeting the proposal of the Water Supply and Sewerage Board to levy a rate of 8d. in the £ per annum on the assessed value of rateable property not exceeding in value £300 per annum is excessive, and the other rates proposed are inequitable." (Applause.)

Alderman R. N. ELLIOTT seconded the resolution. He considered the proposed rate an extraordinary one, and did not approve of the board trying to make a profit, that was not an evidence of good government.

Alderman WHITNEY and Mr. J. ALLUM supported the motion, which was unanimously agreed to.

Alderman H. J. MORTLEY moved the second resolution as follows, —"That this meeting emphatically protests against the proposals of the Water Supply and Sewerage Board, and will use every endeavour to obtain a modification of the same." He defended the action of the Ashfield Council in regard to the stand they recently took on the water question at some length, and concluded by denouncing the proposed tax as extraordinary and excessive. Alderman Mills seconded the motion, which was supported by Messrs. D. Cormack and James Abbott, M.L.A., and carried unanimously. A resolution having been passed authorising the chairman to place foregoing resolutions before the Water Supply and Sewerage Board, vote of thanks was accorded to the acting-Mayor, and the meeting adjourned.

EXHIBITION OF WOMEN'S INDUSTRIES.

A meeting of the general committee of the Exhibition of Women's Industries and Centenary Fair was held in the council-chamber of the Town Hall, at 3 p.m. yesterday; The president (the Lady Carrington) presided. There were also present—Lady Darley and Lady Martin, vice-presidents; Mrs. Windeyer, delegate V. department; Mrs. Clive and Mrs. M'Farland, acting delegates for IV. department; Mrs. J. H. Ogilvy, hon. secretary for the needlework department; and several members of the executive committee and about 50 members of the general committee. After the minutes had been read and confirmed the lady president stated that at a previous meeting of the executive committee Mrs. Windeyer had moved that an address of condolence be sent to the Dowager Empress of Germany from the committee of the Exhibition of Women's Industries, that Lady Martin had seconded, and that Lady Darley had supported the motion, and that at her (Lady Carrington's) request, the address approved by the executive would be submitted to the meeting assembled. Mrs. Windeyer then read the address in which the sympathy the women of Australia have felt for the royal lady who has ever identified herself with woman's work in its highest, as in its humblest, sphere is expressed in fitting terms, and coupled with a hope "that when the first bitterness of grief for her great loss has passed away there may be comfort for the widowed Empress in carrying out the work which was for years promoted by the Crown Prince and Princess, and that with all thinking women she may rejoice, in years to come, at the fruition of the good seed sown by his heroic father in his brief reign, as seen "in the courage, wisdom, and justice of her Kaiser son, warder of the rights and liberties of his people." Lady Martin seconded the adoption of the address; and Lady Darley, in supporting it, said that although she felt that no argument or expression of opinion was necessary, she would like to say that from so large a body of women as had engaged in organising and carrying out the forthcoming exhibition —the first of its kind attempted in the colonies—there was in her opinion a special appropriateness in the sending a message of sympathy to the Empress from this distant part of the empire of her Majesty's august mother; and that the generous support which the Empress Victoria had ever given to the cause of women was begun long before their position was recognised as at present, and that the advocacy so fearlessly given had earned the gratitude of women in all ranks and countries. The lady president asked the committee to signify their approval, which was done by all present, standing as they silently recorded their assent. Progress reports were read of the horticultural and floral department, and of the mechanical work, and of the Educational Department, the information given proving that increasing interest is being manifested in the enterprise. Lady Carrington, who is the delegate for the horticulture, has already secured over 1100 exhibitors. Weaving, straw-plaiting, embossing, box and bag making, spinning and weaving, type-writing, and many other arts in which women and girls are engaged, will be illustrated by workers in the exhibition. A complete exhibit of the silkworm industry has been promised, and in connection with this department lectures on various subjects have been volunteered. Members of ambulance classes have undertaken to illustrate several parts of ambulance work, and the University Senate has given the use of the hall for examinations in sick nursing, to be conducted by physicians. A complete exhibit of agriculture, including implements and bees, as well as their produce, is promised, and from statements given, the needlework, fine arts, and cookery department are progressing favourably. The meeting was the most satisfactory which has yet been held of the general committee.

At a meeting of the Rookwood Progress Association held on Thursday night, at Abraham's Hotel, a letter was received from the Department of Railways, with reference to the necessity for constructing a subway for passenger traffic at Rookwood, and stating that the matter had received attention, and the Commissioner was not prepared to recommend any outlay for this purpose, as ample precautions for the safety of the public were observed at the local crossing. It was decided that the secretary write to the members, and urge them to ask that the matter be reconsidered, as the traffic in 1885 was 1400 foot passengers daily, and that the traffic now was more than double, showing the greater necessity for something being done soon to avert any loss of life. As a tender for the construction of Potts Hill reservoir has been accepted, the population of the place will largely increase, and quicker means of transit to cross the line is absolutely required, instead of wasting time while the gates are shut.

The meeting of the William-street Mutual Improvement Association was held on Thursday evening, Mr. H. Bush presiding. The programme for the current quarter was passed, and speakers elected for a public debate with the Surry Hills Athenæum. Notice was given to bring a motion forward to prevent non-subscribing members (which would apply to all the ladies) from voting upon questions affecting the rules; also one to render the introduction of the subject re changing time or place of meeting inadmissible during the next six months. Upon the chairman deciding that the latter motion would be irregular, it was carried,—"That the meeting dissents from the chairman's ruling." The editor (Mr. Wilson) read the manuscript journal. A good deal of discussion followed. One other article was read, and the remainder held over till next issue.

At the monthly meeting of the committee of the Church Society, held in the Chapter House on Tuesday last, the Archdeacon of Camden in the chair, it was resolved, in view of the receipts for the half-year showing a decrease of over £320, when compared with those for the same period of the previous year, to indefinitely postpone the consideration of several applications for building grants, and to defer for one month any decision on the applications for refund of stipend grant reductions. Applications from the parishes of Mount Victoria, Richmond, &c., were referred to sub-committees for report. The Trinity season collections, so far as they have been received, amount to £541 4s. 1d., against £561 8s. 8d. in 1887.

The committee of the Animals Protection Society held their monthly meeting on Wednesday last, under the presidency of Mr. P. N. Trebeck, J.P. There were present Messrs. W. Beaumont, J. Horbury Hunt, C. H. Myles, B. Cocks, A. W. Gilles, W. F. Wright, the secretary, J. Sydney, and Inspector G. Webber. Among the correspondence read were letters calling the attention of the committee to the practice of shearing sheep in the winter months. A discussion ensued as to the best means to stop this barbarous practice. It was agreed to insert a protest and caution in the local papers of the district where early shearing is practised. Attention was also directed to the numerous cases of overloading carts and vans in the city and suburbs. The inspector was instructed to endeavour to check this cruelty. The summary of the society's operations for the month as follows:—Prosecutions, 15; convictions, 12; cases withdrawn, 3; cautions issued, 39; complaints received and investigated, 5. Analysis of convictions: Working horses suffering from wounds, 4; working lame and decrepid horses, 5; starving and beating horses, 3.

The Articled Clerks' Association held their general meeting on Thursday evening last in the rooms of the Geographical Society, Phillip-street. There was a large attendance of members and visitors, and Mr. Nash, one of the vice presidents, occupied the chair. In course of the preliminary business the hon. secretary read a letter received from Mr. A. E. Hemsley (a vice-president), offering the sum of £5 for a prize essay upon certain conditions. The business of the evening was a discussion upon the District Courts Act, led by Mr. Moss, in which Messrs. Gannon, A. Hale, H. Hale, Martyn, and others joined; and at the request of the meeting the chairman made some interesting and instructive remarks upon the subject. The meeting, which was most successful, closed with a vote of thanks to Mr. Nash.

The monthly meeting of the Parramatta Branch of the Irish National League was held in St. Patrick's Schoolroom on Thursday evening last, Mr. T. Brien, vice-president, occupying the chair. Nothing of any importance was done. The chairman stated that since the Pope's Edict there had been a marked falling off on the money handed in at the church as Peter's pence. He trusted the members of the League would not resort to this sort of revenge on the Pope for the promulgation of the decree. A resolution was carried, confirming the desirability of establishing branches of the league throughout the colony.

The weekly meeting of the Birchgrove Literary and Debating Society was held in St. John's Schoolroom, Balmain North, on Wednesday, July 4, Mr. W. C. Ward (president) in the chair. There was a good attendance of members and visitors. Order of the day, readings and recitations given by the members, and well criticised, formed a very pleasant evening. The subject for debate at the next meeting is—"That cremation is undesirable."

The monthly meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held in the Temperance Hall on Wednesday afternoon, when there was an increased attendance. The president opened the meeting by prayer and a short address from the 6th chapter of Ephesians, after which a letter was read from Dubbo, asking that a branch might be opened there; letters also from Parramatta and Burwood, reporting the very satisfactory progress they were making. The secretary of the Bathurst union wrote, urging the necessity of pressing on the scientific temperance teaching in the Public schools. A letter also was read from the Band of Hope Union, and papers from the secretary of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union containing the petition for the protection of the home, addressed to the Governments of the world. The president reported a very successful meeting at Macdonaldtown preparatory to opening a branch there.

The monthly meeting of the committee of the Sydney Mechanics' School of Arts was held on Thursday. The chair was occupied by the president, Mr. James Dalgarno, and there were also present Mr. Vice-president Thomas, the treasurer, Mr. Dowling, and Messrs. Beaver, Cameron, Gandon, Jones, and Reid. Apologies were received from Messrs. Bevill, Ritchie, Holdsworth, and Captain Neitenstein. Sixty-one new members, who had joined the institution during the month, were formally elected. The hon. treasurer's report for the month of June was submitted. This showed the receipts for the past month to be £485. The total amount paid to date on account of the contract for alteration is £3243 11s. 3d., of which £1900 has been borrowed on mortgage, the remaining £1343 3s. 11d. having been paid from the current revenue. After providing for accounts presented for payment, £776 8s., there would still be a credit balance in the bank of £55 6s. 7d. The report went fully into details, and made many suggestions, particularly in the way of bringing the institution more prominently before the public with the object of increasing the number of subscribers. Some of these matters were left for consideration by a sub-committee appointed for the purpose. An application for the loan of lantern slides for the purpose of amusing the inmates of the Gladesville Hospital was granted. £100 was voted for the purchase of works of reference for addition to the present reference library. This vote was passed on the recommendation of a sub-committee, which had devoted much time to the selection of the works proposed.

Yesterday afternoon a meeting was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, over which the Rev. T. B. Tress presided, for the purpose of considering whether an invitation should be given to Mr. George Clark, evangelist, who is at present labouring in Melbourne, to visit New South Wales. There was an attendance of about 30 gentlemen, most of whom were clergymen. The Rev. Dr. Steel moved that a cordial invitation be sent to Mr. Clark to visit this colony. The Rev. Mr. Buchan seconded the motion, which was carried. It was resolved that the services be held in the suburbs as well as in the city. Mr. Clark would come here about October. It was stated that Mr. Clark had hitherto been very successful in the conversion of young men of the middle class. He was at one time a great athlete, and was now sometimes called the "Christian athlete." It was resolved that those present form themselves into a committee to bring the work to a successful issue, and an executive committee was also appointed. It was urged upon the meeting to use its best endeavour to bring the services to a successful issue, and the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

The weekly meeting of the School of Arts Debating Club took place on Monday evening, Mr. D. J. Davis, vice-president, in the chair; and notwithstanding the inclement weather there was a good attendance of visitors and members. Mr. Easton announced that his colleagues in the new ministry formed by him would be Messrs Dawson and Powell. Mr. W. M. Foote, hon. secretary, informed members that the proposed conference between the sub.-committee of the council and the committee chosen by the club had not yet taken place, as, owing to the alterations, it was difficult to find a room to meet in; and, moreover, the council had a large amount of other business in hand. As a consequence, the printing of the amended rules must be postponed indefinitely. A vote of condolence with the relatives and friends of an old and respected member, the late Mr. E. Byrnes, was unanimously agreed to, on the motion of Mr. Powell, seconded by Mr. Garton. Mr. Easton then opened a debate upon a resolution—"That a Royal Commission should be appointed to enquire into the evils attendant upon the sweating system, with a view of adopting remedial legislation." The motion was supported by Messrs. W. M. Foote, Dawson, D. J. Davis, and Powell; opposed by Messrs. Garton and Macnamara, and decided in the affirmative by 6 to 1. Mr. Easton submitted the following motion for next Monday's debate:—"That the Act authorising payment of members should not have been passed until after an appeal had been made to the electors of the country."

CUMBERLAND DISEASE AND M. PASTEUR'S REMEDY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have read with the closest attention the recommendations of the various stock boards on the above subject which have been published in your columns from time to time, and to me it seems very clear that the stock boards in no case understand the circumstances under which they are called on to advise the Minister.

Suggestions have been made that M. Pasteur should be paid a lump sum for his secret, and this sum has been placed at various amounts up to £50,000. Now, I do not know whether the Minister or officers of the Mines Department have taken the trouble to inform themselves on the question before calling on the stock boards for advice; but the Mines Department certainly has not stated the case to the stock boards in such a way as to enable those boards to offer advice which would be likely to be of value.

The recommendation that M. Pasteur's secret should be purchased for a lump sum shows clearly that the stock boards are not acquainted with facts which they ought to know before being called on to offer advice. M. Pasteur has no secret in connection with inoculation for protection from anthrax, or Cumberland disease. There is no trade secret, patented process, or secret chemical combination to be purchased. Many years ago in France M. Pasteur undertook to experiment on anthrax or Cumberland disease, as he has done on so many other diseases, and, after satisfying himself that he had discovered the bacilli of anthrax, and that the disease was preventable, he published a full account of his experiments and their results. The whole was made public—a free gift to science and the world at large—and is now on record for the use of anyone who cares to study the question. M. Pasteur's theories were treated in France, both on a large and small scale, in the severest-possible way, with the result that it was set beyond question that inoculation with cultivated virus gave absolute protection, at least for a considerable time to the inoculated animal. The only thing for the Mines Department to do is to settle what is the lowest salary for which a man competent to cultivate and preserve the virus so as to be able to supply it to pastoralists can be procured, and then to place the amount on the Estimates and engage the man required.

Pastoralists must learn to use the virus themselves. When supplied of the proper strength, there need be no more difficulty about this than about inoculating for pleuro-pneumonia or vaccinating human beings. There is no art required except in the preparation of the virus, and as the bacillæ are very difficult to destroy by any means, it would seem there should not be much difficulty in preserving and, when required, cultivating them down to the required degree of attenuation.

Surely the Minister for Mines, with his large staff of energetic and intelligent officers, should be able to do this much without calling on the stock boards for advice; but I suppose, like so many more cases in which the stock boards have been called on to advise without the smallest idea on the part of the Department of accepting such advice when given, this is only a plan to shirk responsibility or delay action of any kind.

July 1. I am, &c., W. E. ABBOTT.

MUNICIPAL COUNCILS.

GRANVILLE.

The fortnightly meeting of the above council was held in the council chambers, Granville, on Wednesday evening last. Present: His Worship the Mayor (Mr. John Nobbs, M.L.A.), Aldermen Harrison, Fewster, Forsyth, Ross, Marshall, Grimwood, Ritchie, and Unwin. The finance committee recommended the payment of accounts amounting to £620 14s. 6d. It was decided to send in letter to the Colonial Secretary intimating that the council were in favour of a provision in the Local Government Bill for the appointment of auditors to inspect municipal accounts. The following statement of accounts was laid upon the table:—East Ward: Proportion of loan and interest, £4297 8s. 6d.; amount expended, £2307 16s. 10d.; works in progress, £1954 3s. 3d.; balance, £35 8s. 5d.; works authorised, £880 16s. 8d.; deficiency at estimated cost, £845 8s. 3d. The letter from Mr. Abbott contained an enclosure from the Premier, dated June 12, 1888, to himself, stating that "in any case the matter shall be decided." Received; and after considerable discussion, it was resolved that a deputation of the whole council, with the members for Newtown, wait upon the Premier upon the subject. A circular was read from the Carrington Centennial Hospital for Convalescents' secretaries, asking for subscriptions towards it. Received, and the clerk was instructed to advertise in the daily papers, &c., that subscriptions would be received at his office. A circular and subscription-list was also received from the secretary of the Anti-Chinese League, which was ordered to be laid upon the counter of the council clerk's office, who was authorised to receive any subscriptions, &c. A letter was read from the secretary to the Water and Sewerage Board threatening the Mayor with a penalty of £50 for refusing to allow a Mr. Taylor to make copies of assessment, &c. An opinion from the legal adviser to the Municipal Association was also read, which supported and confirmed the action of the Mayor in the matter. The consideration of a report from the conference held between the Councils of Camperdown and Newtown upon a readjustment of the boundary between the two boroughs in Brigg's Estate was made an order of the day for next meeting. Co-operation was accorded to the same council in their agitation re a clause to be inserted in the Local Government Bill appointing an inspector of accounts. From A. Eggleton, asking that his application to ply an omnibus from the railway bridge, Illawarra line, to Circular Quay, be favourably recommended to the Transit Commissioners. Request complied with. From A. Fütterer, asking for permission to run an omnibus along Newman-street, from Union-street, instead of Erskineville-road, &c. Granted. A petition was presented from a number of residents in Newman-street, praying the council to cause a nuisance arising from smoke, sparks, and soot, &c., emitted from a local foundry, to be abated. Received, and the petitioners to be informed that the council has no power to interfere in the matter. Accounts amounting to £837 7s. 8d. were reported to have been paid under votes of appropriation since last meeting. Accounts amounting to £36 15s. 10d. were passed for payment. A statement of estimated receipts and present liability to Gas Company was submitted, which showed the liability to total £371 16s. 8d., and receipts £1702 16s. 8d. The treasurer reported that there was a debtor balance due to bank to date of £1475 6s. 10d. The clerk was instructed to apply for a copy of the proposed bylaws of the Water and Sewerage Board. The deputation appointed re the wood blocking were also directed to bring under the notice of the Colonial Secretary the question of the future disposal of the old watchhouse, now vacant. It was suggested by some of the aldermen that it should be developed into a branch of the Free Public Library, or the Technical College. Also that the land upon which the watchhouse stands and other vacant land adjacent, should be resumed for the purpose of a public park for the borough. Twenty-one motions standing on the business paper for the performance of necessary works, were made an order of the day for next meeting. The following motions were carried. By Alderman Jolly,—"That the Water Supply and Sewerage Board be furnished with a list of the streets in which water mains are not laid." "That, in the opinion of this council, it is necessary that steps be at once taken to urge upon the Government the necessity of passing a short Act to enable municipal councils to make bylaws to regulate the erection of buildings within their respective boundaries, and that a sub-committee be now appointed to furnish the Government with the necessary information to enable it to prepare the said Act. Such committee to consist of the Mayor, Aldermen Smith, Medway, Whately, Nelson, and the mover."

ALLEGED EMBEZZLEMENT.

A middle-aged man named Joseph Quirk was charged before Mr. Johnson at the Central Police Court to-day with embezzling the sum of £4 12s. 6d., the money of his master, R. C. Smithurst. The evidence went to show that the accused had been in the employ of the prosecutor as a vanman, and during the month of May he received certain moneys on account of his master for work done, which amounts, it was alleged, had not been paid in to his employer. He was also brought up to answer a further charge of embezzling the sum of 15s., also the property of his employer. It was alleged that the accused received the money on account of his master, and that he had failed to hand in the amount so paid. Accused was committed to take his trial on the two charges at the next Court of Quarter Sessions. Bail was allowed him.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

A FATAL FALL.

An inquest was held at the Coroner's Court, Chancery-square yesterday afternoon, before the City Coroner (Mr. H. Shiell, J.P.) relating to the death of a cab-driver named John Dye, who died in the Sydney Hospital at an early hour this morning, consequent upon injuries received through a fall from his cab. John Cargill, cab proprietor, deposed that he had known the deceased some years; he was a single man, about 30 years of age, and a native of England, he had been in witness employ as groom and cab-driver for about two months; he was of intemperate habits and subject to fits; he had a fit about 5.30 o'clock this morning; he was doing duty last night; he fell from his cab about a week ago in a fit and was taken to the hospital; deceased was about half an hour in the fit this morning, during which he was very violent; after his recovery he was placed in his cab, and asked if anyone should drive him home; he refused the offer and said he was allright, and he got into his seat and drove away; shortly after witness heard of his death.

A Juryman: If you knew the deceased was suffering from fits, don't you think you were endangering public life by letting him drive about?

Witness: A man has one fit, that is not to say he will always have them.

Charles Aaron, carriage driver, stated that the deceased was a native of London, 28 years of age to-morrow, and had served his time as a blacksmith on the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway; he was of intemperate habits; witness employed him for about five years' as cabdriver; did not know he was subject to fits.

Duncan Macdonald, police constable, doing duty at No. 1 station: About 7.15 this morning he was informed by a girl that a man had fallen off his cab in York-street; on proceeding to the spot saw the deceased lying on his face in the street; a cab was close by; the man was bleeding from a wound on the left side of the head, and was unconscious; placed him in the cab and took him to the Sydney Hospital.

Dr. Gwynne Hughes, resident medical officer of the Sydney Hospital, deposed that he was called to see the deceased at about 7.20 o'clock this morning; he had a large lacerated wound of the scalp, bleeding from the nose, and was dying; he died about five minutes after witness first saw him; he had made a post-mortem of the skull, and found the brain perfectly healthy, and there was no fracture; the spinal cord was lacerated, and there was a quantity of hæmorrhage in the spinal canal; death was due to compression of the spinal cord, consequent upon hæmorrhage, due to the injuries received.

The jury returned a verdict that deceased died from the effects of injuries accidentally received.

THE LATE DR. LANG.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Allow me to inform your correspondent "Progress" that his proposal cannot be entertained. The form which the memorial is to take was decided several years ago at a large public meeting held in the old Masonic Hall. It was resolved that a statue should be erected in Wynyard-square, and that if, after defraying the cost of it, there were sufficient funds in hand, they should be devoted to the foundation of one or more travelling scholarships in connection with the Technical College. I quite agree with Mr. Treatt that to erect a steeple to the Scots Church would be a gross misappropriation of the money, which the subscribers are not at all likely to sanction. I am, &c.,

SCRUTATOR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have noticed a letter, signed "Progress," having reference to the late Dr. Lang. With your permission, I beg to suggest that no monument be placed on the Scots Kirk hill, as your correspondent puts it; but, if a monument be decided on at a subsequent meeting or otherwise, it—i.e., the monument—should be in Wynyard-square. Your correspondent says, inter alia, that the City Council possibly could be arranged with; and as to what follows about paint, &c., in my opinion it is not worth any notice.

July 5. I am, &c., J. S. GILMORE.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY, JULY 6.

Jury Court (Before his Honor Mr. Justice INNES and a jury of four).

BOOTH V. REID AND OTHERS.

Mr. Davies, instructed by Mr. W. J. Taylor, appeared for the plaintiff. Defendant did not appear. This was an action brought by Robert Booth, solicitor, of Dubbo, to recover the sum of £124 4s. 8d., balance of account for professional services.

Verdict for the full amount claimed.

BANK OF AUSTRALASIA V. MARSHALL.

This case being settled was struck out of the list.

PRICE V. DAILY TELEGRAPH NEWSPAPER COMPANY.

Mr. Pilcher, Q.C., and Mr. Cohen, instructed by Messrs. Levy and Helmsley, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Rogers, Q.C., and Mr. O'Connor, instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen, for the defendants.

This was an action brought by William Price, of Queanbeyan, against the Daily Telegraph Newspaper Company, to recover damages for libel contained in an article published on the 24th November under the heading "News of the Day." Upon the case being called counsel informed his Honor that it had been settled, defendants admitting having made a mistake in the article complained of by the plaintiff in naming him as the Mr. Price residing at Queanbeyan who was connected with the subject-matter of the article, when in point of fact it was another Mr. Price living in the same town. Defendants had agreed to a verdict of 40s. and costs.

His HONOR, in directing the jury, said that the defendants admitted having made a mistake, and had expressed regret for having done so, and they had done what was perfectly right under the circumstances.

Verdict for 40s. His Honor certified for costs.

SAMPER V. GURNEY.

Mr. Wylie appeared on behalf of the plaintiff. The claim was for £132 for the carriage of four cargoes of stone for the defendant from Kiama to Sydney. Defendant appeared in person, and consented to a verdict for the amount claimed, with £50 costs.

No. 2 Jury Court.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice FOSTER.)

FERGUSSON V. MARSHALL.

Mr. Cohen, instructed by Messrs. Levy and Helmsley, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Wise, instructed by Mr. De Lissa, for the defendant. This was an action brought by William John Fergusson, solicitor, against William Marshall, to recover the sum of £400 on a promissory note made by defendant, and dated March 9. Mr. Wise said that his client did not deny the making of the note, and was quite able and willing to meet it, but he had a claim against the plaintiff for a larger sum than the amount of the promissory note. The matter was one of account which would have to be settled in Equity, but the defendant was willing that a verdict should go in that Court.

A verdict was returned for the amount claimed, with £4 interest.

BARTON V. SMAIL AND OTHERS.

Mr. G. H. Reid, instructed by Messrs. Want, Johnson, and Co., appeared for the plaintiff. Defendants appeared in person. This was an action brought by Francis Henry Barton, as Master in Equity, to recover the sum of £56 13s. 10d., amount of costs for which the defendants, Alexander Smail and Henry Adlam had rendered themselves liable by signing a bond on behalf of one James Erwin. It appeared that on the 22nd March, Erwin having previously been summoned before the Full Court to show cause why he should not be dealt with for contempt in refusing to attend and give evidence in the master's office, the defendants entered into the bond for his appearance when required, and also for the payment of the costs incurred in the matter, amounting to £56 13s. 10d., in the event of Erwin not paying the amount. He had failed to do so, and the Master in Equity now sued for the costs. The defence set up was that at the time of the signing of the bond defendants were not aware that the costs were included, as it was not read over to them before they executed it.

His HONOR directed the jury to find for plaintiff in the amount claimed, but at the same time refused speedy execution, and said that he could not help sympathising with the defendants.

Verdict for the amount claimed.

CAIRNS V. FITZGIBBON.

Dr. Donovan, instructed by Mr. Ashdown, appeared for the plaintiff. Defendant did not appear. This was an action of ejectment brought by Charles Cairns against Joseph Fitzgibbon to recover possession of the Clifton Arms, Botany-road, Waterloo.

The jury found in favour of plaintiff.

In Chambers.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice FOSTER.)

IN RE CATHERINE FRY.

His HONOR delivered his reserved judgment in this matter and said:—This is an application by Catherine Fry, wife of Frederick Fry, to have a sum of £142 10s. which had been placed to her credit in the Commercial Bank at Wilcannia as a fixed deposit, with £7 3s. accumulated interest, declared to be her separate property and paid out to her. The application is under the Married Women's Property Act, 42 Vic., No. 11, sec. 9. The wife's account is that she earned part of the money separately from her husband, and was given the remainder by her two sons by a former marriage as their earnings. Fry and his wife, with the two boys before mentioned, were hired on several stations since their marriage, some four years ago. Fry says they were hired and paid all together; his wife says they were hired and paid separately, although on the same stations. They are also at variance as to how the deposit in question was paid in. Mrs. Fry says £138 10s., partly her earnings, partly those of her sons, was deposited by her in her husband's name in the Commercial Bank at Milparinka in 1886, because she did not then know it could be placed in her own name; that that deposit with interest amounted to £142 10s., and that this money was placed by her in her own name as a fixed deposit in the Commercial Bank at Wilcannia, her husband being present, and that he told the bank manager the money was hers, and signed a consent to its being so banked. She also says that she was forced to leave her husband through his intemperate habits. Fry, the husband, says the money was all his and not her earnings; that he had £100 to his credit, all his own earnings, at the bank at Milparinka which, with £4 10s. interest, he transferred to his credit in the bank at Wilcannia; that, being afflicted with blindness, he caused this amount with £31 (his own earnings), and £7 (his wife's earnings) to be invested on deposit in his wife's name; she having her sight, and he having almost entirely lost his. The bank manager at Wilcannia says that husband and wife came together to the bank. Mrs. Fry made the deposit in her own name, her husband first having signed an authority for her so to do; that this authority purported to be revocable by his order in writing; that it is not true Mrs. Fry told him it was her money; that it was made up of a fixed deposit receipt for £100 (not £138), with interest £4 10s., and two cheques, one for £28, the other for £10. Assuming, as I do, that the manager's statement is correct, Mrs. Fry's must be entirely erroneous. Fry alleges that he is not of intemperate habits. A witness named Keeble, described as a general merchant, who has known him well for some years, states that to his knowledge he is a temperate man. Fry says his wife left him because he became helpless and blind, taking with her all his money and property which she could lay hands on, and leaving him penniless, and that she absconded with one Thomas, alias Rainbow. M'Mahon, a bailiff, says he found her and Rainbow on their way to Bourke, within a few miles of that place, with a waggonette and horse which she had taken, and upon which he levied under an execution against her husband, but which she tried to claim as bought with her earnings. Mrs. Fry, in a supplementary affidavit, says, "It is fact, as alleged in the affidavits filed against my application, that I went away with a man named John Thomas, but I found it impossible to live any longer with my husband." It may be remarked that Catherine Fry, to one affidavit, attaches her mark, while to another, as well as to some authenticated documents, she writes a fair signature. I am asked on the part of the applicant to give further time to file further affidavits, or to direct further inquiry. It was the duty of the applicant to make out her claim. She has already filed an affidavit in answer to those against her application, and she has still failed to satisfy me that this £42 10s. was her separate earnings. Further inquiry at such distant places would case great expense, out of all proportion to the money involved. I therefore dismiss the application except as to £7, which the husband himself alleges to be the wife's earnings, with 7s. interest thereon. This sum of £7 7s. I direct to be paid by the bank to the applicant or her solicitor, after deducting therefrom £2 2s. for a part of their costs, which I fix at £4 4s., and allow to the bank in equal shares against Frederick Fry and the applicant. The bank will, therefore, be entitled to retain £2 2s. of the moneys of Frederick Fry, and no costs will be allowed to either the husband or wife on this application.

SYDNEY NEWSPAPER COMPANY, LIMITED, V. MUIR.

In this case (adjourned from last Monday) Mr. H. Davies, instructed by Mr. M'Culloch, applied for a rule nisi for a new trial on the ground of an erroneous decision of Mr. District Court Judge Dowling.

The plaintiff company are the proprietors of the Sunday Times newspaper, and the defendant is a spirit merchant who entered into an agreement with the paper for the insertion of 52 advertisements of a brand of whisky. The price fixed upon was £100, payable monthly, and the plaintiffs were compelled to sue for the first quarter's instalment of £25. The defendant set up a number of defences which were found against him, and also the defence that as the paper was published on a Sunday the contract could not be enforced. On the authority of ex parte Rogerson, the case in which a man was fined for selling a copy of the Sunday Times in the street, the learned District Court Judge found for the defendant. Mr. Justice Foster observing that the cases seemed distinguishable granted the rule for a new trial, assessing the security at £30.

Equity Court.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justi[illegible] OWEN, Chief Judge in Equity.)

WARD V. WARD.

Mr. Lusk appeared for the defendant in [illegible] of a petition praying for an order that the plaintif[illegible] give security for the due care and custody o[illegible] yacht Titania, which is the subject of litigation [illegible] the parties. Mr. C. J. Manning appeared for th[illegible]iff to oppose the application, and pointed out th[illegible]dant had already consented to an injunction to [illegible] him from dealing with the yacht in any way. It [illegible] that since obtaining the injunction, plaintiff, durin[illegible]rary absence of the defendant, had forcibly ta[illegible]ssel out of the possession of the person in whose c[illegible] had been left, and then commenced a suit to compe[illegible]dant to make a legal transfer of the ya[illegible]m. Defendant now desired that plaintiff should be [illegible] to give security for the due care and maintenance of the yacht pending the hearing of the suit.

His HONOR considered that the order asked for was unnecessary, and dismissed the application.

RE TRUSTS OF THE WILL OF THOMAS JOHNSON, DECEASED.

His HONOR appointed Roy Dudley Davis, solicitor, guardian of persons and estates of the infant children of Thomas Johnson, the younger, and to collect rents.

BOBBIN V. BOBBIN.

Mr. Wise appeared on behalf of plaintiff, and applied that his Honor should reopen his decree in the suit. Mr. C. J. Manning appeared to oppose.

His HONOR dismissed the application with costs, and said that plaintiff, having executed a voluntary conveyance without power of revocation in favour of defendant, was not entitled to come to the Court and ask to have that deed set aside.

TURNBULL V. JUDE.

Mr. Wylie appeared for the plaintiff, and applied for an interim injunction pending the hearing to restrain the defendant from disposing of an interest on a coal mine at Lithgow, plaintiff alleging that one Doyle, acting as agent for the defendant, had sold him half the said interest, but that the defendant disputed the agency.

The injunction was granted until Thursday next.

CHADWICK V. MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF SYDNEY AND OTHERS.

Arguments were resumed upon this demurrer and concluded, and his Honor said that the point to be determined appeared to be a new one, and in some respects involved some slight points of difficulty. Therefore he should like to consider his judgment and put it in writing.

BANKRUPTCY COURT.—FRIDAY.

(Before his Honor Mr. Justice DEFFELL.)

JUDGMENT.

Re John Henry Wordsworth. Motion to have Mr. Cyrus Edward Fuller declared a partner with the bankrupt.

His HONOR, in delivering judgment in this case, stated that he had fully examined the authorities cited by counsel with regard to the question of jurisdiction, and it appeared to him that he had full power to adjudicate in the case. He had gone fully into the evidence, and the proceedings and exhibits, and he had no doubt that any judge or jury would have arrived at the conclusion that the respondent was a partner of the bankrupt. This was clear from a letter written by the respondent in which he undertook to endorse the bankrupt's bills of trade, and to accept half the profits of the Parramatta business. His Honor ruled that the respondent should be declared a partner with the bankrupt in the shop and grocery business carried on by bankrupt at Parramatta, and that he should be liable for debts contracted in the said business, the Registrar to certify as to the total and separate amounts of the debts.

REVIEWS.

Memoirs of Count Horace De Viel Castel.—A chronicle of the principal events, political and social, during the reign of Napoleon III., from 1851 to 1854, translated and edited by Charles Bousfield. Two volumes. (Remington and Co., London, 1888.)

This is a lively and fascinating book. The author had exceptional opportunities of gathering information, and he seems to have been as impartial in setting it down as perhaps it is possible for a State official to be. That his pages should carry so many allusions to licentiousness and duplicity is a fault that must be charged against his subject, and not his own good taste. How else could he faithfully reflect some of the most prominent of the characters he had to deal with, or enter at all upon what he terms the "foul arena of politics." His notes begin from just before the Coup d'Etat, and include the marriage of the Emperor to Mademoiselle Montijo, the visit of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert to Paris, the circumstances connected with the Crimean and Franco-Austrian wars, the Italian revolution, and numerous episodes and anecdotes of the Imperial Family and Court. The translator has taken the responsibility of making large excisions from the original, and certainly if the parts omitted were more outspoken than what remains, the author may well have claimed credit for more than ordinary candour. It is interesting to notice the development of his opinion of Louis Napoleon. Near the commencement of his notes (February 18, 1851) appears the following entry:—"Up to now I have been unable to form any accurate opinion of the Prince's character, and I cannot determine whether he is a calm and resolute opportunist or a man who is swayed by doubt. He refused the throne when it was offered him by Changarnier, and now wants a prorogation, which is after all one of the stepping stones to it. I recognise one great quality in him—he has courage; one great political virtue, reticence. . . . . He is not without finesse and cunning; as regards his disinterestedness, I do not believe he sets so little store upon the permanence of his power as he pretends in his presidential messages. He is ambitious, and a firm believer in his destiny, which from childhood he has asserted will one day make him ruler of France." Later on he associates the Emperor with the worst features of his Court and Government, and not simply as a passive sharer of the responsibility. "We live in an age when adultery is rewarded," is his summing up, and by way of illustration he cites by name and office examples in plenty. His estimate of French diplomacy is by no means complimentary, as may be gathered from the following note:—"In the course of conversation we talked a good deal about French diplomatists—a topic, perhaps, of no great importance, considering that one-third of them are fops, another third blockheads, and the remainder have only just passable qualities enough to make them useful." After illustrations from the doings of Baron de Lagrenée in Russia and China, and of Baron de Bourgoing, a plenipotentiary in Spain, he adds, "After 1848 we sent a fiddler to Naples, a melo-dramatic writer to Lisbon, a professor of languages to Frankfort, and to Berlin the son of an astronomer, a barrister of questionable repute, who spent his time in running after actresses and playing dominoes." The references to England and her foreign policy are frequent and thoroughly characteristic. A jealous animus pervades them all, and yet there runs through most of them a vein of respect. "The sole object of the English alliance," he remarks, "is to range us among her satellites, and make us in a sort of manner her police constable. The interests of France should lead us in another direction. It is contrary to all sane policy to support England's ambitious views with regard to Sicily, and to facilitate her complete absorption of India. She has raised the cry of 'Stop thief!' against Russia in order to mask her own dishonest projects; no one has even the right to look at India, and to facilitate the defence of that immense colony, consisting of whole kingdoms under the subjection and sway of a company of London merchants, she now wishes to get a footing in some Persian province. . . . . Our Ministry forgets that, to be on good terms with England, you must make yourself respected. She must be bullied. She is like women who adore those husbands who beat them. Look at America. America insults England, scoffs at her, hunts her Ministry out of the country, and violates her treaties, and yet England stands it all; no expression on her physiognomy betrays the pain she suffers from the kicks she receives behind." The notes come down to the middle of 1864, and thorough as is the author's devotion to his country's best interests, this is his rather gloomy conclusion:—"At the present day France is isolated; she has allowed Denmark to perish, and encouraged Prussian ambition in the hope of obtaining the borders of the Rhine. Vain hope! She has been tricked by Mons. de Bismarck, and in order to hide her discomfiture now declares that she has no interest whatever in anything that happens in Germany. The Emperor still follows the policy of the conspirator; he knows no other; his Cabinet is his workshop, where plots are hatched against all other Governments. It has come to such a pass that his word and his treaties are no longer looked upon as binding. We are hastening to our decline; that which was young about the Emperor has now grown old, and that which but four years ago was not quite corrupt, is now entirely so." A dismal forecast, which had only to wait a few years for its fulfilment. But the chronicler does not seem, with all his patriotism, to have had large enough faith in his country's rallying power. At all events his notes end despairingly, when they might have foretold, on the strength of previous examples, how France would rise again from the bitter defeat to which she was then hastening.

The Life of John William Colenso, D.D., Bishop of Natal, by the Rev. Sir George W. Cox, Bart., M.A. Two volumes. (London: W. Ridgeway, 1888.)

This elaborate work, of over 1400 pages, will probably suffer from the lateness of its appearance and the fulness of its information. Nearly five years have elapsed since Bishop Colenso's death, and weighty as were many of the questions with which he was identified, few of them can now be expected to command very general interest. Prominent amongst them were the Bishop's contest with ecclesiastical authorities for what he deemed liberty of thought and speech, and his manly championship of the Zulus against the impolitic and harsh treatment they suffered at the hands of his own countrymen. The Bishop's part in those two matters demanded permanent record, and readers possessed of the necessary leisure to follow his biographer through the piles of letters, extracts, and original matter he has put into these volumes will find a warm-hearted and resolute Englishman at the back of them. That Bishop Colenso was an earnest and vigorous thinker and always manifested the courage of his convictions, even his most pronounced opponents readily admitted. But these volumes exhibit with equal clearness characteristics which his enemies failed or refused to see in him. Amongst them were "genuine and hearty loyalty for the Church of England, for which throughout his whole life he worked and fought," and faithfulness to the idea that "the Church is a living society under a living head." His biographer does not by any means seek to gloss over, or even tone down, any of the bishop's extreme positions with regard to the composition and growth of the Old Testament Scriptures. He states the case fairly, and maintains that Colenso's views are in full accordance with the law of the Church of England as decided by her own tribunals. He goes further, and asserts "that only in men like him the Church of England has the true supporters and friends who can guide her safely through the troublesome times which all must feel to be near at hand." He speaks of Colenso's platform as being almost identical with that of another great churchman who also suffered, though less acutely, from misjudgments—Dean Stanley. "In short," he remarks, "whatever may be said of the Dean may be said not less truly of the Bishop. With his friend, the Bishop shared the conviction that underneath the sentiments and usages which have accumulated round the forms of Christianity, there is a class of principles, a religion, as it were, behind the religion, which, however dimly expressed, has given them whatever vitality they possess." Both the Bishop and the Dean felt assured that the sentiments and usages of the great society which forms the Church of England must, like those of other Churches, have vitality, so far as they have any, by virtue of this religion which underlies them all." That men of this stamp should often fail to be comprehended, and should necessarily fall into controversy, goes without saying. The biographer's narrative records, therefore, only what might have been easily foretold, when it describes how that "for the Bishop of Natal the battle with intolerance and superstition in England was followed by a warfare not less harassing and wearing against national wrong-doing in Southern Africa."

Miscellaneous Essays. By R. W. Church, Dean of St. Paul's. London: M'Millan and Co. 1888.

This is one of a set of volumes made up of reprints of Essays and Reviews by Dean Church, previously published in various periodicals from 1843 to 1887. Articles on Dante, St. Anselm, Wordsworth, Sordello, Bacon, and Spenser are to form five volumes in succession to the present, which contains reprints of papers on the Essays of Montaigne, Brittany, Cassiodorus, the Letters of Pope Gregory I., and the Early Ottomans. Dean Church is of course well known as a scholarly and thoughtful writer on kindred subjects, and his published lectures and sermons have long been favourite reading with a large class for the healthy Christian spirit they express. His writings possess that charm of earnestness of thought and freshness of style that seem to mark the school to which he belongs, and those who look for the same qualities in these collected essays of Dean Church will not be disappointed. The article on Montaigne is especially attractive:—

"Montaigne," he says, "is one of those writers who have first surprised and then shocked their age, and then become its most popular author. He was the first to try a very great and a very simple experiment. . . . In an age of stiffness, when nobody ventured to publish without the airs and parade of a master by profession, he bethought himself of writing down, without any restriction as to subject or manner, the result of his experience of life, and trying whether, among readers of books, sympathy with the matter would overweigh the effect of an unwonted and homespun form."

The writer goes on to discuss in a charming way the nature of the essay in its present form, and the difference from the old style of the pompous masters, due to the influence of that agnostic Que scais je of Montaigne. Other reasons given for the attention attracted by the Essais are their singularly rich and vigorous language, and their tone of easy and indulgent gaiety. Montaigne was one of the discoverers of the genius and power of the French language, and he had feeling and sagacity to see that these were to be found in the speech of common life. "I refuse no phrase," he said, "of those which run in the French streets." "Puisse je me servir que de mots qui servent aux halles à Paris."

The second essay, on "Brittany," is founded on material supplied by Emile Louvestre, and T. A. Trollope's "Summer in Brittany," with two other books on the same subject by Cambry and Pitre-Chevalier. It presents a curious picture of the life lived by the peasantry of this forgotten corner of old France, where "dark old Brittany goes on unmoved, unsympathising—believing and working as it and its fellow-nations did five hundred years ago," where the "old-fashioned Breton combs his long black hair, and walks about unashamed in his bragou-bras, turns his back on the future and looks only on the past, on his dead ancestors and the cross, and profoundly distrusts all improvement in the world":—

"A grand, sublime, miraculous past is contrasted in his mind with a poor uninteresting present, its mere appendix, and a future without form or hope until the last day. The past is to him the great reality of the world—the reality, not of dilettantism, of forced reverence, of partial or factitious interest, but of lifelong faith."

"Cassiodorus" is a paper which resolves itself into an historical inquiry into the conditions of the sixth century, when its subject lived. He was a State official, the Italian secretary of Theodoric the Goth. He was also a man of letters and a natural philosopher, and in the 12 books of his Variæ he has left us a detailed account of the scheme of government conceived by the Gothic king. The article on the "Letters of Pope Gregory I." is cast in the same spirit, and deals with a somewhat similar subject. We get pictures of the times and manners of the ages in which these men lived, painted from life in fragments taken from their own letters and literary memorials. Although the writer does not profess to attempt the task, his paper on the letters of Gregory the Great gives a vivid and life-like portrait of the man who, in a measure, founded the Papal power. Besides being a pope and a theologian, he was a public man and a Church reformer, to whom the West owes in a great degree its forms, its language, and its music. He ranks next to Augustine as the teacher of the Middle Ages, and it was under his direction that another Augustine entered on his mission to the Saxon Ethelbert.

The essay on the "Early Ottomans" has more movement and life in it than any of the others, as it deals with a more stirring subject. The story is rapidly but brightly told, and quickened here and there by vivid personal portraits, sketched with rapid touches of the pen. Of these is the description of Timour the Tartar, who swept down on the Ottoman Power with his Mongol hordes, when, as the Greek chronicler sonorously has it, "Bajazet sat in Brusa, and the lofty tree of his prosperity was laden with fruit," and the usurper who was to shake its branches was already at his gates. Timour, says Dean Church, was

"A grimly earnest, lame old man, with long white hair—hair which had been white from his infancy—flowing from his massy head and open brow; a man who hated jests and lies, grave and weighty in his sayings. . . . A man who never forgot, never desisted, never regretted the past, or repented of what he had done; a man before whom the gems and gold of Asia had been showered, and who had all its glories and its delights at his command, yet after nearly half-a-century of war and victory was neither enervated nor wearied; and who, in the height of his pride, took pleasure in contrasting the magnificence of his fortune with his crippled body, and in ostentatiously confessing that in all that he had achieved or won he felt himself but the frail and feeble instrument in the hand of God."

The contents of this volume are attractive enough to suggest the possibilities of the volumes that are to follow, and make them looked for by admirers of Dean Church and his line of thought in these matters, and his chaste vigour of diction and style.

THE MINISTER FOR WORKS AND MR. FLETCHER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—A paragraph appears in your issue of this date purporting to be the result of a conversation between the Prime Minister for New South Wales and the Minister for Works. During the conversation alluded to you state that Mr. Sutherland "assured Sir Henry Parkes that he never made the statement attributed to him by Mr. Dibbs and Mr. Fletcher, to the effect that if he could have had his way Mr. Goodchap should have been appointed to the position of Chief Commissioner on the new Railway Board. Mr. Sutherland declares that, although he had always held that Mr. Goodchap was an exceedingly able man, when he found that the Cabinet were in favour of appointing a gentleman associated with the railways of the United Kingdom he never said a word with reference to the matter, either to a member of the Opposition or anyone else."

After the many glaring insults which the Minister for Works has unblushingly accepted at the hands of his chief, I am not at all surprised at his eating his own words in regard to the appointment of Mr. Goodchap as Chief Commissioner. Now, I unhesitatingly repeat that Mr. Sutherland told me that, in his opinion, Mr. Goodchap was the ablest man procurable for the position, and that he would do all in his power to secure it for him. However, since he has so far forgotten himself as to deny that part of the statement, I will tell the public more, viz., that he said he had a difficult battle to fight, and hoped Mr. Goodchap's friends on both sides of the House would strengthen his hands to secure him the appointment of Chief Commissioner. It is well-known amongst the friends of Messrs. Sutherland and Goodchap that the former has always been favourable to the latter getting the appointment. Nay, more, the opponents of Mr. Goodchap for the position have been afraid, since the introduction of the bill, that Mr. Sutherland's influence would secure him the post. Neither Mr. Dibbs nor myself could hope, by making the statement, to reverse the decision which had previously been arrived at in reference to Mr. Eddy; nor would I have referred to it but for the Minister for Works having cheered the statement of his chief that the Cabinet were unanimous in the selection. Notwithstanding the statement of the Minister, I now believe that John Sutherland would this day have carried out his expressed intention to Mr. Dibbs, to others, and myself, had the administration of his department not been usurped by the Colonial Secretary, who invariably rules his Ministers in the same arbitrary and domineering way that is resorted to by the Autocrat of All the Russias.

Further, I may add that I but reecho the sentiments of many of Mr. Sutherland's greatest admirers when I say that 10 years ago he would have had his way in the appointment, or Sir Henry Parkes would have had to find another Minister. It is well known that when Mr. Goodchap was first appointed, Sir Henry Parkes strongly favoured another gentleman for the position. To Mr. Sutherland's credit, however, he claimed to be the best judge, and made it a sine quâ non with the Cabinet that either his selection would fill the position or he would sever the connection. The difference between the Colonial Secretary and the Minister for Works was compromised by the appointment being deferred, but Mr. Sutherland had his way in the end. Now things have altered. The Colonial Secretary exhibits more of the autocrat than ever, and Mr. Sutherland is less jealous of his position as a Minister, and between the two Mr. Goodchap has been sacrificed.

Hoping you will insert this in justice to myself,

I am, &c., JAMES FLETCHER.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL.

Mr. Bland Holt's revival of the "New Babylon" with its sensational and realistic scenery, has been drawing good houses to the Theatre Royal all week, and now the last six nights of the piece are announced, as it is to be withdrawn on Saturday next to make way for a grand production of Mr. Pettitt's drama, "Taken from Life," which will be played for six nights only. During the remaining at last week of Mr. Bland Holt's stay in Sydney "Alone in London" will be produced, with an exceptionally strong cast.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

The successful drama of the "Lights o' London" has been drawing large audiences at Her Majesty's Theatre during the past week, and the drama is, from all appearances, likely to run for a long time. The great water scene, in which Mr. Rignold makes a heroic plunge into the Regent's Park Canal, and comes out dripping wet causes the wildest excitement at every production; and Mr. Rignold's acting is well sustained by Miss Roland Watts Phillips, Mr. J. R. Greville, and the other members of this strong company.

CRITERION THEATRE.

Messrs. Brough and Boucicault's Comedy Company have been nightly, during the last week, causing immense amusement to crowded audiences at the Criterion Theatre by their performance of Mr. Mark Melford's amusing comedy "Turned Up," a piece which contains all the ridiculous elements necessary for the success of a farcial comedy. The cast is a remarkably strong one, including as it does Messrs. Robert Brough, E. W. Royce, and Dion Boucicault, jun., and Mesdames E. Romer, Emma Temple, Mrs. Robert Brough, &c. The piece is likely to have a long run, and no change in the programme is yet announced. On Saturday next a matinee performance of "Turned Up" will be given.

GAIETY THEATRE.

M. Tessero's French Comedy Company open their season in Sydney at the Gaiety Theatre this evening, under influential patronage. An attractive programme is announced, comprising the comedies "L'Etincelle" and "La Joie de la Maison," and the performance should be interesting to all who understand the French language or to those who desire to improve their knowledge of it. For the information of those who are unacquainted with French, we may state that books of the words, both in French and English, may be obtained from Messrs. Paling and Co. On Monday night there will be an entire change of programme, when the comedy entitled "Le Voyage de Monsieur Perrichon" will be produced.

NEW OPERA HOUSE.

A short dramatic season of 24 nights only will be commenced at the New Opera House this evening, when the talented actress Miss Ada Ward will appear as Mercy Merrick in Wilkie Collins's great drama the New Magdalen, a part which she has played with great success in London. Miss Ward will be supported by a strong company, which includes Mr. Arthur A. Lawrence, who has been specially engaged for the season, Miss Kate Douglas, and Mrs. Edwin Palmer.

ROYAL STANDARD.

Mr. Frank Smith's Dramatic Company, with Miss Agnes Thomas as the leading star, played Mr. Paul Meritt's melodrama of "Run to Earth" for the last time at the Standard Theatre last night, and to-night they will produce the well-known drama of "East Lynne," in which Miss Agnes Thomas will play Lady Isabel and Madame Vine.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

Mr. Frank M. Clark's New All-Star Combination continues to draw crowded audiences at the Academy of Music, and the programme which had been running during the week was presented for the last time yesterday evening. To-night there will be an entire change of programme, and the items will include the first part scene, "An Oriental Palace."

THE ALHAMBRA.

The Alhambra Music Hall has been well attended during the week. The programme, which is an exceedingly attractive one, will be repeated this evening. The usual change in the programme will take place on Monday evening, when a number of new items will be included in the bill.

THE AQUARIUMS.

As usual, there will be a number of special attractions at the Bondi and Coogee Aquariums this afternoon. Those who patronise the Coogee Palace Aquarium will have the opportunity of witnessing the peformances of the Texas horsemen. They are to give another exhibition of horse and cattle taming. A fresh lot of wild unmanageable horses have been obtained, together with the celebrated Clift horse exhibited on Saturday last. Texas Charlie is to catch and ride wild steers, and give an exhibition of the Mexican mode of breaking cattle. The exhibition promises to be one of a sensational character, and should attract a very large number of spectators.

At the Bondi Aquarium Senorita Florence Amoretti, the lady ventriloquist, will give a performance, and Arthur Francis will give an exhibition of sleight of hand and novelties. The skating rink will be open, and a good band will be in attendance during the afternoon.

There will be the usual attractions at the Manly Aquarium.

SKATING RINKS.

The managers of the different skating rinks are continually adding novelties to amuse and entertain their numerous patrons, and it will be seen by a reference to our business columns that many attractions are offered for this afternoon and evening. The Crystal Palace Rink has been attended very largely during the past week, the special Wednesday evening having been a great feature in many respects. This afternoon there will be a grand fashionable performance, and the eau-de-cologne fountain will play. A grand carnival will be held on the 25th instant. The proprietors of the Elite Rink in Elizabeth-street, opposite the Exhibition Building, have engaged Miss Mabel Sylvester, the champion lady skater of the world, and her performances during the week have been the theme of admiration. The City Rink, which is conducted in the Old Masonic Hall on a patent composite floor, has lost none of its popularity. The football matches on the rollers, which were recently initiated, have proved intensely exciting and amusing. The Paragon Rink in Pitt-street, Her Majesty's Rink at Newtown, and the other well-known and popular rinks have shown rather an increase in the attendances than a falling off. Excellent bands are provided at the majority of them.

MERCANTILE ROWING CLUB BALL.

Owing to the fact of certain alterations having been effected at the Town Hall, and the committee not considering that place so convenient as heretofore, they have been compelled to remove the scene of their annual festival, and we are requested to state that the Mercantile Rowing Club Ball has been postponed for one day, and will be held at Messrs. Needs' rooms, Nithsdale, Liverpool-street, on Thursday next, the 12th instant. A list of the committee, from whom tickets may be obtained, appears in our advertising columns.

Major Dane, the American orator, has just completed a tour of Victoria, where he has been received with enthusiasm. He gave some nineteen lectures in Melbourne to delighted audiences, including special engagements with the Royal Geographical Society and the Bankers' Institute of Australasia. He is announced to give two lectures in Sydney on Tuesday and Friday next, on "Jas. A. Garfield, second martyred President of America," and "New Zealand, the Wonderland of Oceana," respectively, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

The choir and friends of the Redfern Presbyterian Church gave a concert on Wednesday evening. Several glees were rendered by a choir of 36 voices, conducted by Mr. Harry Chandler, the organist of the church. Mr. Hardy contributed to the evening's enjoyment by his clever violin solos, and among the vocalists Miss Wright received an enthusiastic recall for "The Battlefields of Scotland." Mr. G. Weaver deserves praise for his rendition of "True Till Death." During the evening Mr. Chandler played several solos on the organ in good style, and also accompanied the various items with his usual good taste.

The Balmain Musical Union hold their quarterly concert on Wednesday next, 11th instant, in the lecture-hall, Campbell-street, Balmain, on which occasion the cantata of "The Sleeping Beauty" is to be reproduced. Mr. Cowen, the composer of this cantata, has arrived in Melbourne to conduct the musical ceremonies at the International Exhibition.

One of the attractions of the coming week is the athletic tournament to be given on the 11th by the members of the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium, who will be assisted by a contingent from the 5th Scottish Rifles and the Naval Artillery Volunteers. The musical part of the evening has been entrusted to the well-known orchestra of Mr. W. J. B. Mote.

On Monday, July 16, a benefit concert to Madame Greenwood and her talented daughters will be given at the Protestant Hall.

Our Brisbane correspondent telegraphs that "Dorothy" is still being played with great success at the Opera House. Mr. Dampier is doing good business at the Gaiety. The Jungfrau Kapelle performances at the Theatre Royal are attracting large audiences.

THE PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Now that the Public Works Committee is soon to commence its duties, would it not be as well that the outside world had some explanation as to how this committee is to work. Is it to be secret? Or are opposing parties to any scheme to have an opportunity to make known their views? I am induced to ask this from views held forth by the press and public speakers already. The first, in a sub-leader, finds exception to Mr. Copeland because he has admitted that he was opposed to the proposed route, Glen Innes to Inverell, and now favours the Guyra or Kentucky routes. A speaker at a public meeting held in Inverell a few nights ago congratulated his hearers that the cause he advocated was all right, because Messrs. Abbott, Brunker, M'Court, and Slattery had pledged themselves to support the Glen Innes route.

If such tactics are already at work, what confidence can the public have in this long-looked-for reform, especially if it is to work in the dark? I think you would be doing a good work by giving the necessary publicity to this matter.

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

THE TURF.

The programme framed by the Sydney Hunt Club forms the attraction for the sporting community to-day at Rosehill, and the varied character of the bill of fare, which includes flat and hurdle racing as well as steeplechasing, should command a numerous attendance. The facilities for reaching the popular trysting place by rail and river are fully notified in our business columns, and visitors to the course will study their convenience by securing through tickets, including admission to the reserve they intend to patronise, at the Central Booking Office, George-street, or at Redfern Station. The business of the day commences at 1.35 p.m., with the Hurdle Race, in which 13 still remain, and though Marksman heads the list with 11st. 12lb., that impost should not prevent him giving a good account of himself. It is probable that Grafton will be reserved for the Steeplechase, but, should he be sent for the Hurdles, he will take a deal of beating, and Society, Glenvale, and Melton read about the best of the others. A large field may be expected to go to the post in the Flying Handicap; but Lady Lovel should experience no difficulty in securing the prize, and most trouble may come from The Miner and Lady Marion. Grafton has been placed at the top of the tree in the Open Steeplechase with a flattering burden of 12st. 7lb., but the style in which he topped the fences on the occasion of his last appearance at Rosehill, should sufficiently indicate his ability to distinguish himself once more over the same course, while Melton, Scobeloff, and Pestal may follow him home. Iona and Saturn should furnish the winner of the Selling Race. Southerly Buster, Elsie, and Sloth appear to be about the most leniently treated in the Hunt Club Handicap, and whichever Mr. Kelso entrusts with the responsibility should about win, though danger may come from Simon or Here's Luck. The Members' Handicap looks as though it were a good thing for Diomed, with Ennisvale and Orator as the best of the others. The full programme in the order of running, and from which the scratched horses have been removed, is published in another part of this issue.

The A. J. C. authorities have at length taken some steps towards regulating the meetings of the principal racing institutions within reasonable distance of the metropolis during the coming season, and with that object in view have requested the secretaries of the different clubs to forward, on or before October 1, a list of their fixtures for the season of 1888-89. Considering the recent unpleasantness that was brought about owing to the clashing of dates, the action proposed to be taken by the premier racing institution has not been taken any too soon, and in view of the inevitable extension of the national sport during the coming season a proper distribution of the dates will be hailed as a decided improvement on past arrangements, or rather want of arrangements.

The Queensland racehorse Theorist was struck out of the A. J. C. Metropolitan Stakes yesterday.

The bill of fare framed by the Sydney Driving Park Club, Limited, for their July meeting attracted a numerous entry yesterday, the nominations totalling 98, distributed as follows:—Time Handicap Trot, 31; Free for All Trot, 5; Dwarf Pony Trot, 9; Handicap Galloway Race, 22; Handicap Pony Race, 15; Selling Race, 16. The entrants for the Free for All Trot are particularly good, and include the three imported performers, Doncaster, Grey Echo, and Miss Moffatt.

The following scratchings were posted yesterday at the office of the Rosehill Racing Club in connection with the race meeting which takes place this afternoon, under the auspices of the Sydney Hunt Club:—Flying Handicap: Quicksilver. Members' Handicap: Mazeppa, Julia Ann, Wayfarer, Comet.

The racecourse privileges connected with the annual meeting of the Clarence River Jockey Club were sold on Monday last under the hammer, and realised nearly £200.

The racing fixtures that require attention this afternoon are as under:—Nominations for the principal handicaps to be decided at the annual meeting of the Richmond River Turf Club, to be held on August 1 and 2; general entry for the annual reunion in connection with the Hay Jockey Club; and general entry for the annual meeting of the Clarence River Jockey Club, which takes place on the 11th and 12th instant.

The weights for the handicaps in connection with the race meeting inaugurated by Mr. W. Sidney, to commemorate the opening of the Centennial Hotel, Newcastle, are promised to-day, and the adjustments for the Jerilderie handicaps should see the light on the same date.

THE ENGLISH FOOTBALL TEAM IN ADELAIDE.

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

The Mayor, Sir E. T. Smith, welcomed the English football team to-day in the Council-chambers. There were present, besides the visitors, representatives of the senior cricket and football associations, besides many gentlemen interested in football. Sir E. T. Smith, as President of the Cricketing Association, extended a most cordial welcome to the Englishmen, Mr. Gill, B.A., chairman of the Football Association, also welcomed them. Mr. Seddon, captain of the English team, referred to the interpretation put on the rules by colonial umpires, especially in regard to little marking. Many of the so-called little marks were undoubtedly not kicked the right distance of two yards. They were mistaken in thinking that they could introduce some of the Rugby game to the colonial game, but they recognised that they should play little marks to win. The visit would be the means of introducing the Australian team to England, and if the colonial game was to become national it would have to be introduced to the schools. The healths of the English team were drunk.

The matches arranged for the Agricultural Society's Ground are—Newtown v. Burwood, Wallaroo v. Rosedale, and Balmain v. combined juniors.

A meeting of the committee of the Southern British Football Association was held on Tuesday evening last, Mr. J. M'Gregor in the chair. Caledonians, at Sydney. The intercolonial match with Victoria, on the Association Cricket Ground, on 28th July, was the principal matter under discussion, and arrangements were advanced another stage. It was decided to have two test matches, on the 14th and 21st instants, so as to enable the committee to see our men play, and judge of their respective merits.

CYCLING.

It is announced elsewhere that a 25-mile bicycle race will take place this afternoon on the Ashfield Recreation Ground between Libeau and Clark. Both men have done good work in training, and an excellent race is anticipated.

AQUATICS.

THE HANLAN-KEMP RACE.

The articles of agreement binding the proposed match between Edward Hanlan and Peter Kemp for the sculling championship and £500 a side will, it is understood, be signed at Beach's Hotel, King-street, on Monday or Tuesday evening.

TEEMER AND KEMP.

It is currently reported in aquatic circles that the champion oarsman of America, John Teemer, intends to leave the United States for Australia in the month of August. We have heard a great deal of Teemer's projected movements, and of his intention to challenge Kemp, and so forth; but up to date very little business has been done. It must be admitted that the American sculler challenged the Hawkesbury sculler to row for the championship and 2500 dollars a-side, the said race to take place on the Nepean; but Teemer must have known that Kemp would not row on the Nepean, or, to speak more correctly, he will not risk the championship on that river. He has held it against Hanlan on the Parramatta, and is determined to row for its possession on no other river. Teemer does not appear to have an authorised backer out here, for no one has come forward to make a deposit for a race with Kemp, and as nothing is known of the American's intentions the match with Hanlan will be taken on first. Teemer has wealthy backers who are thorough sportsmen, and it is considered certain that he will be matched with the Hawkesbury native before the end of the year.

STANSBURY AND SEARLE.

Considerable interest is felt in aquatic circles regarding the result of the forthcoming race between James Stansbury, the Shoalhaven sculler, and Henry E. Searle, the Clarence River oarsman, which takes place on the Parramatta River next Friday afternoon. The tide on that occasion will be about the last of the ebb, and very suitable for a fair and straight-away contest. Both of these young rowers are very much fancied by their own backers and friends, and the issue of this race will probably settle once and for aye who is to be regarded as the better sculler of the two. The men meet on this occasion for the first time, and as both of them have beaten Julius Wulf, a man of great courage and determination, a magnificent struggle should take place. Stansbury is known to possess considerable strength. He is a tall, well-built young fellow, who can handle a pair of sculls in good style, and can be relied on to pull a distance. On the other hand, Searle has a great deal in his favour. He is a very speedy sculler, and shows really good form. When rowing against Wulf a few weeks ago he astonished those who had never seen him afloat before by paddling away from the plodding Sydney oarsman just as frequently as he desired to, and then when he had rowed his man completely out he dashed off in an easy and graceful manner, and passed the Brothers an easy winner in tolerably good time for the distance. Searle was never called upon to exert himself after he left the mile beacon astern, and he consequently paddled in a victor "having a good bit up his sleeve." Then, again, Stansbury had no great difficulty in defeating Wulf, and those who saw that race could not help noticing that he finished strong and well, and looked in excellent condition at the finish of the contest. Taking the foregoing facts into consideration, it will be seen that a good race should ensure between the representative oarsmen of the Clarence and the Shoalhaven rivers, and to go a step farther it is not stating too much to say that there is every probability of one of the men becoming a champion within the next two or three years—perhaps sooner. Stansbury is training from Mortlake. George Perkins, ex-champion sculler of England, is accompanying him in his work on the river, and James M'Callum is doing the rubbing down and the shore work. Stansbury will be well boated, his latest shell from Sullivan's yard being a beautiful model. At the present time the Shoalhaven oarsman seems to be a little overtrained, and this appears to have had some effect upon his general condition. It must be admitted that he has done an immense amount of work during the last three months, having been almost continuously in training during that period. As he is only 20 years age he cannot be expected to stand the same amount of work as a man of more mature years. When he rowed Wulf he weighed 12st. 2lb. At the present time he is a pound under his racing weight being 12st. 1lb. Stansbury did a trial on Thursday for the benefit of his backers. It is said to have been a fairly satisfactory performance. Stansbury and Perkins were out on the river at an early hour yesterday morning. Leaving the shed at Mortlake, the men sculled as far as the starting point at Ryde, and then turned and came down the stream on the last of the ebb tide, making good work of it all the way, and rowing at from 24 to 34 strokes per minute. At Mortlake Stansbury was pulling a nice even stroke, getting his weight on well, and making his boat travel at a good rate of speed. After pulling as far as One Man Wharf the men turned, and made their way back to the shed, having done a good practice row. Searle and Neil Matterson, his trainer, went for their usual spin on the river yesterday. The former, who showed excellent form, rowed strong and clean, and got plenty of pace out of his craft, which carried him well. The Clarence River sculler did a few spurts on returning from Ryde, and on each occasion he showed to considerable advantage. At the present time Searle weighs about 11st. 5lb. He is well looked after, and should be in grand fettle by the 13th instant. A desperate race may be anticipated for the first half-mile; after that it will probably be a ding-dong struggle for victory down to One Man Wharf, or even to the finish. Searle is believed to have greater speed than Stansbury, but if the latter can keep anywhere near him down to the mile beacon his great strength may pull him through, that is supposing he goes to the post fit and well.

MERCANTILE ROWING CLUB.

The half-yearly meeting of the Mercantile Rowing Club was held last evening at the Oxford Hotel, Mr. W. Merriman presiding, when the following report was adopted:—"The past term has been, as is usual for this time of the year, one of inaction, there being very little rowing done by the members, and no regattas of importance have taken place, except St. Ignatius and Leichhardt. At the latter Mr. W. Matterson won the outrigger race. Mr. G. J. Ruwald won the open outrigger race at the Balmain Rowing Club Regatta; and Mr. Chandler won the open outrigger race at the East Sydney Rowing Club Regatta. Mr. Ruwald also won the Amateur Championship of Queensland at Rockhampton; and this opportunity is taken to congratulate him. Mr. G. M'Gill won the senior sculls prize, April 28, from several competitors, and on April 14 Mr. W. C. Freeman won the junior sculls prize, both trophies being presented by the president of the club. There are still on hand two prizes, for which races will soon be arranged. Your committee, on learning that the Sydney Rowing Club would be compelled to remove from the site they have held for the past 18 years, offered to house as many of the Sydney Rowing Club boats as possible, and to arrange for their members to have free access to the boats for such time as the new boathouse would be completed. This offer has been accepted with thanks. Efforts will be made to have the club represented in the champion four-oared race next November should coxswains be allowed. Members are urged to practise oar-rowing more than they have done recently, and maiden oarsmen are requested to form crews, when they will be coached and a race arranged for them." Mr. J. H. Smart was unanimously elected a life member, he being one of the founders of the club. Mr. J. Blackman was proposed for life membership, but begged leave to decline the compliment. Several other matters were dealt with, including the want of oar practice by members, who were urged by the chairman to do less skiff rowing, and more rowing in crews.

THE GLEBE ROWING CLUB.

This club is beginning to awaken to its old state of activity, and gives promise of successfully competing with the two senior clubs during the coming season. The caretaker is busy building two four-oared gigs on exactly similar lines, and of equal weight, to be used by the members for practice and in club competitions. An order has also been given to a well known builder for a first-class racing gig. This, with the new "clinker four" built by Floyd last year, will enable the members to be on an equal footing in outside contests with any other club in the city. A new set of officers have been elected, and they are energetically working for the benefit of the club. A concert is to be held on the 16th instant at the local Town Hall, and promises to be a great success, as all the prominent residents are strongly supporting it. The musical part is in the hands of Mr. Charles Huenerbein, who will be assisted by Miss Saville, Signora Fabris, Mrs. C. B. Foster, Messrs. W. Gainor, A. Parkinson, A. Edward, and A. Nott, and with such talent the evening should be very enjoyable.

NORTH SHORE WORKING MEN'S ROWING CLUB.

The North Shore Working Men's Rowing Club already numbers over 50 members. The subscription has been fixed at £1 5s. per annum, and the colours are Oxford blue guernsey and blue and cerise cap. This latest addition to the numerous rowing clubs which flourish in and around Sydney has excellent prospects.

LANE COVE BOATING CLUB.

A meeting was held on Monday evening at the Council-chambers, Hunter's Hill, to consider the advisability of forming a rowing club on the Lane Cove River. Mr. N. Joubert, Mayor of Hunter's Hill, presided, and there was a good attendance. It was resolved to establish a rowing club, to be called the Lane Cove Boating Club, and the following officers were elected:—President, Mr. R. Smith; vice-presidents, Messrs. C. E. Jeanneret, M.L.A., N. Joubert, H. M. Pike, W. C. Proctor, F. Farnell, M.L.A., A. Tornaghi, J. Hoare, Dr. Manning, and Mr. Justice Owen. Messrs. J. Roth, J. T. Warren, and F. E. Pike, were chosen captain, treasurer, and secretary, respectively, and for committee the following gentlemen were elected: Messrs. F. Bayliss, H. Carpenter, D. Milford, P. C. Fairland, E. H. Pybus, C. J. Ireland, W. Brewer, and A. Peak. The president, Mr. R. Smith, has given the club a valuable water frontage opposite Longueville, and upon this site the boathouse will be erected. At present there are about 40 members.

THE INTER-UNIVERSITY CONTEST.

The Adelaide University Club has already taken steps to obtain a crew to row on the Yarra against Melbourne and Sydney. When Sydney and Melbourne competed in 1871 on the Yarra, and in 1872 on the Parramatta, students formed the crew, Sydney being represented in the latter year by Messrs. G. H. Fitzhardinge, A. Yeomans, R. Teece, and E. A. Iceton—a strong crew—but they were defeated, Melbourne winning both years.

The Australasian Mining Exchange Company of Sydney, Limited, report the following quotations:—Sydney and Provincial Land, seller 4½; Australasian Mining Exchange, contributing, seller 2s. 6d.

We learn that among managers and shareholders of companies there is a very strong feeling in opposition to the proposed Property Tax Bill, and that the Colonial Treasurer is likely to be interviewed on the subject by a deputation from their number. Objection is taken by shareholders in companies to a tax that does not touch individual proprietors of businesses. It is regarded as a direct blow at co-operative enterprise. Bank officials and shareholders object to the taxation of their gross deposits, less an exemption of a single £500; whilst they have no power to surcharge the tax, except on deposits in excess of £500, and only on the amount of such excess. It is believed that the tax on the banks themselves will represent a very large proportion of their profits. By some it is contended that the tax will amount to 14s. in the £ of the total profits of one large bank. This, however, is on the basis of a tax on assets as well as liabilities, which can hardly be intended, though the language of the bill is not clear on the point. But it is quite clear that the tax is on deposits and the bank's own funds, and that a halfpenny in the £1 on these will amount to a tax on banking business unexampled in any other part of the world, and which must be prejudicial to financial business in this colony.

We observe from a prospectus in our advertising columns that the directors of the Marryville Colliery Company, Limited, have followed our advice to reconstruct on terms which do not include the issue of shares at a discount. The capital will be £37,500, in 60,000 shares of 12s. 6d. each; 30,000 shares, fully paid up to 12s. 6d. per share, to be allotted to the shareholders in the original company in satisfaction of their interest therein; 30,000 contributing shares to be offered to the public on the following terms:—1s. on application, 1s. 6d. on allotment, and the balance of 10s. per share, as required, in calls not exceeding 6d. per share per month; a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum will be paid for three years on the amount of the contributing shares actually paid up. The mine is in working order. Already, as we are informed by Messrs. Clarke and Co. and J. G. Griffin and Co., brokers to the company, 20,000 shares have been applied for.

Elsewhere appears the prospectus of the Kauri Company, Limited, which is being formed with a capital of £1,200,000, in 600,000 shares of £2 each, of which 450,000 are now offered to the public on the following terms:—5s. on application, 5s. on allotment, 5s. in two months from application, and 5s. in three months. A dividend of 10 per cent. per annum upon the paid up capital is guaranteed for four years by the vendors. The remaining 150,000 shares are retained for the vendors, as hereinafter stated. 100,000 shares are specially reserved for New Zealand. The object of the company is to acquire and take over all rights and obligations under contracts of purchase recently made of the properties, businesses, and assets of certain companies and owners fully specified. The property includes 28 mills, a vast quantity of timber, 146,000 acres of freehold and 257,000 acres of leasehold land. The directors are prominent Melbourne business men, and Mr. George Holdship, of Auckland. Messrs. Fraser and Co., of 322, George-street, are the Sydney brokers.

The share list of Henry Hayes and Co., Limited, which has been very largely subscribed, will close to-morrow (Saturday).

The half-yearly audit of the City Mutual Fire Insurance Company shows a profit of £1885, which the directors have disposed of as follows:—To reserve fund, £1000 (making that fund now £4000); to interim dividend to shareholders (8 per cent. per annum) £600; to carry forward, £285.

In the Import markets business is improving slowly. Country orders are beginning to come to distributers more freely, and the export demand is fairly good. There is a pretty general agreement that the bills of the month have been fairly well met. What rainfall there has been will be beneficial to the country, and although more is wanted, the pastoral prospects are on the whole fairly satisfactory. The flour market is without change. Roller is selling at £8 10s. to £9 5s., and stone flour at £7 15s. to £9. In tea, we hear of the sale of 200 half-chests of common grades. It is believed that the Airlie (s.), with new season's teas, passed Port Macquarie to-day, and, if so, may be expected in Sydney to-morrow. Coffee is moving off in trade lines at 9¼d. to 9½d. for No. 1 Ceylon Plantation. Barry's chicory, 2¼d. Epps's cocoa is in moderate request at 1s. 6d. which, however, is a full figure. Sales of Fry's are reported to 1s. 6d. Queensland sugar is now coming to hand. Messrs. Gibbs, Bright, and Co. have received the first shipment of this season's sugar from Cairns, from the Pyramid mill; and the market from this time on is likely to receive steady supplies. We hear of the sale of a further parcel to arrive at £24. Good yellows in demand at up to £22. Ration sorts from £17. Rice is steady at up to £15 for best table; lower grades from £12. Sago and tapioca moving at 2½d. Pepper, 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 1½d. for white. In dried fruits a considerable quantity of inferior currants and raisins tends to depress the market. Good currants are worth 5d., and elemes 5d.; sultanas, 5½d. to 5¾d. Dates are worth from 2d. upwards. Figs almost unobtainable. Stearine candles are [illegible] supplied, and worth from 5½d. to 5¾d., according to brand; paraffines, 6d. In fish there is rath[er] more inquiry for tinned salmon, which is worth [fr]om 8s. to 8s. 6d., bulk, 4d.; sardines, 3s. 3d. to 3s. 6d. for quarters, and 6s. to 6s. 6d. for halves, which are full ranges of prices; fresh herrings, 4s. 6d. to 4s. 10½d.; kippered, 7s. 9d. to 8s. 6d.; lobsters were done at 8s. 6d. Rocksalt is selling at 85s., in truck [illegible], but some holders ask up to 90s. The [illegible] trade is decidedly quiet. Galvanised iron [illegible] moving [illegible] at very unremunerative prices. Some [illegible] good iron has been done at £18, but [illegible] it was generally asked; a parcel of Empress [illegible] at £18; £18 to £18 15s. may [illegible]. One orange of values. Sheet lead from [illegible] held over till next [illegible] below £17 10s., which is the [illegible]. At the monthly [illegible] nails are rather more plentiful [illegible] more or less damaged. For [illegible] may be quoted. In tinplates [illegible] with 7s. on the spot, and 16s. to [illegible] indefinitely Coke are market rates. [illegible] for bulk, less active; £10 10s. [illegible] for No. 10, are current [illegible] a fairly good de[mand] [illegible] The Trinidad's stout have been received, [illegible] ale of leading [illegible] in 1887. bourne; 17s. 6d. is the current rate; single star, 34s. 9d.; and three star, 45s. 6d., with small sales. Lowndes' rum, in hogsheads and quarters, was done at 3s. 1½d.; other brands from 2s. 7d. Queensland rum unobtainable; Burnett's old tom, 9s. 6d.; geneva, 10s. 9d. A good business noticed in Robertson's, Usher's, Gaelic, and Williams's whisky. The tenor of Calcutta advices to hand to-day does not uphold the view of a firm market for jute goods, whether bran bags, cornsacks, or woolpacks, and does not warrant the maintenance of the value of bran bags, now selling at 5s.; woolpacks were done at 2s. to 2s. 1d., cornsacks at 6s. 4½d. Kerosene oil is selling at from 1s. 6d. to 1s. 7d. for low test, and from 1s. 8d. to 1s. 9d. for high, with a firm market. The possibility of the derelict ship at Newcastle being one of the American vessels due with kerosene is being talked of. Castor oil, 2s. 7½d.; China, 2s. 10d. In drugs, all lines are quoted at late rates; soda crystals, scarce and firm, at £5 5s.; resin, G. type, £8. Sales of Baltic deals were made at 22s. 6d.; and of oregon at 13s. 6d. Three parcels of plaster of Paris sold at 16s. to 17s. Cement, Anchor brand, was bought at 17s. and to arrive business was done at 16s. 6d.

STOCK SALES.

Hill, Clark, and Co. report for the month of June:—Fat Cattle.—The market at opening sales was again very heavily supplied, the number forward being far above requirements, consequently sales were dull and dragging; but, towards the end of the month, several large lots were sent on to Melbourne by rail, which otherwise would have come on here, thereby greatly relieving this market, and causing prices to show a considerable improvement, particularly for good lots of bullocks, for which competition was exceedingly brisk, at an advance of 5s to 30s per head. Fat Sheep.—The supply shows a slight falling-off on last month, though opening sales show little or no improvement, but towards the close of the month prime quality became somewhat scarce, for which there was good competition and sales animated, at an advance of 1s to 1s 6d per head on opening rates, while medium and inferior could only be quoted a shade firmer, there being very little competition for this class. We have sold through the yards 235 cattle and 19,148 sheep, including H. Everingham's bullocks, £6 7s 8d; Messrs. Fisher and Hill's (Cubbie) bullocks, £8 19s 8d; Hon. G. Lee's bullocks, £7 10s. 10d; J. B. Rundle, jun.'s, bullocks, at £7 5s 10d; W. W. Richardson's (Kihee) bullocks, at £6 13s 9d; M'Millan and Co.'s bullocks at 6 7s 7d, cows at £4 1s 6d; V. J. Dowling's wethers, 9s 1d to 9s 3d; Chambers and Co.'s wethers, 11s 4d to 11s 6d; H. D. Wiseman's wethers, at 10s 8d to 10s 10d, few seconds at 9s 6 to 9s 10d; Denne and Fenwick's ewes, at 6s 9d to 7s 4; C. Bailey's lambs, 11s 11d to 12s; M'Intosh and Oakes's crossbreds, 13s 1d to 13s 7d; and others. Also, outside:—14,350 wethers for Aramac station; 4823 ewes, for P. and M. Mulcahy; 492 ewes, for Scott and M'Millan; 400 bullocks, for J. C. Ryrie, Esq; 127 mixed, for Messrs. Cameron and Stevenson; 79 mixed, for Messrs. de Salis and Smith; 112 mixed, for Thos. Jones, Esq.; and small drafts for various owners; and, through the Kilbourne yards, 250 bullocks for G. Palmer, Esq., and 185 bullocks for Messrs. Fisher and Hill, Cubbie.—[ADVT.]

PRODUCE SALES.

Messrs. J. H. Geddes and Co. report:—Wool: We offered by auction and privately since our last report 328 bales wool; but as owners were indisposed to accept values ruling, owing to higher values quoted in English sales, we succeeded in placing only a few important lines. Good scoured wools command up to 15d, medium to 12d, inferior 9½d to 10d. Only a few oddments of greasy wool at present time are coming forward. Sheepskins: Large catalogues have been sold at advanced rates to buyers who eagerly competed at high values; we sold several thousands at, for tops, 44d to 5d each, one line to 77d; medium sorts, 30d to 42d; short wools 20d to 28d; lambskins, 12d to 33d; dry skins, best, 4½d to 5½d; other sorts, 2½d to 4½d. Marsupial Skins: Demand very good, and values higher still, realising up to 146d for very large; we sold large catalogue at 100d to 140d for large, 60d to 90d medium, small, 20d to 5d; very small, 3d to 18d; opossums, 6s to 9s for best, 4s to 5s 6 for fair; other sorts, 1s 6d to 3s 6d; wallaby, 3d to 16d; bears to 8s. Tallow: Market well supplied; values shade lower for inferior lines. We sold—For best, £17 10s to £18; medium sorts, £16 10s to £17 7s 6d; trade parcels, £15 to £16 5s; inferior and dark, £12 to £14. Hides: Regret market still weaker except for a line of 69lb. hides from north, for which we obtained 4½d per lb.; at our sale all other lines were decidedly easier. We sold bulk of catalogue at following values (deeming it best, as market more depressed is anticipated):—Butchers' heavies, 2¾d to 3d; extra heavy and good, 3¼d to 3½d; medium weights, 2½d to 2¾d; light hides, 3d to 3¼d; extra, 3¾d; dr., 3¼d; inferior, 1d to 2¼d; yearlings, 4s to 8s; calfskins, 1s to 3s 6d. Bark very high. Hair: Good demand, up to 14½d; cow ditto, 12d; stumps, 4d to 7d. Horns selling well, at to 40s 6d for large; 27s, medium; 15s, small; curls, 2s 6d to 10s. Shank bones improved, £5 to £6 for very good; others, £4 10s; com. bones, £2 10s to £2 15s. Beeswax 10½d. Honey, 4d.—[ADVT.]

LATEST COMMERCIAL TELEGRAMS.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

Feed grains are very animated owing to an anticipated increase in the duties. New Zealand oats sold at 3s. 1d. The sugar market is quiet. A few transactions were reported in medium Indian teas at fair values. The cargo of the Tartar will be offered on Wednesday next. Salmon has advanced. Sales of Aluma River were made at 10s. Currants and elemes sold, for export, at 2¾d. Hops are scarce. Kerosene is a shade easier. Galvanised iron, £16. American plaster had sales at 17s. At the timber auction American spruce deals realised 5 1-16d.; good prices generally were obtained. Business is rather more active.

Share Report.—Sales: Commercial Bank, £10 5s., £10 7s.; Federal Bank, 73s. 6d., 73s.

There was an active market and a large business today both in investment stocks and mining. Australian Financial Agency had strong demand all day, and closed at a considerable advance. Mercantile Finance sold rather under yesterday's prices. Metropolitan Gas failed to recover yesterday's fall. Commercial Bank had good request, and were readily taken at improved prices. Brewing and malting also sold higher. There is not much change in other investment stocks.

BRISBANE, FRIDAY.

There is a continued improved tone in sugar, a rise in which may be looked for almost with certainty. It is generally admitted that the output will be much smaller than was expected, even from recent computations. The frosts in some districts has become an important factor in the reduction of the returns. Those in Melbourne interested in sugar are well aware of this state of things, and are importing Queensland sugars in considerable quantities just now. It is still difficult to give reliable quotations. The flour market is extremely weak. Quotations in the produce market are—potatoes, £4 5s. per ton; bran and pollard, £5 15s. Maize is in good demand at 3s. 4d.

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

An utter collapse has taken place in the wheat market since cable communication with Europe became interrupted. There is no local demand, except of the veriest hand-to-mouth character. No trade is at present carried on with Melbourne and Sydney, or South Africa. Shipment for Europe continues; but no fresh engagements have taken place, or are likely to do so, for some time. The quotations for wheat at Port Adelaide are 3s. 2d. to 3s. 2½d. for shipping parcels, and 3s. 1d. for farmers' lots; at the outports the price is 3s. 1d. for shipping lots. The flour market is very flat, at £7 15s. to £8 for patent roller, £7 to £7 5s. for ordinary superfine brands, and £5 15s. to £6 for household. Bran is quoted at 9d. to 9½d., and pollard at 8¾d. to 9d.

In the share market, National Banks are quoted at £10 16s., and Bank of Adelaide at £4 14s. 6d. to £4 15s.

PETER MOLLER'S COD LIVER OIL has such a thoroughly established reputation that it seems almost superfluous to say that it is not an emulsion, and contains no water—charged for at the price of oil. The manufacture, from the finest and freshest livers only, is perfected in one operation, without any after manipulation, which should be carefully guarded against. Its superiority and efficacy have secured the approbation of the whole medical world, and the Highest Awards at all chief Exhibitions.—[ADVT.]

THE SYDNEY MAIL.

THE LARGEST ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN AUSTRALASIA.

THE ISSUE FOR JULY 7 contains, amongst other illustrations, the following:—

ILLUSTRATIONS TO THE STORY "MR. MEESON'S WILL."

THE CENTENNIAL INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION AT MELBOURNE.

The time is approaching when the greatest Exhibition that has yet been held in this part of the world will be opened; and in this week's Mail is given a large and very beautiful engraving of the main building, in Carlton Park, near Melbourne. The buildings, including the annexes, cover about 34 acres; it will be seen from this fact that the affair is to be on a gigantic scale. As the holding of an Exhibition did not form part of our Centennial programme, the efforts put forth by the neighbouring colony have the greater interest and significance for us, and our engravings this week will be welcomed as instalments of what are to follow.

THE SYDNEY TECHNICAL COLLEGE AT THE MELBOURNE EXHIBITION.

The Board of Technical Education, a few days ago, had an exhibition in the School of Arts of the exhibits that have since been forwarded from the Sydney Technical College to Melbourne, and our artist was therefore able to make a sketch which will prove of great interest. How the Sydney Technical College Court will look is very nicely depicted, together with a number of the most characteristic exhibits. Notwithstanding the fact that a large number of the best works of the students was recently sent to London for classification by the examiners in the two great national competitions conducted by the Science and Art Department of Great Britain and the City and Guilds of London Institute for the Advancement of Technical Education, the Sydney Technical College has been able to forward to Melbourne an excellent collection, and the arrangement of the exhibits is well indicated by our illustration.

SIR JOHN PENDER.

At this particular time, when both cables are interrupted, it is of considerable interest to learn—by almost the last message that came through before the interruption—that Sir John Pender, chairman of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company, has had an interview with Lord Knutsford for the purpose of discussing his proposal for an alternative cable route to Australia, which should join the Australian telegraphic system at Perth. We give a very fine portrait of this liberal and munificent pioneer of ocean telegraphy.

SUCCESSFUL MOVING OF A GREAT HOTEL.

We give two engravings illustrating the somewhat novel mode of moving, by railway, the great BRIGHTON BEACH HOTEL at Coney Island, New York. By the encroachment of the sea the foundations of the building had become undermined, and it was moved back a distance of 595ft. How it was done is shown in our illustrations.

MR. MEESON'S WILL.

Both the pictures and the story get more interesting week by week. In our present issue we have a very beautiful full-page engraving of the strange meeting of Miss Augusta Smithers and Mr. Meeson on board the steamship Kangaroo, bound for New Zealand. There are also two beautiful seascapes accompanying the story, showing the Kangaroo leaving the mouth of the Thames, and then, well on her voyage, out of sight of land.

ILLUSTRATIONS TO STORY, "THE ADVENTURES OF A HOUSEBOAT."

This story is concluded in our present issue. Accompanying the chapters in this week's Mail are some of the best illustrations that have yet appeared in connection with it.

SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1888.

The P. and O. Company's R.M.S. Arcadia, with the inward English mails and files to June 8, passed Cape Borda at 1.30 a.m. this morning, and she would reach Adelaide by daylight. The Sydney portion of her mails should arrive here on Monday next, if a special train is run.

Sir Henry Parkes pointed out to a deputation yesterday that it must not be inferred that because a railway line had not been mentioned in the proposals before Parliament the Government were opposed to it. They could not submit all the lines which they thought it would be well to construct, and had selected a portion amounting to a cost enough to submit at one time.

Replying to a deputation from the anti-Chinese meeting held in the Domain on Saturday, the Premier stated that he did not see any real obstacle to a provision in any contract made with a ship carrying mails which were subsidised by the public funds of this colony, providing that the vessels should be manned by British crews.

The managers and shareholders of companies are reported to entertain a strong feeling in opposition to the Property Tax Bill; and it is stated that a halfpenny in the pound on the banks' own funds will amount to a tax on banking business unexampled in any other part of the world.

A serious accident occurred to a passenger train at Gunning yesterday morning. Owing to the axle of a truck breaking, the carriages were thrown off the line, which was torn up, and considerable damage was done to the rolling-stock. No lives were lost.

The electoral district of Illawarra is entitled to return an additional member to the Legislative Assembly.

The Water and Sewerage Board has decided that none of its officers shall be allowed to hold the office of mayor or municipal positions of any kind.

The third sitting for the current year of the Albury Land Board was held yesterday, when a large number of cases were dealt with.

Mr. R. Burdett Smith reports that great progress has been made with the New South Wales department at the Melbourne Exhibition since his last visit, and that there is very little doubt about the court being most effective.

The Queensland Government is reorganising the gaols and penal establishments of the colony, and the sheriff, who has held office for over half a century, retires on a pension.

How shall we provide healthy entertainment for the people? This question has been asked so often, and by so many who have been wisely concerned for the struggling labouring masses, that its repetition here will perhaps tend little toward any new enlightenment. But so many changes have taken place of late years in the direction of provision for the recreation of the people that there is room and to spare for some comment on the subject. What was London in the old Chartist days in regard to places of resort for the people? Scarcely then was the hand of the philanthropist seen in the entertainment of the great constituency of labour and poverty; hardly was the heart of the few stirred for the moil and drudgery of the many. It was the time when men of sympathy, and with desire for the amelioration of the condition of the poor, were asking for the efforts of those who had means and time to provide relief to the dreary background of labour that vexed the toiling thousands. It was then that the workman himself out of his hard condition cried, in the words of a well-known leader of the people, "The few shall not for ever sway, the many toil in sorrow." The evil days that seemed likely to come, when such as John Frost were moved toward revolution, were averted by the wakening of England to the condition of her struggling poor. The pens of poet, philanthropist, and politician were busy in the cause of reform, and the procession of good results therefrom has gone on until now. Where one pen was busy then a hundred are busy now, and the few earnest workers have greatly multiplied. The East End of London has its places of recreation, which are like oases in a desert. The contrast of homely entertainment of the present with the squalor and wretchedness of sad surroundings is not more remarkable than the effect that has been produced by a few decades of philanthropy. The process has been slow, but it has been sure. There is the People's Palace now in the great metropolis, which provides light, comfort, and cheerful recreation; and as Thomas Hughes pointed out in a letter to the Spectator not long ago, there is the remodelled "Victoria" at the New Cut, the survival of that old People's Theatre of other days, when the "Vic." was none too choice in its entertainment or its reputation. All that is changed, and to such as Mr. Samuel Morley is the public indebted for providing liberal and educating entertainment.

Both at the People's Palace and at the "Victoria" the question of how entertainment shall be provided for the multitude has been fairly answered. The People's Palace has a large hall for concerts, &c.; it has gymnasia, library, and reading-rooms, swimming baths, and technical schools. This has been the outcome of the old Beaumont Philosophical Institute which in the troublesome Forties was established at Mile End for the benefit of the people. Such as Walter Besant and William Morris lent the influence of their pens to the good work, and what Elizabeth Barrett Browning and those of her kind vaguely hoped for has to some extent come to pass. The Victoria has its theatre, its coffee tavern, its huge billiard-rooms and smoking-rooms, library and reading-rooms, and gymnasia; there noted actors, musicians, artists, and educators come to render help toward that "culture" of the people for which he who has so lately passed away, Matthew Arnold of gracious memory, with many others, was well concerned. The best of England's scientific and literary men give their services, and the healthy influence of the higher civilisation which demands healthy recreation and enjoyment is possessing the people. The time has gone by when the tendency was for those who knew not poverty to resent the idea of people being poor, on the ground that it was in all likelihood their own fault. The Scrooges and the Gradgrinds are fewer than they were in mental attitude, though, as we pointed out last Saturday, while hearts are not so hard as they once were perhaps there is much charitable neglect still among those who should be concerned for the welfare of the toilers—and, indeed, of those who cannot toil because there is nothing for them to do. It is the few always who do the sacred work of social reformation, and though the foundations of their labours be but slowly digged, the superstructure rises solidly and in good season. It has ever been the custom so to be shocked at the sins and vices of the poor, because, perchance, they were of more rugged and conspicuous form than the errors of the rich. It almost came to be believed that the poor man was entirely hopeless because he determinedly willed it so. The old-fashioned method of philanthropy was one which desired to make the poor man a puritan in habit and in religion; it did not have regard to making provision for what enjoyment he gave up when he forsook the tap-room and the dance-hall.

Things are better now. The poor man's grog being taken from him, he is offered coffee, the coarse entertainment of the saloon is offset by good theatrical entertainments and cheerful healthy surroundings, and the gymnasium with its exercises takes the place of the "ring" and the frequent invitation to settle differences by hand-to-hand conflict. The wilful wickedness and degradation of the poor which has horrified so many good workers is rather the natural outcome of the craving in human nature for excitement and relaxation than latent wickedness. People expect too much moral courage from their fellow-men. Circumstances have much to do with a man's virtue and integrity. It is comparatively easy to be good on ten thousand a-year, but in the poverty of fifty pounds a-year the strongest might not be judged harshly for falling. The hopelessness that comes through poorly-rewarded labour, the influence of miserable surroundings, the ceaseless worry to make both ends meet and then finding that they never do so—all these are apt to drive men and women to the garish temptations of the tap-room and the worse things still. Not only does it apply to the miserably poor, but to those who are just fairly removed from the desperate wretchedness of want. Those who have money to spare in recreation must have healthy attractive recreation at their hands, or they will seek for the excitement of "sports that kill." There is a reaction toward healthy sport, and a reformation in the amusements of the people, going on now throughout the world. In the United States a double method is being pursued. In New York, upon the Bowery dancing-halls there has been set the prohibition of the law, and workers are providing, after the fashion of the London philanthropists, though more incompletely, for the reasonable entertainment of the people. In our own metropolitan population such work is also going on. We have of course the great advantage of climate. Outdoor sports abound with us, and the dance-hall is not so vast in influence. Even the relaxation provided by the skating rinks makes the way easier towards healthy recreation. As yet we have no People's Palace; nor do we need it as does London. Our poor are not so poor, and squalor, though it shows itself, is not so repulsive as it is in great Continental cities. But there is much to do here; and the clubs that are being founded and carried on to promote recreation, and even homes for poor and homeless boys, should receive warm support.

Nothing is so popular with the crowd in these days, and for that reason nothing is so eagerly looked for by those who cater for it, as a new sensation. A leading London paper published in a recent issue a vivid description of the proceedings of a "lady aeronaut," who, under novel conditions, has been making balloon ascents from the Crystal Palace. This last caprice of sensationalism takes one of the wildest forms this peculiarly modern development has yet assumed. The "lady aeronaut," not satisfied with a mere balloon ascent in the ordinary way, or without a car, prefers to ride through the atmosphere on a trapeze, from which she hangs suspended by her teeth. The trapeze is fixed to the bottom of the car, and to the bar an iron hook is attached, having an indiarubber mouthpiece at the other end. Into this the "lady aeronaut" fixes her teeth, and, with the rest of the body perfectly unsupported, rises to a height of a mile and a half over the heads of the people. Sixty thousand onlookers watched this extraordinary performance on Whit Monday at the Crystal Palace. When the performer gets tired she catches and rests on the bar, and is assisted into the basket. "As soon as I begin to feel fatigue," she says, "I leave off; for falling from a height of, say, three thousand metres, I could not get up and resume work after the interruption."

People who cater for the public amusement doubtless find it rather difficult at times to keep pace with the growing appetite for sensationalism; but it is improbable that even the most enterprising entrepreneur will find it easy to go beyond this. The danger is so menacing, and the risks so many and so great, and the tragedy when it comes—as it doubtless will sooner or later—such a horrible one, that the popular lust for crude horrors must be sated by this or nothing. Men have jumped from suspension bridges, and shot the Falls of Niagara in a cask; girls and women have put their heads and hands into lions' mouths; persons have walked on tight-ropes at delirious elevations, dived into sea-caves at abysmal depths, shot apples off each other's heads, and swallowed cutlery with disquieting avidity and relish. But all this seems merely to whet the public appetite, and encourage the popular monster to ask for more. The desire for sensation is one of those tastes that grow by what they feed upon, until the palate becomes jaded and capricious, craving for something strongly stimulative; and the very people who might have experienced a thrill of pleasure at a street accident a short time before become so far blasé as to be able to gaze on unmoved at a general massacre. Enterprising showmen recognise all this. They know that they must either make the muscles of their patrons rigid with horror, or their pulses thrill with the most appalling expectation, or else see them shrug their shoulders and walk away with ruinous indifference. It is not that performers like to risk their lives and limbs, or that managers rejoice to have these items of personal property placed at their disposal. We owe these startling exhibitions to no other cause than our collective desire to whip up and stimulate our own flagging interest by something deliriously exciting.

This is one of the results of the conditions under which we live in these days of overwork and nervous tension. People nowadays have forgotten how to be restful. Our recreations themselves are merely a change of occupation. The active mind of the man of the world dreads to relax from its state of high pressure lest it fall into a condition of atrophy. Outside of our ordinary pursuits we have no time for that thought from which come those finer perceptions of shades and differences which distinguish the artistic taste, in any direction, from that which is merely elementary. Natural good taste is always true, of course, so long as it remains natural. The surroundings and associations of refined homes refresh and sustain this in the absence of more direct or active agencies. But for the masses of the people who know nothing of the refined home and all that it supposes, there is nothing to guide and form the popular taste, and no other standard than that dictated by the fleeting popular fancy of the hour. What the fancy of the hour at the present time is need not take long to describe after what has been already said. Elementary agencies eked out by crude adjuncts of horror, such as will appeal to the lowest and least tractable of those primal impulses which are said to establish our relationship to the cave-men and the anthropophagi, are found to act masterfully on immense masses of people where motive-forces of a higher character would be [illegible] which less. After all, the showman's test [illegible] council best one in all questions of pop[illegible] placing He makes his calculations on t[illegible] labour of what will pay, and it is quite clear [illegible] spoke on the the demand for rabid sensation th[illegible] hat the matter tite just now in all large ce[illegible] lation.

[illegible] ostration Committee [illegible] ving officers were [illegible] Musto, vice-president [illegible] Watson, financial [illegible] Messrs. D. Small, W. [illegible] ted trustees; and T. Darnley, Molloy, D. [illegible] member of committee.

The effect of all this is [illegible] popular amusements, thoug[illegible] high art on the stage in favour of melodrama is perhaps one of its most obtrusive manifestations. The desire for sensation and the liking for sensationalism do not stop here, or indeed anywhere within the limits of attainable possibility. The sensational novel is the most popular, the sensational picture is the one that is most spoken of in general circles, and sensational politics, and even religion, command the highest figures in the respective marts where these articles are in popular demand. Where staid and careful statesmen would have once been content to proceed with cautious deliberation we find it the custom to hold public anticipation on the stretch in the hope of some dazzling stroke or some bold and brilliant achievement. Preachers who would appeal most effectively to the general ear aim at making an adequate sensation. The Salvation Army, with its timbrels, loud colours, and brass-band music, compels attention in quarters where silvery eloquence and lawn-sleeves would utterly fail. Even the man of science no longer loses himself in a maze of patient research and minute analysis, but delights to proclaim some radical theory based on an ingenious and novel discovery. This is the character of the conditions and time in which we live. The days of plain living and high thinking have been swept away in the wild whirl of new interests and fresh objects of ambition. We could not get back to the comparative quiet of the past, even if we would. But it is still possible to control the desire for sensationalism by directing its appeal to healthy natural instincts, rather than to those that depend on mere brutality or cruelty for their gratification.

It is a satisfaction to know that the Maritime labour dispute has been settled amicably, so far as the present is concerned. It will be remembered that the Maritime Council originally demanded that the Chinese be removed from the vessel, and Australian labour employed, and in case this was not complied with, the vessel should not be permitted to unload her cargo. Captain Morse cabled to San Francisco, but could get no reply on account of the interruption in the cable, and, considering the difficulty of his position, the Council decided to make the concession that the Chinese should remain in their positions till the vessel returned to San Francisco. The Council proposed, however, to send twenty-one Europeans from this port by the Alameda to San Francisco, paying their wages for the time, on condition that in case the owners of the vessel did not employ them, they should be sent back as passengers, and their wages should be paid by the steamship company. Upon this basis a temporary settlement of the difficulty has been arranged. The Seamen's Union, it will thus be seen, bears half the expense, and the company the other half, in case the present agreement does not meet with the approval of the owners of the vessel, while if the company employ the men, the loss to them will be comparatively little. Captain Morse has been placed in an exceedingly difficult position, and his attitude in the affair is to be commended for its temperateness and coolness. The Maritime Council, on the other hand, cannot be greatly blamed for insisting on their demands at the time they did. Outside of the reasonableness of the policy they at first pursued, if pursued at all, the time was an opportune one for it. To have compelled the captain to dismiss the Chinese and take on a Sydney crew for the home voyage was a pretty high-handed measure, and one which would scarcely meet with the approval of the owners of the vessel. The present arrangement is satisfactory, in that it represents concessions on the part of those who feel themselves aggrieved, and is under the circumstances perhaps as near a fair arrangement as could have been made, unless the Maritime Council retreated from their position altogether. This quiet arrangement will reflect more credit on the council than the determined insistence of their first demands would have done. Captain Morse had the interests of the owners of the vessel to consider, and it was virtually impossible for him to have granted the first proposal of the council. He is not sure now that the present plan will be acceptable, but the owners will of course feel bound to stand by his agreement. The council have done wisely in bearing in mind that the Alameda is an American vessel and owned by Americans, and whatever right they might be considered to have to demand that Asiatic labour should not be employed on vessels doing regular service to this port, they would hardly have been justified in insisting that Australian labour be employed on vessels in which the capital of another country was invested. We notice that the deputation which waited on the Premier yesterday requested that in the future a clause be inserted in the mail contracts providing that no Asiatic labour be employed upon the vessels bearing mails. The Premier was of opinion that it would be better to have a clause inserted which provided that any ship carrying mails should be manned by British crews. To this alternative there would be considerable objection. It would be a hard condition which required an American vessel to employ British seamen, though perhaps the Premier meant the word British to include the Anglo-American as well.

We publish this morning accounts of two railway accidents—one at Hanelly, on the new line from Dunolly to Inglewood, in Victoria, whereby one man was killed and several injured; and one at Gunning, on the New South Wales Southern Line, which only resulted in injury to the rolling stock. The strange coincidence is that both accidents were caused by the breaking of an axle. It is a wonder that the Hanelly accident was not more calamitous, and it is fortunate that the Gunning accident did not result in loss of life. The Hanelly train consisted of the contractor's engine and nine trucks, and was travelling down a steep incline when the back axle of the fifth or middle truck broke, and the truck skidded along. The damage to the rolling stock was estimated at th[illegible] amount as that at Gunning, [illegible] southern train was an express [illegible] ing at the rate of thirty miles [illegible] the axle of a truck broke the [illegible] off the line and ran for [illegible] in that condition, the [illegible] g the rocks in many [illegible] up, and the rails [illegible] 100 yards from a [illegible] a fearful fatality [illegible] is impossible to [illegible] he best-managed lines they must occur, and it is equally impossible perhaps to prevent axles from breaking sometimes; but the frequency of accidents through broken axles makes anxiety keen as to how far proper precaution is taken in the purchase of sound and well-designed axles, and as to how often they are tested. The Petersham accident, which occurred ten months ago, was caused by the breaking of an axle, and it then came out that there were 400 axles of faulty design in use on our lines. We believe that great care is taken now in the purchase of axles, but that is not sufficient. There should be just as much care to make frequent and regular tests of the axles. There are regulations of the Department we know which require the testing of axles before they leave Sydney and en route, but how diligently these regulations are carried out it is not so easy to tell. It is quite possible that the duty is performed very often in a perfunctory manner, and that rigid inspection is not always the rule. The most startling thing, however, in connection with the accident on the Southern line is the fact that the train travelled a long distance before it was stopped. The methods of connection whereby the guard can warn the engine-driver must be very faulty indeed if communication cannot be made and the train stopped in less than three minutes after an accident. Of what value are guards or warning appliances at all if the brakes cannot be applied, and the train stopped within a short distance? Of course, in going down grade, and with insufficient brake force, the difficulty of stopping a train is increased, but our report says nothing about such a condition in this case. Three minutes is a long time to elapse before a train can be stopped after an accident. At Hanelly, as the accident happened on a steep incline, the danger was more difficult to avert. For the public safety it is to be hoped that careful inquiry will be made into the cause of the accident, to see if proper precaution is taken. We do not believe that our railway management is bad in this respect, but too much vigilance cannot be used.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A bill has been introduced into the Legislative Assembly by Mr. Day, to enable municipal corporations to borrow money by way of mortgage on lands purchased for the erection of town halls or municipal chambers, and also to give, by way of security for any such loan, the buildings already erected, or to be erected, on such sites. The bill provides that the council of any borough or municipal district may borrow at any time, or from time to time, any sum or sums or money for the purpose of defraying the cost of a site for a town hall or council-chambers, wholly or in part. Provided that no money shall be borrowed under this Act, unless the sanction of the Governor and the Executive Council shall first have been obtained. The council of any borough or municipal district may sign, seal, deliver, and execute all acts, deeds, mortgages, or documents necessary for effecting any mortgage or charge as may be necessary to secure any sum or sums borrowed under the authority of this act. The receipt of the Mayor or chairman for the time being of any borough or municipal district shall be a sufficient discharge to the mortgagee or person lending any such money, for any sum so borrowed, and shall wholly exonerate the mortgagee or person from any liability as to the misapplication or non-application of any such money, or any part thereof, or of seeing to the application thereof. An account of all moneys borrowed by any council under the authority of this Act shall be included in the account of revenue and expenditure required by the Municipalities Act of 1867.

The Church and School Lands Mining Bill, which was introduced into Parliament by the Minister for Public Instruction, provides that the Minister may grant to any person applying an authority to enter upon and search for gold or other minerals in any church and school lands, whether under lease or agreement for lease or not, and every such authority shall confer upon the grantee the right to occupy so much of the surface of such land as may be specified, and therein to dig and remove earth, and to construct all necessary mining works for the purpose of prosecuting the search for and testing the value of any auriferous or other mineral deposit therein, and shall also confer the right of ingress and egress and regress into, upon, and over such land. The grantee of such authority who shall have discovered gold or other minerals in payable quantity, and shall have produced satisfactory proof thereof, shall be deemed the first applicant for a lease of the land. Such leases may be granted for any period not exceeding, for gold-mining, 40 years, and for other minerals 20, provided that the rent reserved shall be £1 per acre per annum for gold-mining, and 5s. per acre for any other mineral.

By an announcement in yesterday's Government Gazette the electoral district of Illawarra, by reason of the number of electors on the electoral roll having reached the number required by the Electoral Act, is entitled to return an additional member to serve in the Legislative Assembly.

A number of deputations waited on the Colonial Secretary yesterday, amongst them being an influential deputation which asked that a railway line from Wagga Wagga to Tumberumba should be included in the Government railway proposals. It was pointed out that this line had already been passed by Parliament in 1884, and a sum of money voted for its construction. The plans and books of reference for the line were all prepared, and it was asked that the line should be submitted to the Public Works Committee for their consideration. The Premier promised to refer the matter to the Cabinet, and expressed himself as favourable to the line. Another deputation, representing the Newtown Borough Council, asked that the Government should wood-block the road from Enmore to Cook's River, the corporations interested being willing to contribute towards the expense. With regard to this matter Sir Henry promised to give a definite answer in three weeks. A number of gentlemen, representing the anti-Chinese League and the various labour organisations, presented the resolution passed at the anti-Chinese meeting, held on Saturday last, against the employment of Asiatic labour on the subsidised mail steamers, and received an expression of sympathy with their views from the Premier. The question of the best site for the new gate to the Garden Palace grounds was also brought up by another deputation, and the Colonial Secretary promised to refer the matter to the Colonial Architect.

The attention of the Mayor has recently been directed to various methods of laying wood pavement, which it is claimed are improvements upon the mode hitherto adopted. His Worship has, in connection with the laying down of wooden blocks in George-street North, caused three experiments to be made, and a report of the result of these, when it has been arrived at, will no doubt be received with some interest. Other experiments are also in contemplation, including one which provides for the blocks being laid diagonally. Yesterday the Mayor informed a deputation that he was willing to allow the Patent Cork Asphaltum Company, Limited, to lay a section of their patent pavement in George-street, with a view to testing whether it possessed all the qualities claimed for it—of noiselessness, durability, elasticity, and giving a good foothold to horses.

An article from our special correspondent on the European situation, which we publish this morning, deals with the massing of troops by Austria on the Gallician frontier, the intimation of a further augmentation of the Russian forces on that frontier in the autumn, the position of Prince Bismarck in regard to Russia, and the difficulty that may arise in connection with the Duchy of Luxembourg on the decease of the present King. Although the situation, according to our correspondent, has lately looked more hopeful, affairs in Macedonia give rise to misgivings concerning the outcome of events.

Our London correspondent in his letter, which we publish to-day, deals with the re-assembling of the House of Commons after the Whitsuntide recess, and the efforts which are being made by the Ministry to pass the Local Government Bill during the present session, which, our correspondent says, considering the formidable number of notices of amendments and the fact that the licensing clauses will be fiercely debated should compensation for withdrawal be adhered to, gives rise to some speculation. (The Government according to our cablegram of the 11th ultimo, in consequence of the opposition of a large section of their supporters, have decided to withdraw the licensing clause of the Local Government Bill.) The friendship existing between Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Randolph Churchill, and their united endeavours to press upon Lord Salisbury the acceptance of a local government bill for Ireland, the anxiety felt concerning the healths of Mr. John Bright and Lord Hartington, the Colonel King-Harman Salary Bill, and the cost of private telegrams sent by the Queen during her stay at Florence, are commented upon in the letter. Among other subjects noticed by our correspondent are the fact that the Messageries s.s. Caledonien will be the last vessel of that line to call at Mauritius, and the purchase of a large coaling station by that company from the British Admiralty. Madame Melba's success in London, and speculation in colonial circles as to the nominations for colonial Governorships that will shortly fall vacant.

The extended sittings of the Supreme Court for the trial of causes were brought to a conclusion yesterday with the exception of the Banco Court, in which the part heard case, Birch versus the Bulli Coal-mining Company, will be continued next week. The cases disposed of yesterday were for the most part unimportant, but in one or two the facts involved were somewhat interesting. In the action Barton v. Smail and Adlam, plaintiff sued to recover amount of costs for which the defendants had become liable under a bond. It appears that in March last a man named James Erwin was summoned before the Supreme Court to show cause why he should not be committed for contempt in neglecting to attend the Master in Equity's office for examination, and he was released upon the defendants becoming bondsmen for his future attendance. In the bond executed by the defendants the costs incurred in the matter—some £56—were also inserted, and Erwin having failed to pay this sum, the Master in Equity sought to recover it from the bondsmen. The defence set up was that the document was not read over to them before they signed it, and that, therefore, they were not aware that they had become sureties for the costs. A verdict was given for the amount claimed. In the undefended action of ejectment, Cairns v. Fitzgibbon, the counsel for plaintiff stated that the defendant retained possession of the premises—an hotel in Botany-road, Waterloo—though the license had been cancelled and all his goods had been sold. He had, in point of fact, fortified his position, and was only served with the writ while he was sitting at the window. A verdict was returned in favour of the plaintiff. In Chambers, before Mr. Justice Foster, a rule nisi to set aside the decision of Mr. District Court Judge Dowling in the action Sydney Newspaper Company v. Muir was granted, and his Honor delivered his reserved judgment in regard to the application of Catherine Fry.

Another of the old landmarks of Sydney is shortly to disappear. The block of buildings at the corner of Bridge and Pitt streets, formerly a portion of the Bloxsome Estate, has been purchased by a syndicate, who intend to pull down the present structure and erect thereon a very presentable edifice.

Mr. C. B. Cairnes, of Parramatta, has received a letter from Messrs. G. Armitage and Co., Colombo, with respect to the export of Australian fruit to Bombay, via that port. It states that, as regards shipments of fruit to Colombo, they would be glad to receive small consignments until such time as they are able to establish a regular demand. The market, however, is a small one, and there is no good accommodation for cool storage, and fruit sent there would undoubtedly be left in the sun for some hours. As regards shipments to Bombay, the fruit would have to be similarly exposed to the sun waiting shipment. In the face of that, they could not advise shipments to Bombay via Colombo. Grapes would sell well at Colombo, and they advise small shipments at first. Oranges grown in Colombo fetch 50 cents per dozen, but they think Parramatta oranges would fetch even better prices, as they are of superior quality.

The collection of photographs of the principal institutions in Sydney and views of the harbour and other interesting and picturesque places in New South Wales, which the Government have decided upon sending to the Melbourne Centennial International Exhibition, have been elegantly mounted and framed by Mr. D. In last Saturday week's issue a letter appeared from Mr. Chas. Moyse, of Marrickville, complaining that three months ago he lodged an application for two transfers to purchasers of property through his solicitor. The title is Torrens', and what ought to be done in 14 days, at most, is not done in three months. The Registrar-General writes to say that the transfers in question were stamped at the Stamp Duties Office on the 4th June, and lodged over the counter of his office on the same day. On the 13th one certificate was ready for issue, and on the 16th June the other, an interval of only 12 days between time of lodgment and completion, and both certificates were taken up by his solicitor on the 21st June.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

At the meeting of the Adelaide branch of the Royal Geographical Society of Australasia this evening Sir S. Davenport was elected president, and Sir Thomas Elder vice-president.

It has been ascertained by interviewing the leading merchants of Adelaide, with reference to the Barrier trade and its retention by this colony, that there is harmony of opinion that the question is not one between Port Adelaide and Port Pirie, but between Adelaide and Sydney. It is generally felt that the break of gauge difficulty being overcome, the trade now done with Adelaide will be largely diverted to Sydney; and it is urged that the misconception of the true position of affairs is so patent at Port Pirie, that goods from Adelaide are being boycotted there.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

The arguments on an application to quash the report made by the returning officer as to the result of the local option polls at Geelong North in March last were concluded in the Supreme Court to-day. The Court were of opinion that the report of the returning officer was not a judicial proceeding to be brought before it by writ of certiorari, but the Judges intimated that before commencing to decide what licensed houses should be closed the Licensing Court ought to have taken evidence to ascertain the determination of the inhabitants. The Court reserved judgment on the question as to whether the regulations were ultra vires.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO A PASSENGER TRAIN.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

GUNNING, FRIDAY.

A railway accident occurred about half a mile from Gunning this morning. The express due here at 12 o'clock was travelling at the rate of 30 miles an hour, when the axle of a truck broke, throwing the carriages and guard's van off the line. The train travelled about a mile and a half in this manner, the carriages and trucks grazing the rocks in many places. The line is torn up, and the rails are thrown out of gear for a long distance. The train was stopped about 100 yards from the bridge. Had the train reached it, a terrible accident would not have been averted. Some of the carriages are smashed very much, the brakes are all broken, and the line is in a terrible state of disorder. The damage to the rolling-stock is estimated at about £500. The line can hardly be cleared to-night. There were 12 passengers in the train, none of whom were injured. Men are now engaged in clearing the line.

Cummins secured the prize from five other competitors, Elias Bowden being 2nd. In class C, W. Newton was awarded the prize, he being the only competitor. In class E, J. R. Mackenzie was 1, and Ed. Vickery 2. In class F, J. Watson won the prize, with Thomas Carter 2. The champion prize for the best work on the ground, was awarded to Wm. Mead. The whole work was very creditably done, considering that the ground was of a rather crumbly nature. The prizes were afterwards paid over by Mr. Robert Scobie, one of the vice-presidents of the association.

ELGIN WATCHES
ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

THE LEADING AMERICAN TIMEKEEPERS.

THE MOST EXCELLENT WATCHES FOR RAILWAYS.

These celebrated watches are unsurpassed for excellence of material and workmanship, and are universally acknowledged to be the most accurate timekeepers.

Astronomers and explorers have unhesitatingly pronounced them more trustworthy than the best known chronometers.

Nearly all the Observatories throughout America are provided with ELGIN WATCHES to correct any error in the rate of their Chronometers.

In taking observations astronomers frequently use ELGIN WATCHES in preference to their chronometers.

Explorers tell us that on expeditions made into some parts of the uninhabited globe they have been provided with no less than "four chronometers," but that the only "horological instrument" upon which they were able to rely was an ELGIN WATCH, all the others having become useless.—Vide Astronomer Powell's report.

A shock of earthquake was felt at Yass and in the district this morning, at 13 minutes past 6. It lasted four or five seconds, and travelled south-west to north-east.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The police magistrate at Berrima telegraphed this morning: "Sharp shock of earthquake here this morning at 10 minutes past 6. It was preceded and followed at intervals of about 20 minutes by much lighter shocks." It was reported also from Goulburn, Moss Vale, Broughton's Creek, Wollongong, respectively, at 5.10 a.m., 6.15 a.m., 6.30 a.m., 6.5 a.m. Later in the day a gentleman living at 110, Womerah-avenue, Darlinghurst, Sydney, called at the Observatory and told me that he felt an earthquake distinctly at 6.10 a.m., and that it lasted 10 or 12 seconds. We have no record of any such motion at the Observatory. Instruments recording barometer, wind, rain, and temperature, are not adapted to record vibrations. It will be observed that so far the reports of the earthquake come from a very limited district, between Sydney and Goulburn. With reference to the earthquake on Thursday, July 5, reported by Mr. Rigg, Mr. J. A. Gread writes to me to say that he was almost awake when a terrific explosion startled him, and that it was distinctly heard by three other persons in the house, two of whom were awakened out of sleep by it. The house shook all over, windows, and glasses rattled very much. The sensation was similar to that experienced when standing in a house when an explosion in the city sewerage works takes place, and he thought it was a blast in a quarry 369 or 400 yards away. The motion was more up and down, was not conscious of backward and forward motion. On reference to the record of tides in Sydney harbour, I find that between 6 and 7 a.m. of 6th (Thursday) several slight waves, such as are called earthquake waves, are shown, one of these was 20 minutes to 6 a.m., but was insignificant in amount, the rise and fall being less than 1 inch.

I am, &c.,
H. C. RUSSELL.

Observatory, July 6.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I beg to inform you that at 6.15 this morning a very severe shock of earthquake was felt at my residence. It seemed to travel a south-westerly direction. It caused a great alarm, as the building fairly shook. The knobs of the beds rattled as if some one was moving them—they were put on somewhat loosely—and the dishes in the dresser also rattled. The vibration lasted about 10 seconds. It was almost as severe as the one I happened to experience in Launceston on Sunday, 1884, when several steeples, chimneys, &c., fell.

I am, &c.,
J. B. BEAUREGARD.

CASUALTIES.

A coalheaver named Stephen Hayes, 33 years of age, residing in Cambridge-street, Miller's Point, fell down the hold of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Victoria yesterday and suffered fractures of several of his ribs, besides a number of other bruises. He attended at the Sydney Hospital, where his injuries were dressed by Dr. Gwynne Hughes.

A man named Charles Thomas, 50 years of age, a cook employed at the City Night Refuge and Soup Kitchen, No. 511, Kent-street, was admitted to the Sydney Hospital yesterday evening suffering from an apoplectic fit. The man was in an unconscious condition, and at a late hour last night was in a dying state.

A man named W. H. Boyo, about 25 years of age, living at 30, Jamison-street, yesterday afternoon swallowed the contents of a bottle of medicine which it was stated he had purchased at Mr. Senior's pharmacy, in George-street. After drinking the liquid he expressed a desire to consult a doctor. In accordance with his wish Dr. Hunter was called in to see him, and that gentleman remained in attendance upon the patient, who was in a very low state, until he expired. Dr. Hunter stated that in his opinion death was the result of an overdose of chloral hydrate and bromide of potassium, a medicine which, had it been taken as prescribed, would not have been attended with fatal effect. A report of the occurrence has been sent to the coroner.

A lad named Richard Anderson, 9 years of age, living with his parents at No. 12, Kensington-street, off George-street West, was admitted to the Prince Alfred Hospital last night, and, on examination, was found to be suffering from a compound fracture of the right leg. It appears that the boy was riding on a dray in front of his parent's house, when his leg became caught in the spokes of one of the wheels, and before the cart could be stopped he sustained the injury described.

At about a quarter-past 7 o'clock yesterday morning one of the inmates of the Callan Park Lunatic Asylum assaulted another patient named Frederick Hearn in such a violent manner as to cause his death. It is stated that Hearn was struck two blows by his assailant, one in the face and the other in the region of the stomach, which caused him to fall to the ground, and about five minutes afterwards he expired. An inquest will be held at Callan Park at 10 o'clock to-day.

THE AUSTRALIAN MUSEUM.

Visitors to the Museum will be interested to notice among the new arrivals a splendid example of the Rhinoceros sondaicus from Java, one of the largest species known. It stands near the staircase beside another (Rhinoceros sumatrensis), from Sumatra. There is also a pretty Oryx antelope, from Africa, and a zebra, which were not there a few weeks ago. The collection of antelopes here is well worth a visit. We understand the skeleton of the whale captured off the coast, and cut up lately on the beach at the Bondi Aquarium, has been secured for the Museum. It is not yet ready for exhibit, but eventually it will be a feature in the Museum, as we are told it is nearly the only perfect skeleton of the kind in any museum in the world. The collection of Cetacea itself is very extensive, and it is to be regretted that several of the largest cannot be exhibited for want of room.

DEPUTATIONS.

TUMBERUMBA RAILWAY.

A deputation waited on the Colonial Secretary yesterday for the purpose of urging the desirableness of constructing a railway line from Tumberumba to Wagga Wagga, and to ask that this line be submitted to the Public Works Committee for their consideration. The deputation was introduced to the Premier by Mr. Gormly, M.L.A., and consisted of Messrs. Dibbs, Waddell, Stokes, Gale, Day, Melville, Garvan, Lyne, Levien, and Chanter, Ms.L.A., the Hon. W. Halliday, M.L.C., and Mr. W. Gregory, J.P., of Deniliquin. Mr. Gormly, in introducing the deputation, pointed out that a light branch line from Wagga Wagga to Tumberumba was much needed, and would be very profitable, as it would pass through a district of a very fertile character. Some time since Parliament had voted a sum of £710,000 for this line, and plans and book of reference had been prepared, and therefore it was considered that the Government ought to include this line in their railway policy. There was abundance of timber along the line, and no large bridges would be required, and the line could therefore be constructed at a very moder te price—probably about half of that estimated when the policy of the Railway Department was to construct lines of an unnecessarily expensive and durable character. The line would be most useful in supplying the lower Riverina district during times of drought with agricultural produce, and would open up a feeding-ground for stock, and thus save the immense losses which occurred during times of drought. Mr. Dibbs pointed out that the line could be referred to the Public Works Committee under the 13th section of the Act. The committee would then make full inquiries, and report on the line. On a former occasion, when in office, he had satisfied himself as to the necessity for the line, and the prospect of its proving remunerative. All that they asked was that a Minister should move that the line be referred to the Public Works Committee, whose decision they were willing to abide by. Several other members of the deputation addressed the Premier in favour of this line. Owing to the richness of the soil, it was almost impossible to make passable roads in the district, and therefore a railway was urgently required. It was also pointed out that the Victorian Government was extending its lines towards the Upper Murray, and would thus, unless this line was constructed, secure the trade of this district.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply, said that it must not be inferred from the circumstance that that line had not been mentioned in the proposals spoken of before Parliament that the Government were indifferent or opposed to it. The point was that the Government could not submit all the lines which they might have thought it would be well to construct, and they had selected a certain portion of them which would amount to a cost that they thought would be enough to submit at one time. He was himself in favour of this line, and had no reason to doubt that the whole Cabinet were in favour of it. There seemed to be a slight misapprehension as to the operation of the Public Works Act, as any proposal for a railway made now must be made on the responsibility of the Government just as was the case formerly, as a line could not be submitted in any perfunctory way merely to be inquired into by the Public Works Committee. Indeed, on the contrary, if the Act had the effect it was desired to have, the Government would have to be more particular and exact in their inquiries, so as to be sure of the basis on which they made their proposals, because it could not be other than slightly unpleasant to have any proposals rejected after they had been examined by this committee. The committee was appointed, not to relieve the Government of responsibility, but simply to stand between the Government and the people in checking calculations and estimates, so as to see that any proposals were such as to be of public advantage to the country. He believed that this line would turn out to be all that its advocates stated, and would be to the advantage of the country. The question was whether the Government ought to include it in their proposals instead of some other line, or whether they would not be justified in adding it to the proposals already made. He happened to know a good deal of the district, as at one time he had inquired into it, and he thought the line was a good one. He found that it would be impossible for the Government to submit, according to the provisions of the Public Works Act, all the proposals they had foreshadowed a short time ago, to Parliament this session, because they would not be in a position to comply with the Act, as all the plans and books of reference were not ready. He had been in consultation with the Minister for Works that morning, and he found that several railway proposals would not be in a sufficiently advanced condition to submit them to Parliament this session, and this would be one reason why they should reconsider their decisions, with a view to seeing whether they could not include this line in their proposals. All he could promise them was that at the next consultation of the Government he would see that this railway was reconsidered with a view to its inclusion in the Government proposals. The Government were not in any way opposed to the line, only they felt that it would be impossible to submit all the lines they approved of in one batch to the House. If the plans and books of reference for this line were ready, as had been stated, to be submitted to the House, that would be a recommendation in its favour, as all the railway proposals were not in that condition.

BOWRAL-ROBERTSON RAILWAY.

Mr. T. Garrett, Minister for Lands yesterday introduced a numerous deputation to the Minister for Works, requesting the construction of a light railway from Bowral to Robertson. It was urged that the line would pay, and would prove to be of the greatest advantage to the residents of the districts through which it would pass. It was also stated that plans were prepared for the line some time ago. Mr. Sutherland said that if the plans of the proposed railway were in a condition that would enable him to place the matter before the Cabinet on Monday he would do so.

BRIDGE AT BRANDON GROVE.

Mr. Brown, M.L.A., yesterday, introduced to the Minister for Works a deputation from the residents of Brandon Grove, requesting that a bridge might be erected over Williams River at the point named. It was urged that there were between 60 and 70 families in the district who needed the accommodation of a bridge, without which great danger was experienced by the residents and the travelling public who needed to cross the river. Mr. Sutherland said that the proposed bridge would cost £4000. That was a large sum, but in addition to the expense the officers of the department had reported doubtfully as to the necessity for the bridge, as there were other bridges crossing the river. He, however, promised to favourably consider the request, and although nothing could be done this session, he would put the matter on the Estimates to be submitted to Parliament next session.

SIDING AT EVELEIGH.

A deputation from Redfern yesterday waited upon the Minister for Works to request that a railway siding might be erected at the eastern side of Cornwallis-street, Redfern. This it was argued would relieve the strain now placed upon the Darling Harbour station, and would be equally convenient to the residents of Redfern, Waterloo, and Alexandria. Mr. Sutherland said that the officers of the department had reported that the construction of a siding at the place named would be impracticable.

THE CHINESE QUESTION.

A deputation from the anti-Chinese meeting, which was held in the Domain on Saturday last, waited on the Premier yesterday afternoon, and presented to him the resolutions which were passed at that meeting. The deputation was introduced by Mr. Melville, M.L.A., and consisted of Messrs. O'Sullivan, M.L.A., R. C. Luscombe, Talbot, Musto, J. M'Killip, Smith, Edwards, Huntley, W. R. Ellis, Davis (secretary of the Maritime Labour Council), T. J. Ross (secretary Anti-Chinese League), and others. Mr. Melville, in introducing the deputation, pointed out that it represented the Maritime Labour Council, Seamen's Union, Wharf Labourers' Association, Anti-Chinese League, and other organisations who had arranged the public demonstration held on Saturday last. The following resolution had been passed at that meeting, which they now desired to present to the Government—"That this meeting emphatically protests against the employment of Asiatic crews on board the mail steamers subsidised by our New South Wales Government, and considers that in all future contracts prohibitory clauses should be inserted." He expressed his entire sympathy with the views expressed by the resolution, and trusted that the Government would in the future see their way to act on it. Several other members of the deputation addressed the Premier in support of the resolution.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply, said that he would take care the resolution which they had presented to him, as having been passed at the public meeting on Saturday last, was submitted to the Government; and he would also represent in the proper quarter the matter embodied in these resolutions. He entirely sympathised with the views which had been expressed by the members of the deputation, as he thought that it was a desirable thing to originate here an Australian marine. He had on more than one occasion, when speaking on this subject, expressed the hope that the name of Australian seamen would become as eminent in the world as the name of British seamen, and he saw no reason why that should not be the case. He could remember that when the "Vernon" scholarship was under the Colonial Secretary's Department he had repeatedly refused to sanction the apprenticeship of boys to foreign-going ships, on the grounds that we ought not to lose the life which we had rescued and trained, and that if a boy wished to go to sea he ought to be apprenticed to a ship sailing from an Australian port. His action in this direction was perhaps the best guarantee which he could give of the interest which he took in the creation of an Australian marine. In this respect he sympathised with them, but it was a very difficult thing to interfere with ship-owning companies in the employment of their labour. He did not, however, see any real obstacle to a provision in any contract made with a ship carrying the mails which were subsidised by the public funds of this colony providing that the vessels should be manned by British crews. He thought that would be better than a clause providing that they should not be manned by Asiatics. With regard to the Chinese question generally, he had, on previous occasions, said enough to indicate what his feelings were. He considered that it was the interest of every man in this country to preserve these colonies for the British people, and in the future he would exercise whatever influence he possessed towards this end.

REDFERN MUNICIPAL LOAN.

Mr. J. Sutherland, the Minister for Works, yesterday introduced to Sir Henry Parkes a deputation representing the municipality of Redfern. The deputation requested that as the loan for £30,000 which had been negotiated by the municipality to carry out sewerage works had been taken over by the Water and Sewerage Board, the Government should without delay introduce into the Assembly a measure dealing with the matter. Sir Henry Parkes said that he could not guarantee the introduction of the bill desired at the present time, because there is so much business before the House. He, however, promised to introduce the bill as soon as he possibly could.

THE ENTRANCES TO THE GARDEN PALACE GROUNDS.

Yesterday a deputation waited upon the Colonial Secretary with reference to the entrances to the Garden Palace Grounds. The deputation consisted of Mr. W. M'Millan, M.L.A., Mr. Street, M.L.A., Mr. Edward Greville, and Mr. E. L. Montefiore. Mr. M'Millan pointed out that a gate was to be erected within the Domain, at the top of Bent-street, as an entrance to the Garden Palace Grounds. He was of opinion that to put the elaborate gates which were contemplated in such a secluded spot was in opposition to all common sense. The matter had been seriously considered by the gentlemen present, and it was thought that if the gates were erected in Macquarie-street, midway between Bent-street and the entrance to the Governor's Domain, they would be seen to advantage, and would be of considerably greater utility. He desired it to be understood that he was not advocating the expenditure of money for the purpose in view, but considered that if the proposed gates were to be erected at all, they should be utilised to the best advantage and to the credit of the city.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply, stated that he would ask the Colonial Architect to give an expression of opinion on the matter.

ENMORE AND COOK'S RIVER-ROAD.

A deputation from the Newtown Municipal Council waited on the Premier yesterday morning, to ask that the Government would have the Enmore and Cook's River-road wood-blocked. The deputation consisted of Messrs. Hawken and Joseph Abbott, Ms.L.A., Alderman Bellamy, Mayor, Aldermen J. F. Smith, Dolman, Nelson, Jolly, and O'Connell. Mr. Hawken introduced the deputation, several members of which addressed the Premier in favour of the work proposed, and all the municipalities interested were, it was stated, willing to contribute largely to the expense of blocking this road. It was also asked that a piece of land, formerly used for the old police court, should be granted to the municipality for use as a site for a public library.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply, stated that the Government had not lost sight of the matter of blocking this road, but the difficulty which stood in their way was that the Government did not know, if they sanctioned the expenditure of public money in this way, how many other claims for similar assistance from the Government might be put forward by other municipalities. The Government would consider the matter, and would do the work if they possibly could, and he gave them an absolute assurance that the matter would be settled within three weeks. Sir Henry also promised to go himself and inspect the place in the course of a week, when he would look at the site of the land which the Government were asked to grant to the municipality.

POSTAL REQUIREMENTS AT NORTH BOTANY.

A deputation consisting of the Mayor and aldermen of North Botany waited upon the Postmaster-General yesterday in reference to the postal arrangements at present existing in the borough. The Mayor (Alderman Coward) stated that a post and telegraph office was badly needed in the township. At present there was only a receiving-office, the nearest post-office being two and a half miles distant. The deputation complained that letters intended for North Botany were despatched to South Botany before reaching their destination.

Mr. ROBERTS, in reply, said that if he could see his way he would remedy any inconvenience they might be labouring under. At present, however, the post-office in the Botany district only yielded a revenue of £318 per annum, while the expenditure was £515. The question was whether the prospect of an increase of postal business was sufficient to warrant an extra expenditure. He would give the matter his best consideration.

THE RAILWAY FROM WATERFALL TO OTFORD.

Yesterday the Minister for Public Works was waited upon by a deputation, who desired to bring about the opening of the railway from Waterfall to Otford. The deputation was introduced by Mr. R. Stevenson, M.L.A., in the unavoidable absence of Mr. Woodward, M.L.A., representative of the Illawarra district; the other gentlemen present were Messrs. John Biggar, A. Campbell, W. Wiley, W. J. Wiseman, and G. L. Fuller. The deputation informed the Minister that there had been very great delay on the part of the contractors in completing the line between Illawarra and Sydney. In fact, the contract time for the completion of the work was the end of last year. If the part of the line referred to were opened, at least 1000 miles of coaching per day would be saved to the travelling public. Mr. Sutherland replied that he had before him reports which told him that if this part of the line were opened at once, the opening of the whole of it would be delayed till six months from this time. From the information before him, the whole of the line would be completed in three months. He would have an interview with Mr. Whitton, and would go into the matter thoroughly. As soon as he had done this, he would forward them a reply through their member.

GOODS SIDING AT BEECROFT.

Mr. Frank Farnell and Mr. J. Nobbs, Ms.L.A., introduced to the Minister for Works yesterday a deputation consisting of Messrs. George Pile, Lawson, Harrison, Biden, Herring, Page, and Tucker, who asked that a goods siding should be constructed at Beecroft. It was urged that a good revenue could be derived therefrom, as a large quantity of timber and fruit would be sent away from the locality. At present, too, it was with great difficulty that bricks and other building materials could be landed in the neighbourhood. Mr. Sutherland said that the reports of his officers were very much against any such undertaking. However, he would promise to visit the spot during the recess.

IMPROVEMENTS IN PADDINGTON.

A deputation, introduced by Mr. Alfred Allen, M.L.A., waited upon the Minister for Lands yesterday with reference to some improvements in the borough of Paddington. Mr. Hellmrich, the Mayor of the municipality, explained that the deputation desired that the original alignment of Ormond-street should be carried out at a width of 33ft., and that if the Government would do this, the council would continue the thoroughfare at the same width as far as the bend in Brown-street. Mr. Garrett asked that the request and promise should be put in writing, and stated that the matter should then be dealt with.

RAILWAY TO FORBES.

The Minister for Works was yesterday waited upon by a deputation introduced by Mr. Garland, M.L.A., to bring before the Minister the matter of the rival routes of the proposed railway to Forbes. It was stated that four routes had been examined, but according to the railway proposals of the Government only one was to be submitted to the Railway Commissioners. What the deputation required was that the whole of the rival routes should be submitted to the Commissioners, so that the best could be selected. The deputation believed that the line suggested in the railway proposals would be the most expensive of all. Reasons were submitted from the Carcoar Railway League, claiming that that route, if submitted to the commissioners, would be likely to meet with favourable consideration. Mr. Sutherland promised to submit the request of the deputation to the Cabinet.

BLAYNEY RAILWAY STATION.

Mr. Garland, M.LA., yesterday headed a deputation to the Minister for Works, the object of which deputation was to urge upon the Minister the necessity for immediate steps being taken to improve the accommodation at the Blaney railway station. It was stated that the accommodation provided for the stationmaster was insufficient, and that the provision for the public was wretched. Mr. Sutherland said that what was wanted was a totally new station, which, to be complete, would cost £10,000. He could not undertake to promise so large an expenditure, but he would promise the carrying out of the smaller wants, which he estimated would cost £2000, and he would have no objection to recommend to the new railway commissioners that they should carry out the completion of the work as soon as possible.

WANTS AT HOMEBUSH.

Mr. Jeanneret, M.L.A., yesterday waited upon the Minister for Works and requested that a gate and shed be erected at Homebush. Mr. Sutherland promised to give attention to the request.

WAITING-ROOM AT BOTANY.

The Minister for Works was yesterday interviewed by a deputation representing the municipality of Botany. The deputation requested that a ditch on the Botany-road be filled in, that a waiting-room for passengers be erected at Gardener's loop, that the tram service be improved, and that the tram section be extended from Gardener's-lane to King-street. Mr. Sutherland said that he was willing to do all he possibly could to meet the convenience of the public, but it was not to be expected that while waiting-rooms were required at Moore Park, Randwick, and Coogee—lines which did pay—the requests of the deputation could be granted for a line which did not pay. The trams would soon be passing out of the hands of the Government, and then the residents of the respective districts would, perhaps, find their true position in the matter of tram accommodation. It was the duty of the Government to run trams where they paid, or where they would be likely to increase trade. After the matter had been fully considered, alterations might be made in the times of running the trams to Botany. Beyond that he could promise nothing.

THE WOOD PAVEMENTS OF THE CITY.

A deputation of gentlemen connected with the Patent Cork Asphaltum Company, Limited, and others, including Aldermen Jeanneret, Manning, Taylor, and Mr. Lee, M.L.A., waited yesterday upon the Mayor (Alderman John Harris), with whom was the City Surveyor (Mr. R. W. Richards), to submit a scheme for laying wood pavement which it was urged would materially contribute to render the traffic in the streets noiseless. The company's plan is to apply to the wood blocks before they are laid a dressing of composition which practically increases the thickness of the blocks by 2in., and, having treated the four sides with some adhesive substance, to lay the blocks as close together as it is possible to bring them. The whole of the pavement would then present a surface formed of the patent composition, which it is claimed is impervious to moisture, durable, elastic, and gives a sure foothold to horses. Blocks to which a dressing of the patent cork asphaltum had been applied were submitted to the Mayor, and it seemed as if they possessed the qualities claimed for them. The deputation, on behalf of the company, asked for permission to lay, under the supervision of the City Surveyor, a section of a street, to enable a thorough test to be made, the corporation to supply the wood blocks, and the company to dress them with the composition and to direct the laying of them. The Mayor pointed out that an experiment somewhat similar to that now recommended had already been made in the vicinity of the Royal Hotel, but it did not prove altogether satisfactory. Within a short time after the pavement had been laid, the composition became disintegrated, and, becoming troublesome, the blocks then laid had to be removed. Nevertheless, to enable a thorough test of the blocks, a sample of which had been shown him to-day, to be made, he was willing to consent to the company laying a section of their pavement at the intersection of George and Gipps streets, provided the company would accept all liability for any damage which might arise in consequence of their method being tested in that way, and would at the same time undertake that, should their pavement become a nuisance or in any way dangerous to traffic, they would remove the blocks, and make the pavement good for traffic.

THE MARITIME LABOUR DISPUTE.

A SETTLEMENT ARRIVED AT.

An amicable settlement was arrived at yesterday in respect to the difficulty which had arisen in relation to the discharge of the cargo and the supply of coal to the steamship Alameda. The parties concerned having agreed upon certain conditions, they were subsequently embodied in an agreement, which was signed in the presence of the Consul for the United States of America. We have been furnished with a memorandum which states that "the position of affairs is now as follows:—The cable having broken down, and Captain Morse being not fully aware of his owners' views in the matter, he necessarily had to communicate with his owners, but in consequence of the cable being down, several days elapsed without his being able to get any directions, and as the Maritime Council appeared somewhat friendly disposed towards Captain Morse as a master, they fell in with his suggestion not to remove the Chinese crew from their present capacity, as the council originally demanded, nor did they lay any very serious stress, after explanation had been made to them, upon compelling him to ship a crew in Sydney for the round voyage, but agreed to his suggestion, that a sufficient number of men to man the fire department should be taken to San Francisco, and if it met with the approval of his owners the men were then to be shipped a voyage to Sydney in place of the Chinese; but in the event of the owners not approving of this middle course they have the option of sending the men back to Sydney as passengers, paying their wages from San Francisco to Sydney. The owners might prefer to select their own crew on the spot, as it is only natural, more especially as the ship is under the American flag, that the owners should desire to conduct their own business under their own laws. The Seamen's Union undertake to pay the wages of these men to San Francisco. Twenty-one men are to go to San Francisco, to be there shipped in place of the 33 Chinese. Captain Morse hopes to get the cargo of the vessel discharged, and her coal in in such time as will enable him to leave Sydney in proper time."

We are also informed that the agreement provides that the Chinese shall be discharged from the Alameda within two days after the arrival of that vessel at San Francisco and the rate of pay for the New South Wales men is fixed at £9 per month for firemen, and £7 per month for coal trimmers, the amounts which the unions of this city require shall be paid to their members.

The Alameda came alongside the old wharf of the P. and O. S. N. Company at Circular Quay yesterday morning, and at a later period of the day the work of discharging her cargo was commenced.

It is believed that the Maritime Labour Council intend to bestow some attention upon other vessels on which Chinese are employed, and it is reported that the next steamer with respect to which they will endeavour to enforce their principles, will be one owned by the E. and A. Company.

THE CHINESE QUESTION.

ANTI-CHINESE LEAGUE.

A meeting of the Executive of the Anti-Chinese League was held at the Maritime Hall, last evening, under the presidency of Mr. N. Melville, M.L.A.

The CHAIRMAN reported the result of the interview which the deputation appointed at the meeting held in the Domain had with the Premier that day, and then went on to say that the Chinese Restriction Bill, as amended by the Council and accepted by the Government, would certainly be a much greater check against Chinese immigration than they had had in the past. It would be well that the league should not allow the Chinese question to fall through from inanition, and should not be satisfied with what they had achieved. They had gained a certain amount of ground; but they must still gain more. The necessity for the members of the executive to be active in the prosecution of their mission would still exist. He though it would be well for them to continue the agitation in various parts of the city and suburbs, so as to keep alive the principles which they espoused. The work they had already done had involved them in an indebtedness of nearly £150, which he hoped they would endeavour to speedily wipe out. Now, whilst their seafaring brethren were fighting for the water part of the battle, he thought it would be advisable for this league to commence next with the question of Chinese engaged in the furniture trade. Even if they did not recover for white men the furniture trade they would enter upon an agitation which at least must have a tendency to protect other trades from any prospect of monopoly by the Chinese. The public were with the league. The only thing they had to do was to keep the public alive. No doubt during next session of Parliament they would be able to get a bill passed through requiring that Chinese productions should be marked as of Chinese manufacture. He was exceedingly pleased at being able to report that much progress had been made during his term of office.

At this stage of the proceedings Mr. J. Lennan (representative of the Stonemasons' Society) stepped on to the platform and presented to Mr. Melville an eight-pointed gold star, in recognition of the services he had rendered to the league. The star was ornamented with an emu and a kangaroo, which were encircled by a wreath. On the back of the medal was an inscription, which was as follows:—"Anti-Chinese League of New South Wales. Presented to Ninian Melville, M.P., president, for valuable public services rendered. June 30, 1888." The star was mounted with a suspending brooch, to which was attached a yellow-and-black ribbon, indicative of a determination to give the Chinese no quarter.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, and resulted in the re-election, without opposition, of Mr. N. Melville as president, and in the election of Messrs. O'Connell and Lennan as vice-presidents, Mr. Thomas Ross as honorary secretary, and Mr. Alfred Bennett as honorary treasurer; Messrs. Newlands, Dooley, Musto, Mitchell, and Garton were elected, with the officers ex officio, as an executive committee, and Messrs. Dooley and Mitchell as auditors.

Mr. Musto then stated the nature of the agreement entered into betwen Captain Morse of the steamship Alameda and the Maritime Labour Council.

On the motion of Mr. BRENNAN, seconded by Mr. GARTON, it was resolved,—"That the secretary be requested to write to the Trades and Labour Council, asking their cooperation in taking steps with a view to the reorganisation of the Cabinetmakers' Society."

Amongst other directions in which it was urged action should be taken by the league was in respect to the employment of Chinese cooks and servants by hotelkeepers. It was urged by Mr. Brennan that all members of trades unions should boycott those hotelkeepers who gave employment to Chinese. It was suggested by Mr. Musto that the league should proclaim the names of all persons who employed Chinese.

On the motion of Mr. MITCHELL it was resolved,—"That the executive committee be requested to procure information relative to the employment of Chinese by Europeans."

The meeting then terminated.

TRADES MOVEMENTS.

The monthly meeting of the Trades Hall Committee was held last evening at the Temperance Hall, Pitt-street. Mr. J. E. West (president) occupied the chair. The following societies were represented, viz.:—Journeymen Tailors, Stonemasons, Progressive Carpenters, Shipwrights, Ironmoulders, Plumbers, Typographical Association, Tinsmiths, United Labourers, United Painters, Tobacco Operatives, Coopers, Boilermakers, and Coachmakers. Mr. Wagg made a progress report with regard to the temporary trades hall building. He thought that by the end of next week the brickwork would be nearly finished. He would be glad to see members visiting the premises. The Chairman referred to a communication from the Typographical Association, announcing a benefit concert on behalf of the late Mr. Logan's children. Mr. Ferrier, secretary, made a financial statement, which showed the following:—Balance from last half-year, £1083 3s. 5d.; income for current half-year, £566 8s. 3d.; total, £2249 11s. 8d.; expenditure, £1391 10s. 5d.; balance, £858 1s. 3d.; calls to come in, £801 5s.; total, £1659 6s. 3d.; balance of contract, £546: total amount in hand after paying contractor, £312 1s. 3d.

A special meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held at the Temperance Hall on Thursday evening, to consider the report of the standing orders committee. Mr. M'Killop, vice-president, occupied the chair. The report was adopted. Mr. Wiley referred to a deputation which had waited upon the Minister of Justice that day with regard to prison labour. This was a serious matter, which affected labour organisations. He moved that the council dissent from the action of the Government in placing criminal-made goods in competition with the free labour of our artisans. Other members of the council spoke on the question, but ultimately it was agreed that the matter should stand over until the next meeting.

At a meeting of the Eight-hour Demonstration Committee on Thursday evening, the following officers were elected:—J. M'Gowan, president; W. Musto, vice-president; C. Goode, general secretary; F. Watson, financial secretary; H. Nelson, treasurer. Messrs. D. Small, W. H. Edmunds, and Sharp were elected trustees; and T. Bavister, J. Fell, J. Lawrence, Darnley, Molloy, D. O'Brien, Clark, and N. M'Arthur, member of committee.

Transactions in silver companies were numerous, and of good extent. One broker has taken 3500 shares in North Broken Hill. With the exception of Broken Hill Proprietary, which have free sale at rising rates, prices for silver shares generally closed under yesterday's quotations. Gold companies were more dealt in, most attention being given to Band and Albion, Berry Consols, Berry No. 1, Mount Morgan, Queensland, Pearl, Star of the East, and Working Miners' United, all selling at full prices. The market closed generally firm.

BRISBANE, FRIDAY.

A rumour is current at Rockhampton to the effect that the Coo-ope mine, on the property of Mr. Robert Ross, near Yepoon, is to be floated in Melbourne with a capital of £1,000,000.

BROKEN HILL, FRIDAY.

In the White Lead district matters are proceeding quietly but satisfactorily. In the north level, White Lead Proprietary, at 130ft., ore containing carbonates and a little fine chlorides is being procured. In No. 3 shaft, a crosscut eastward, at 100ft. level, is just being started to cut the lode. The main shaft is going down steadily, and if a good supply of water is struck, the directors will probably erect concentrating works to treat the low grade ore at present being raised. In the Rising Sun mine the ore is still carrying chlorides in the ironstone in fair quantities. The engine shaft is down 100ft., and will go 50ft. further unless water on the lode is first struck. In the underlay shaft they are driving north and south along the course of the lode, but are not breaking out much ore. A winding engine for the South Extended is expected to arrive to-day or to-morrow, and when ready to haul, breaking out of the ore will be commenced. Sales: North, 41s. 6d., 42s.; White Leads, 12s. 6d. The minerals sent by rail during the past week were:—B. H. P. Co., 10,050 bars of bullion, 365 tons, value £17,456; 3320 bags of ore were sent to Dry Creek, 96 tons, of the value of £864; North mine, 409 bags, 18 tons, £399; Pinnacle Tribute, 60 bags, 6 tons, £130; Junction, 937 bags, 61 tons, £1288.

COBAR, FRIDAY.

Mining matters are rather quiet just now, though on some of the claims signs of activity are apparent.

GOULBURN, FRIDAY.

It has been decided to float the Day Dawn Gold-mining Company, Little River, Braidwood, in 30,000 shares of 10s. each, the proprietors reserving 20,000 shares. The shares are going off satisfactorily in Goulburn. The property consists of three 4-acre gold leases, for which the present proprietors have given £2200 cash and 3000 fully paid-up shares.

GUNDAGAI, FRIDAY.

In this district mining matters continue to improve every day. Yesterday the red flag was hoisted on the old cemetery lead, under Mount Parnassus, close to the famous rich diggings of 24 years ago. Sherman and party struck gold at 50ft.; prospects are as high as a pennyweight to the dish. All the ground in the neighbourhood is pegged out. The lead is not expected to run far, owing to the proximity of the hill. A few weeks ago a reef was discovered on private land at Tarrabandra, about six miles east of Gundagai, showing gold freely. The prospectors, Horn and party, sent a trial crushing to Adelong yesterday. Should this turn out payable, it will be the first from that part of the district. There is an opinion that other reefs and alluvial will be found in the locality. At Coolac, the Willow reef improves as it goes down. The next crushing is expected to yield over 3oz. Several other claims are working on the same line of reef. On the Kimo ranges, Dodd and Batty's lease, on Pyke's line, is looking very well. The shaft is down 40ft. The reef is over 2ft. wide. About eight tons are ready for crushing. The stone is expected to yield well, judging from appearances. The Frontage claim at Brummy's Hill, adjoining that recently purchased by the Sydney company, is being sunk upon, and it is anticipated that wash will be met with at the 30ft. level. This is immediately below the alluvial, where heavy gold was found in Brummy's Hill a couple of months ago.

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

The White Rock Proprietary Silver Mining Company Limited.—The managing director reports, under date July 2nd: The various works at the mine are progressing steadily. The upper dam is now approaching completion, and the lower one next in hand is well advanced, as is also the platform upon which the reducing plant is to be erected. In trial shaft, on the south side of the creek, 40 yards from workings, the top of the load bearing formation has been struck at a depth of 30ft., and two assays of stone showing traces of pyrites and galena have given—No. 1, 5oz. 11dwt. 12gr. silver; No. 2, 19oz. 11dwt. 11gr. silver. This indicates the direction of the lode, which dips beneath the creek and becomes embedded in the hillside facing the mine from the south-eastern side. About 20 tons of machinery is now on its way to the mine from Lawrence.

Eveleen Silver-mining Company, Limited, 6th July.—Messrs. A. A. Gallagher and Co. have received the following report by wire, from the mine manager:—Am timbering north drive east crosscut No. 1 lode east. Have driven east crosscut level 3ft. Am also timbering south shaft on main lode [illegible] not working well. Product for week ended June 30, [illegible] bullion, containing 900oz. silver. Erection of pumping machinery retarded for want of a carpenter. Expect to have it all completed by end of July.

Town and Country Silver-mining Company, No Liability, June 28.—Have struck the lode formation, bearing very rich grey ore, lode about 3ft. wide, and near footwall for about 8in. rich looking matrix copper and ironstained; in nice kindly country of burnt or rotten quartz formation. July 1.—The lode is composed of a formation in which chlorides are usually found.

The Broken Hill Junction North Silver-mining Company, Limited, 29th June.—The shaft has been sunk 25ft. 6in., making a total depth of 119ft. 6in. The smith's shop is now completed.

Broken Hill South Silver-mining Company, Limited.—Main engine shaft: The crosscut east is driven from shaft 99ft. 6in. The ground is much harder than usual. The shaftsmen have fixed the bottom of the plunger at the 200ft. level, and reared the column to the surface. Next week we intend dropping the drawing lift and putting the main rod into position. The carpenters are busily engaged working at the pump rods. No 1 shaft: The rise in back is now up 26ft., and is looking well. The ore is composed of quartz and decomposed ironstone, with chlorides of silver occurring in a free form between the cleavages. The ore, after the larger particles of quartz are extracted, will assay about 40oz. per ton. I may mention that the ore at present is particularly free from lead. No 1 trial shaft: We are opening out a chamber at the 60ft. level to make room for the stuff being broken from the shaft. The ore at this point is massive carbonate of lead, being free from gangue. No. 2 trial shaft is sunk 1ft. deeper. No. 7 shaft: The engine has arrived. After forking, crosscutting will be commenced at the 250ft. level.

Webb's South Silver Mining Company, Limited, June 30.—The contractor is making good progress with the three shafts; the lode matter looks well, although not exhibiting much mineral just now. Shafts are now at the following depths:—No. 1 east, 15ft. 6in.; No. 2 West, 10ft.; Junction, 10ft. The following assays have been made:—East No. 1, 5oz. 1dwt. 6gr. silver; West No. 2, 5oz. 4dwt. 12gr.—both containing 15 per cent. lead.

Day Dawn Gold Mine, Braidwood.—Main shaft sunk to depth of 80ft. Reef now 2ft. wide, showing splendid stone. As in prospecting shaft, best stone is on hanging wall, the foot wall being heavily charged with pyrites. Prospecting shaft now 45ft. I have driven 30ft. on this level, showing several hundred tons of rich stone in sight.

NOTES EXPLANATORY OF MAP.

In the list of stations, the column headed W.T. gives the state of the weather at 9 a.m., b standing for blue sky; c, detached clouds; d, drizzling rain; f, fog; g, gloomy; h, hazy; m, misty; n, frosty; o, overcast; p, passing showers; r, rain; s, snow; t, thunder; u, threatening. The next column, M'x., gives the maximum temperature for previous 24 hours. M'n, the corresponding minimum temperature; R'n, the rain for the previous 24 hours. The symbols used in the map are explained on the margin. At each station the wind symbol points to the direction in which the wind is blowing, is in fact an arrow flying with the wind. A clear circle with it means fine weather; a circle with bar, cloudy weather; and a black spot, raining. Next to this symbol are placed figures denoting the number of miles the wind is moving per hour. Next, a symbol showing the state of the sea; and, lastly, figures denoting the shade temperature at 9 a.m. The barometer curve shows the state of barometers round the coast from Perth to Cooktown:—Pt, Perth; Ay, Albany; Es, Eucla; CB, Cape Borda; A, Adelaide; Re, Robe; P, Portland; M, Melbourne; WP, Wilson's Promontory; Go, Gabo; E, Eden; Ma, Moruya; CG, Jervis Bay; WG, Wollongong; S, Sydney; N, Newcastle; PM, Port Macquarie; C, Clarence River; B, Brisbane; R, Rockhampton; Ct, Cooktown. Inland, the state of barometer is given in figures at Albury, Deniliquin, Wentworth, Menindie, Bourke, and Alice Springs. The barometer curve enables one at a glance to trace the depressions, beginning with Western Australia, and passing along eastwards; northerly winds preceding them, and southerly following.

The rainfall on Sundays and holidays, when the map is not published, is in all cases included in the quantities shown by the next following map.

THE KAWAKAWA COLLIERY.

A RARE GAS IN THE MINE.

(From the Northern Luminary, Kawakawa, Bay of Islands.)

The only gas met with in the Kawakawa mine is "carbonic acid" or "black-damp," which is non-explosive. Upon inquiry being made as to this matter our representative interviewed the manager of the mine, Mr. Moody, who furnished the following information relating to the nature, composition, and characteristics of the gas encountered on Sunday last:—

The explosive gas usually met with in coal mines is called proto-carburetted hydrogen, sometimes called "marsh gas." It contains one atom of carbon, combined with two atoms of hydrogen, or some multiple of these. The specific gravity of this gas is ·562, that of air being 1000, it being rather more than half as heavy as an equal volume of air under the same conditions. Owing to the fire-damp of mines being lighter than air, it lodges next the top or roof in mines until, by diffusion, it gets mixed with the air. Fortunately, this gas has never been seen in the Kawakawa mine.

Carbonic acid gas, known as "stythe," "choke-damp," or "black-damp," is frequently met with in our mine. It is also very frequently a source of trouble in the mines of the Thames goldfields. Its specific gravity is 1528, air being 1000. Before being mixed with air it rests next to the "thill," or floor of mines, owing to its great heaviness or density when compared with air. This gas is certainly very hurtful to animal life; even when largely diluted with atmospheric air, it acts as a narcotic poison. A curious feature in connection with this gas is that cold water dissolves about its own volume of carbonic acid, whatever be the density of the gas with which it is in contact. A fact not generally known amongst non-scientific men in relation to this gas is, that limestone consists of carbonic acid and lime; and chalk is of a similar composition, these ingredients, however, being generally mixed with oxide of iron, magnesia, and other substances in less but variable proportions. Then, again, there is another form of gas met with in mines, namely, carbonic oxide, whose specific gravity in relation to air is as 1000 is to ·975. This gas is inflammable, but does not support the combustion of other bodies. It has no taste, but a peculiar odour; it burns a blue flame; it is formed by combustion at the bottom of a coal, coke, or charcoal fire. This gas is, perhaps, never found in coal mines, except as the result of the explosion of gunpowder, or the combustion of coal or wood. I have known it to be formed by the stoppage of an air current closing a shaft communication. In its chemical relations it is an indifferent oxide, having neither acid nor basic properties. I have briefly alluded to carburetted hydrogen, carbonic acid, and carbonic oxide gases; not that I think they have any bearing particularly upon the subject matter in hand, as regards the sudden appearance of gas in the Kawakawa mine on Sunday last, but, because I think all persons engaged in mining pursuits should know something about and be instructed in the characteristics, properties, peculiarities, mode of formation, and occurrence and effects of the different gases with which they may be brought into contact in their daily avocations.

I now endeavour to give a description of the gas encountered in the mine on Sunday last. In the first place, it cannot be identified as being any of the three kinds before described or referred to; but it is a gas which, during my 30 years' experience as a miner in England, South Wales, Queensland, New South Wales, and New Zealand, I have only once before met with. The gas I saw on Sunday last was undoubtedly sulphuretted hydrogen, or hydro-sulphuric acid. This gas is seldom met with in coal mines. It is colourless, but readily distinguishable by its most unpleasant smell, which resembles rotten eggs. As regards the smell, it is a well-known fact in chemistry that eggs contain a considerable proportion of sulphur, and they evolve sulphuretted hydrogen as soon as they begin to change; hence the association between this gas and the smell of rotten eggs. The same smell is observed when a kettle boils over upon a coke or coal fire, the hydrogen liberated from the water combining with the sulphur present in the fuel. The sulphuretted hydrogen gas, as met with on Sunday in the Kawakawa coal mine, burns with a blue flame, and during the process of burning it produces water and sulphurous acid when the supply of air is abundant, and deposits sulphur when the supply of oxygen is deficient. The presence of this gas is easily discovered, the best test for the purpose being the use of paper wetted (saturated) with a solution of acetate of lead. This salt is blackened by the smallest trace of the gas. Though it does not support combustion, and is in itself inflammable, it burns when it is exposed to a supply of air and ignited, and mixed with oxygen gas the mixture is explosive. The composition of sulphuretted hydrogen gas is as follows:—Sulphur (by weight), per cent., 94·15; hydrogen (by weight), per cent., 5·85—100·00. This gas is frequently formed in close, unventilated workings, partly filled with water, probably owing to the decomposition of the pyrites contained in the sandstone forming the roof on the coal. A peculiarity of this gas is, that when it is present with the air in mines, candles or lights will burn in the mixture. So that, if it is not detected by its odour, it may prove fatal to life before its presence is detected. The best mode of dealing with all the gases before described is to dilute them with very large quantities of fresh air, and to sweep them out of the mine by an energetic ventilation, as fast as they are given off or generated. It is a well-known fact that the life of man and of other animals, as well as the combustion of lights which are used in the interior of mines, require for their maintenance the atmospheric air, from which they borrow the oxygen necessary for their existence. By virtue of its specific gravity the gas met with lately was found near the floor of the dam, precisely as in the case of carbonic acid gas.

ENGLISH MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, June 1.

It appears to be a generally accepted opinion that money will continue to be plentiful for some time to come. About a million sterling is on passage from New York, from which the German demand will be supplied. Money is also returning to London from Scotland, and the gold on the way from Australia will contribute towards keeping this market fully supplied until the usual Autumn demand sets in for agricultural wages during the harvesting. There has been but little inquiry for money this week, the Stock Exchange settlement being an unusually light one, arising from the recent holidays and indisposition to enter into new speculations under the uncertainty of the political future, so that a large number of members were able to follow the fascinations of Derby Day on Wednesday, notwithstanding the double settlement in the funds and stocks and shares being in progress on that day.

Some relief to the extreme dulness of the stock markets took place yesterday in the introduction of two new loans. The £3,003,700—50-year land grant bonds or stock of the Canadian-Pacific Railway Company, bearing interest at 3½ per cent per annum, guaranteed by the Dominion Government, first appeared, and started at a premium of 2¼ per cent., the issue price being 95, and was largely dealt in up to 3 premium. The eagerness with which it was bid for leaves little doubt of its success. The principal is secured by a mortgage to trustees of the whole land grant of the company, consisting of 14,934,230 acres. Next came the notice from the Bank of England that they are authorised to receive tenders for £2,000,000 New Zealand Government 4 per cent. consolidated stock, repayable at par 1929, the minimum price of issue 96½ per cent. The New Zealand loan started at the modest premium of 1 per cent., the issue price being considered high, and it is said that professional tendering is not at all likely to be keen.

Consols have improved to 101⅝-¾; 3 per cents. and new, 2¾; "Goschens," to 99⅞ to ⅞. The Eastern rates of exchange are: Calcutta and Bombay, 1s. 4 1-16d; Hongkong, 3s. 0¼d.; and Shanghai, 4s. 2d.

Bar silver continues depressed at 41 13-16d. per oz. The fall in value of silver and receding exchanges will have a very prejudicial effect on trade with the East, and result in manufacturers having to lower their prices of goods in order to keep up trade with the silver-using countries.

The latest telegrams from Buenos Ayres report the premium on gold to be 46/10 per cent. With the small demand for money, and abundant supply, rates have ruled unusually low, short loans having been obtained at from 1 to 1½ per cent., and two or three months' bills discounted in the open market at 1⅛ to 1¼ per cent. It caused no surprise that the official minimum of 3 per cent. was unaltered yesterday. Some inquiry has taken place for Colonial Government securities, which have advanced generally during the week.

Australian Bank Stocks.—The latest quotations are—Bank of Australasia, 95; Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, 24¼ ex div.; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 34; London Chartered Bank of Australia, 20⅞ ex div.; National Bank of New Zealand, 1⅛ to 1¼; Queensland National Bank, 12⅝; Bank of New South Wales, 66; Bank of New Zealand, 14½; Bank of South Australia, 25½; Bank of Victoria, 41½; Union Bank of Australia, 60; National Bank of Australasia, 10.

The prospectus is issued of the Oberlin Tin-mining Company, with a capital of £200,000, in £1 shares, of which 50,000 are reserved as part payment of the purchase-money, fixed at £170,000.

The report of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company for the half-year ending March 31 states that they have recently contracted with Messrs. Caird and Co. for the construction of two new vessels of upwards of 5000 tons, which are intended more especially for the Indian service. It is proposed to name these vessels respectively Peninsular and Oriental. Tenders have also been invited by the directors for the construction of four large cargo-carrying vessels of a special class, to be employed chiefly on the company's lines between India and China. After referring to the new mail contracts, it further states that during the six months under review the general working of the company's lines has been characterised by complete regularity and entire immunity from accident. The net result of the trade has been that a fair increase in outward receipts has been counterbalanced to a large extent by a diminution in homeward earnings, owing to the general dulness and low rates prevailing on nearly all the lines occupied by the company. The balance of receipts would, however, be still somewhat in the company's favour were it not for the fact that the reduction in the India and China mail subsidy, to the extent of nearly £100,000 per annum, takes effect in the present year. An interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum is now recommended, the warrants for which will be payable on and after the 14th June.

Amongst the most important companies registered during the past week is the Australian Pastoral Company, with a capital of £2,000,000 in £10 shares, in which Messrs. Gibbs, Bright, and Co. are interested. The object is to carry on in the Australian colonies or elsewhere the business of stock and station holders and sheep and cattle farmers and graziers.

Chemicals.—The Liverpool market is generally dull, and in most cases prices tending downwards. Soda ash, caustic soda, and bleaching powder, all easier. Chlorate of potash quite demoralised. Sulphate of ammonia in demand at 5s. per ton dearer; while nitrate of soda has given way to about the same extent. Bicarb. soda, soda crystals, and saltpetre are unaltered at last week's quotations. Citric acid at 1s. 8d., and tartaric acid at 1s. 6¼d., show no change. German quinine now quoted at 1s. 4d. per oz.; Howard's English, 2s. per oz.

Tallow.—At public sales this day, 994 casks of Australian tallow were offered, and 942 casks sold. The sales opened slowly at a decline of 3d. per cwt. for best mutton and beef, but competition increased as the sales progressed, and prices ruled firmer, the lower qualities being decidedly better than at last week's sales. Prices realised were:—Australian mutton, fine, 24s.; fair to good, 22s. to 23s. 6d.; common to middling, 22s. to 23s.; low and inferior, 20s. to 21s. 6d.; Australian beef, fine, 23s. 6d.; fair to good, 22s. to 23s.; common to middling, 20s. to 21s. 6d.; low and inferior, 19s. to 20s.

Frozen Meat.—Messrs. Blofeld and Lisenden are clearing the s.s. Iberia's cargo of frozen sheep at 2s. 7d. per stone of 8lb., and have no other parcels on hand until the steamer Cuzco arrives, due on Thursday next. The frozen mutton trade is generally better, and higher prices are expected. New Zealand carcases are bringing 2s. 8d. to 2s. 10d., and for the North Canterbury district sheep 2s. 9d. to 3s. 2d. per 8lb. is being realised.

Canned Meats.—Supplies continue large, 8635 cases having been imported during the week ending 25th ultimo, 2967 being from New South Wales, and 2189 from New Zealand, the balance being nearly all from the United States. The demand continues quiet. Messrs. John M'Call and Co. quote prices for Australian and New Zealand boiled beef 3½d. to 4d.; mutton, 4d. to 4½d.

Sugar.—The general tone of the market has been steady, but quiet. Groceries in request, and a good business in crystallised Demerara up to 17s. 3d. per cent. German 88 per cent. beet closed dull of sale, and easier at—June, 12s. 10½d.; July, 13s. 1½d. f.o.b. The refined market shows no change. Tate's cubes, No. 1, 20s. 6d.; No. 2, 19s. 9d.; Martineau's cut loaf, 20s.; Dutch crushed quiet, R.S., 16s. 4½d.; A.S.R., 17s. 6d., f.o.b.

The draft convention drawn up by the International Sugar Bounties Conference has now been submitted, and has been under the consideration of the different Governments. It is understood that the communications received have been, without exception, favourable to the adoption of the convention, which, with certain reservations, provides for the abolition of the bounty system.

Metals.—It is thought that the symptoms of the copper market indicate the collapse of the syndicate at an early date. A few days ago the cash price of Chili bars was £82, and forward delivery at three months as low as £74 to £76; but quotations have since altered to £80 15s., to £81 5s. cash, and £78 to £79 three months. Tin is quiet, at £88 to £88 10s., for Straits and Australian; three months, £89 5s. to £89 15s. The strength of the market is shown by the three months price being higher than the cash price, and foreshadows a pending recovery.

At the Cornish tin ticketings held at Redruth on 29th ultimo, 204 tons were offered for sale, the highest price being £56, and the lowest £48 10s. Scotch pig iron is now lower than it has been for the past 35 years, and would attract buyers but for the continued increase in store, which now amounts to 986,310 tons, being an increase on the week of 3130 tons. Price, 37s. 1½d. to 37s. 2d. per ton cash. An improvement is wired from Glasgow this afternoon to 37s. 6½d. cash; English pig lead slightly firmer at £12 10s.; spelter, £16 10s. to £16 15s. Quicksilver, first hands £7 2s. 6d. per bottle.

Australian Gum.—At the sales held yesterday prices were irregular, at a considerable decline, and under a weak demand nearly all offered was withdrawn.

Salt.—The ship Glamis has cleared from Sharpness this week for Sydney, with a cargo of salt, consisting of 1302 tons coarse and 250 tons fine, Black Horse brand. The Liverpool salt market remains unaltered.

Wheat.—The continued fine weather combined with the attractions of the great race week of the season has acted as a check to business in the wheat and flour market, which has ruled dull and inactive. The imports of wheat into the United Kingdom during the first 39 weeks of the season has been 33,551,164cwt. against 37,793,490 cwt. last season, and of flour 13,711,560cwt. against 13,084,363cwt. The American visible supply has further decreased 1,360,000 bushels on the week, and is now 27,062,485 bushels, against 43,212,520 bushels last year. At the Baltic sale rooms some cargoes of Australian wheat have been sold, holders showing more disposition to meet buyers. The Luna Romana and Thorne cargoes have been sold at 34s. 3d. At Mark-lane to-day wheat is dull and cheaper to sell. A parcel of 1000 quarters arrived per sail, sold at 32s. 4½d., but other parcels are offering to-day at 32s. 3d. without finding buyers. Price of Australian wheat, ex store, is quoted to-day 34s. 6d. to 35s.; New Zealand long berry, 34s., 34s. 6d.; short, 33s. to 33s. 6d.

Horns and Bones.—The quarterly public sales were held yesterday and to-day. Bones were dealt with yesterday, and met with a very poor demand at an average fall of about £1 to £2 per ton for round shanks ranging in from £9 to £22 per ton, the bulk being taken in and held over by the merchants. Flats brought full prices, £5 to £6 2s. 6d. per ton, and hoofs rather dearer £4 12s. 6d. to £5 per ton. Horns sold generally at 1s. to 2s. per 100 higher than last sales, with a good demand.

Hides.—There has been rather a better inquiry at the low rates current. The market is generally quiet, and over-supplied. The sales comprise 6790 hides during the past month. Sydney first heavy ox, 3¾d.; first light ox, 3½d. to 3¾d.; first cow, 3½d.; seconds, 3d. to 3¼d., Brisbane first heavy ox, 3¾d.; first light, 3¼d.; seconds, 3d. to 3¼d.

Leather continues to recede, and values are ½d. per lb. lower. Supplies are moderate. First sides, 9½d.; seconds, 9d. Basils, fair demand and prices unchanged.

Copra quiet. Sydney sun-dried, £14 10s. to £14 12s. 6d.; kiln-dried, £13 10s.

Sheepskins.—The auctions were held yesterday and to-day. 2660 bales Australian and 1600 bales Cape offered, and sold at ¼d. per lb. advance over last sales.

Butter.—A small quantity of Australian and New Zealand butter, of very low quality, not fit for table use, has been offered this day, and some sold at 28s. to 40s. per cwt. There is not any good Australian butter on the market. Finest Danish butter is quoted as high as 90s. to 106s.

Cheese.—New Zealand cheese also offered at this afternoon's auctions. Prices, from 30s. to 42s.

Apples.—Australian apples are much liked; the wholesale houses are quoting in their lists boxes (about 40lb. net), 12s. 9d. to 15s. The fruit arrives generally in good condition, but there is still room for improvement in the art of packing, in which the Americans have arrived at great perfection. The quality is excellent, and the appearance attractive. The shopkeepers are selling at 1s. 6d. to 3s. per dozen. The balance of the shipment ex Ormuz was again offered on the 29th instant, but of 441 boxes put up only a small portion disposed of at 8s. to 8s. per box, the better qualities and conditioned cases having been disposed of at higher prices, as quoted last week.

Wool.—Upwards of 300,000 bales have now arrived for the forthcoming series. The reports from the manufacturing districts of this country and the Continent indicate an active demand. Within the last few days a renewed inquiry has taken place, and several hundred bales sold at a slight advance.

THE WOOL TRADE.

The statistical wool year in Australia for the season 1887-8 closed on the 30th ultimo, and the present occasion seems a fitting opportunity for reviewing the business done in our own colony during that period. In almost every branch it is gratifying to find that large increase over the previous year have been the result. All interested in the growth of the staple cannot but regard the season that has just closed as one of the most satisfactory on record. Growers who for several years previously had sent to market clips which, like the drought itself, had each year gone from bad to worse, will remember with satisfaction the clip of 1887-8 as being well grown and sound, and for which they were able to obtain a fair price. Auctioneers, too, must have pleasant recollections, for as well as having a steady demand throughout the season there was no great fluctuation in the prices, and the table of sales which we append below proves beyond a doubt that they, too, have good reason to be well satisfied with the results. Buyers, perhaps, have the least cause to view with complaisance the season's business: for, whilst those who operated on account of manufacturers had the bulk of their purchases reaching the mills at a time when the London wool market was certainly unfavourable, comparatively few wools purchased by buyers on speculative account thus reached London for the two first series returned more than cost and charges; the consignments included in the present sales, however, it is expected may leave some small margin for profit. The following general brief remarks may not be without interest to our readers:—

Condition of Clip.—As a rule the clip was deep grown and sound in staple, but owing probably to the superabundance of feed the quality in the generality of cases was not so fine as usual. Burrs and seeds were very prevalent in the wools which made their appearance in the early part of the season, but after the first few weeks there was a plentiful supply of clips less faulty in this respect. A remarkable feature was the presence in many fleeces of clips from various districts of dead yolk situated midway in the staple, which not only caused weakness in many instances, but was also looked upon as being detrimental to the capacity of the wool for becoming a good colour in process of manufacture. Sandy or smoky wools were almost unseen during the season. Ticks were very prevalent in New England clips, and a liberal application of sheep-dip would have been very beneficial. Many clips throughout the colony showed a great want of care in the preparation, those coming from the Monaro and New England districts being specially noticeable in this respect. As a whole, the clip was quite as good as could be expected when the severity of the drought for the previous three years is taken into consideration.

Prices throughout the season were remarkably steady, and fluctuations very trifling. The cheapest periods were during November and in February, whilst January saw prices at their highest. The difference in values at any time did not exceed 10 per cent. The following are the ranges of prices which have ruled in Sydney during the year just terminated:—

Description.	Good to Superior.	Medium.	Inferior.
Greasy fleece	4½d to 11d	7d to 8½d	3½d to 6½d
Washed fleece	12½d to 15d	10½d to 12d	8½d to 10d
Scoured	15d to 18d	12½d to 14½d	10d to 12d

Sales.—The opening of the season took place at Messrs. Mort and Co.'s rooms on October 12, but owing to a trifling misunderstanding on the question of payment before delivery between the foreign buyers and the auctioneers, it was not until the 21st October that business commenced in earnest. Large catalogues were thereupon offered daily put on the market, and as buyers were prepared to operate at London equivalent, fair clearances resulted. The bulk of the purchases were made by Continental and Yorkshire representatives, but buyers for speculative account obtained a fair sprinkling. Purchasers for America secured the few superior clips sold. The largest amount of sales reported in any one week was 26,084 bales for that ending 14th December.

We append a statement of sales made by the individual firms of auctioneers in Sydney and Newcastle during the years ending 30th June, 1887 and 1888:—

Dalgety and Co., Limited	1294	—
Great Northern Wool D. and S. Co.	—	2052

The total sales at the two ports are thus shown to be—

	1887-8	1886-7
Sydney	161,217	131,455
Newcastle	1,294	2,052
	162,511	133,507

It will be seen from the above that the increase in sales for the colony amounts to 29,004 bales. While the Sydney auctioneers sold 29,762 bales more than in 1886-7, those doing business at Newcastle show a decrease of 758 bales in their sales.

The quantity of wool quitted by the auctioneers in Australia during the year ended 30th June was as follows:—

Port.	Bales sold.
Sydney	161,217
Melbourne	167,322
Adelaide (say)	36,000
Geelong	30,700
Newcastle	1,294
Total	396,533

Exports.—The great stride made by this colony during the year under review is evidenced in the quantity exported. The total shipments figure as follows:—From Sydney, 346,130 bales; from Newcastle, 50,290 bales; total, 396,419 bales—as against 332,268 bales for 1886-7, showing an increase of 64,121 bales (about 18 per cent.) in favour of the season just closed. Of the 396,419 bales there were shipped by sailing vessels 220,569 bales; by steamers, 175,850 bales.

From Messrs. R. Goldsbrough and Co.'s Melbourne circular of 28th June, we extract the annexed table of Australasian shipments:—

Date.	Colony.	1887-8.	1886-7.	Increase	Decrease
June 11	N. S. Wales	396,112	332,408	64,372

27	West Australia	14,838	14,378	460
27	Tasmania	16,057	15,821	[illegible]
May	New Zealand	200,113	207,375		7,262
		1,278,134	1,190,331	101,411	9,326
		[illegible]		9,326
	Increase	92,585		92,585

Prospects.—On the whole, favourable weather for the growing clip has been experienced throughout the colony, although a larger general rainfall would, no doubt, be beneficial. In any case, a sound, well-grown clip of good quality may be expected. It is not likely, however, to be so heavy in yolk, and will probably fortunately contain a less quantity of burr and seed than its predecessor. Lambing is proceeding satisfactorily. There is every reason to anticipate a large concourse of buyers when the busy season again opens, and auctioneers having provided unsurpassed accommodation for the showing of the clip, good prices ought to be current, especially in view of the admitted fact that consumption is keeping well abreast of the supply. Much, however, will depend on the aspect of the political situation later on in the year.

London Wool Sales.—Owing to the interruption caused by the break in the cables, we have no very recent messages. At the time of writing last week the news was becoming rather unfavourable, a weakening tendency in faulty sorts being reported. It is gratifying to find that this depression did not last for any length of time, as our correspondent was enabled to cable on 27th June: "There is a decidedly better spirit in the wool market. The excellent selection of New Zealand wool realised firm prices." And on 28th June: "The price of wool in the London market remains steady. Superior classes are very firm."

By mail we are in receipt of London dates to 29th May, and respecting the sale of 5000 bales wool gets—says, Messrs. Chas. Balme and Co. say:—"The London wool market has during the past few days very sensibly reflected the feeling of increased confidence in the article which has been latterly exhibited by Continental consumers, and since the close of the late public auctions a total of about 5000 bales—say, 3600 bales Cape and 1400 bales Australasian—has been sold, mainly for export, at prices ranging from ½d. to 1d. in advance of the recent public sale rates. This movement appears to be immediately due to speculative initiative, but the circumstances of the industry and the statistical position of the staple have for some time past rendered such a tendency in values a by no means improbable contingency."

United States Market.—At Boston business was very quiet at the date of last letters received. Quotations for Australian descriptions of greasy wools were—Choice combings, 39 to 41 cents; average combing, 35 to 38 cents; crossbred, 36 to 40 cents; clothing, 35 to 36 cents per lb. (10 cents duty paid). The American Wool Register of May 24 states:—

"The market for the past week has been very dull and uninteresting. The condition of the woollen and hosiery markets is unsatisfactory, and but a proportion of the woollen mills are fortunate in having orders sufficient to carry them to the opening of the light weight season, and as there is no disposition among manufacturers to pursue the suicidal course of producing goods for a possible market, the majority take little interest in the wool market beyond buying enough to keep up their selections. This in itself is sufficient to deprive the market of any animation, and when to this are added the uncertainties of tariff legislation, the outcome and effect of which the shrewdest cannot forecast, the unsatisfactory condition of the trade is not to be wondered at. Australian wools are quiet; and move generally in a small way, as manufacturers are not inclined to operate beyond actual wants, except at a price which offers a chance for speculation. What movement there is is in fine combings. The demand for Australian lambs is about over for the season; they sell secured at 65c. to 56c., and from that down to 60c. for defective. The position of Australian wool, it is thought, will be stronger in the event of free wool than if the Mills Bill should fail, as it is believed the passage of the bill has been discounted in part at least on the other side, and if the foreign hope of its passage should be disappointed, a weakening of prices abroad is thought probable, which might enable importers to lay down wool below present values."

Auctions: During the week the regular fortnightly sales have been held, but with the exception of a few fair-sized parcels of scoured skin the catalogues comprised oddments only. Buyers for shipment bid well up to late values. Owners, however, in view of the recent firm tone at the London sales, have placed reserves on their wools beyond the prices buyers were willing to give, and as a consequence nearly all shipping parcels were passed in. The few lots of greasy wool submitted were also held over for better values. Quotations are as follow:—

Greasy fleece	7d to 8d	5d to 7d	3d to 4d

PRODUCE MARKET.—Friday.

This morning a large supply of forage and a fair quantity of wood were submitted at Darling Harbour terminus. The auctions were moderately attended by the trade. The demand for forage was fairly animated for good-coloured oats of hay and chaff, but was weak for other classes and straw. Sales of wood were again marked by dulness. At the wharfs the supply to hand was rather in excess of the average, and principally from the Hunter River, Northern ports and Victoria. Trade was exclusively for lines to fill the day's requirements. Rates and prices ruled firm, but otherwise prices were unaltered. STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDERS FOR CHILDREN CUTTING TEETH.

CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.

The value of this well-known Family Medicine has been largely tested in all parts of the world, and by all grades of society, for upwards of FIFTY YEARS. Its well-earned extensive sale has induced SPURIOUS IMITATIONS, some of which in OUTWARD APPEARANCE so closely resemble the original as to have deceived many purchasers. The proprietor therefore feels it due to the public to give a special caution against the use of such imitations.

Purchasers are therefore requested carefully to observe the four following distinctive characteristics, without which none are genuine:—

1. In every case the words JOHN STEEDMAN, Chemist Walworth, Surrey, are engraved on the Government stamp affixed to EACH PACKET.
2. Each SINGLE POWDER has directions for the dose, and the words "John Steedman, chemist, Walworth, Surrey," printed thereon.
3. The name Steedman is always spelt with two EE'S.
4. The manufacture is carried on solely at Walworth, Surrey.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—Times, July 13, 1864.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, December 31, 1864.

Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne "is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course it would not be thus singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"—Medical Times, January 13, 1886.

FOR GENERAL USE IN PLACE OF SUGAR. SACCHARIN.

One Pound equals about 280lb. of Cane Sugar.

One of the chief uses of SACCHARIN will be in the enrichment of the diet of those persons who are forbidden the use of sugar, and who will now be able to enjoy a sweet flavouring in the various articles of diet formerly denied them. It is particularly applicable to those suffering from diabetes, gout, rheumatism, dyspepsia, obesity, and liver complaints, or any form of disease where the use of sugar is objectionable. It cannot "create acidity," as sugar often does, since it is non-fermenting and antiseptic—characteristics of very great importance.

IMITATIONS.

Only articles possessing some special and acknowledged excellence are worth imitating; and thus, induced by the unprecedented success of Powell's Balsam of Aniseed, dishonest traders with reckless audacity have tried to pass off on the public utterly worthless imitations, or to offer a "Balsam" of their own crude compounding. In order, therefore, to protect the public against such fraudulent imitations the well-known Trade Mark—"Lion, Net, and Mouse"—is conspicuously printed on the wrapper of every bottle of Powell's Balsam of Aniseed, and any imitation of the same is forgery, and a breach of the law relating to Trade Marks.

POWELL'S BALSAM of ANISEED.

The following letter has been received by Mr. T. Powell, from William Boards, Esq., an eminent agriculturist and land agent, residing at

"Nightingale Hall, Edmonton.

"Dear Sir,—I have recently suffered much from a most violent cough, proceeding from a tickling in my chest, which no remedy out of many I resorted to could allay. My head was constantly aching, and my whole frame was entirely shaken. Having seen the good effects of your Balsam of Aniseed in several members of my family, I purchased a small bottle, and when going to bed at night took a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of water just warm. The effect was immediate; it arrested the tickling in my chest. I slept well, and arose perfectly restored in the morning, with the exception of debility arising from fatigue by incessant coughing for some days previous. My cough entirely left, and has never returned. Having since heard of a lady in the neighbourhood who for a long time had laboured under a most distressing cough, and who had resorted to every remedy within her knowledge, I sent the remainder of the bottle to her, and that long-standing, obstinate, and (as she thought) incurable cough was perfectly cured.—I am, dear sir, yours very truly, "WM. BOARDS."

JOSEPHSON'S AUSTRALIAN OINTMENT.

BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

THE MOST USEFUL OINTMENT IN THE WORLD, BAR NONE.

If this Ointment is not celebrated for its Curative Powers, it must be in those dim regions where the white man never travelled. On the Darling, on the Barcoo, at Cooper's Creek, the Diamantina, and on the banks of other rivers, where scurvy, sores from poisoned wood, ulcers from contagion, and bad living abound, pots of JOSEPHSON'S OINTMENT are to be found.

We see published all kinds of preparations of the Eucalyptus in various forms, but the chief ingredient in the AUSTRALIAN OINTMENT is the Eucalyptus, so that all these newfangled productions are old in comparison with JOSEPHSON'S OINTMENT; in fact, they have been finding out "Mares' Nests," while the pure and unadulterated essence and colour of the Eucalyptus is fully embodied in JOSEPHSON'S OINTMENT.

JOSEPHSON'S OINTMENT has been used by the public for so many years that it does not require puffing; it has worked its way, and still holds its own, and yet stands the PREMIER OINTMENT IN THE SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE.

But as many new arrivals have lately made Australia their home, it may be as well to let them know that there is such an article as JOSEPHSON'S OINTMENT, purely the production of the colonies, composed of wild plants indigenous to the country and nowhere else, the principal of which is the Eucalyptus, now so famed throughout the world.

JOSEPHSON'S OINTMENT is purely vegetable, and GUARANTEED FREE FROM ALL POISONOUS QUALITIES. No artificial colouring, as the green colour is extracted from the pure green plants, which defy imitation.

WHO WOULD SUFFER FROM PILES, when one application will relieve you!

Read this letter and try for yourselves.

Messrs. E. Rowe and Co.

Dear Sirs,—I have tried your Josephson's Ointment for piles and have found much relief from using it. You are at liberty to use this if you feel disposed. I remain, yours, &c., L. P. SOLOMONS, Herald Office.

IN THE ESTATE OF THE LATE WILLIAM LAWSON, JUN., Esq.

By Order of the TRUSTEES, J. R. STREET, Esq., and J. C. TAYLOR, Esq.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT SALES of VALUABLE COUNTRY LANDS.

IN THE MUDGEE DISTRICT.

LOT 1. BERRIWA, near DENISON TOWN, on the TALBRAGAR RIVER.

2267 ACRES, in three grants, at present forming portion of the Berriwa Run. This FREEHOLD PROPERTY together with about 4770 Acres of CROWN LEASEHOLDS attached thereto, is leased to Mr. D. MacMaster, but occupied by Mr. E. J. Lowe, at the nominal rental of £300 per annum. The lease expires as in August, 1888.

The estate is intersected by the main road from MUDGEE towards COOLAH, and by a branch road towards COBBORAH. These roads are fenced off on both sides by wire fencing, and the freehold frontages between these roads and the river are completely enclosed into two paddocks. The back portions of the freehold, together with the leasehold lands, form another large paddock. Altogether, about 10 or 11 miles of fencing, all wire, fall upon the freehold lands, either as boundary fences or fencing on the roads mentioned. The whole of the freehold land has been ringbarked.

The freehold frontages, between the roads mentioned and the river, are generally rich alluvial black soil flats; the remaining portions comprise generally more or less undulating red soil forest country.

GRAPHIC ANALYSIS: As applied to the investigation of Stresses in the Hawkesbury Bridge Truss. By C. O. Burge, M. Inst. C. E.

"Useful to engineering students and others who are unacquainted with the graphic methods." —Sydney Morning Herald.

"Mr. Burge has conferred a substantial favour on all Australian engineering students. . . . . A student who has the requisite knowledge of elementary statics will be able to give himself a good lesson in Graphic Analysis by carefully going over Mr. Burge's construction line by line, and he ought then to secure one or more of the best English and French text books on the subject; here also Mr. Burge will assist him, as he gives an excellent list of these works at the end of his pamphlet." —Victorian Engineer.

"Thoroughly intelligible to beginners." —Daily Telegraph.

GREAT GIFT SALE
GREAT GIFT SALE.

This great event has already drawn extra thousands to our doors, filling our establishment with delighted crowds, spreading all round a feeling of intense satisfaction and sincere thankfulness. Indeed, the matter has been discussed in many a family circle, and these pleasant councils do not break up without resolutions embodying signal applause and perfect approval being unanimously carried.

OUR PRETTY PALACE bears an exceedingly gay appearance under the special conditions of present circumstances, and, as at a popular carnival where the people turn out en masse to do honour to some particular occasion, the effect is considerably heightened by the HAPPY FACES OF OUR VISITORS. We want every one to participate in the BARGAINS NOW OFFERING.

It is our desire that the benefits and advantages which must assuredly arise therefrom may permeate through the length and breadth of the land; that ALL SORTS AND CONDITIONS OF MEN may drink deeply of this stream of good luck. There is sound wisdom in buying during our GREAT GIFT SALE.

There is nothing of an abstract character about it. Solid concrete in every way is its nature; the passing, fleeting dream of the visionary has not part in it; it is altogether what it professes to be, a GREAT GIFT SALE.

THE "LOUIS" VELVETEEN.
The strictest examiner may try every test of touch and sight without discovering that these are other than the Genoa Velvets, which they so closely resemble, while the peculiar arrangements resulting in the fast woven pile enable them to stand interminable and rough wear, which would ruin real velvets at four times the price.
LUSTROUS SILK FINISH, equal to VELVET, in ORIENTAL BLUE BLACK and 50 lovely Shades
UNRIVALLED FOR RICHNESS OF COLOUR AND DRAPERY.
INEXPENSIVE—Gives universal satisfaction.

W. HENSON,
Hon. Treasurer.
Benevolent Asylum, July 6, 1888.

THE FOLLOWING ADVERTISEMENTS ARE PUBLISHED for GENERAL INFORMATION.

CENTENNIAL INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, MELBOURNE, 1888.

The Commissioners invite DESIGNS for the Certificate of Award. The size of the actual design itself, without margin, to be about 20 by 16 inches. All designs must be executed in Indian ink. A space of about 12 by 6 inches must be left in the design for the certificate, for the insertion of the name of the exhibitor, other printed matter, and signatures.

The Commissioners also invite Models in Relief for the Exhibition medals. All medals must show the Queen's head on the obverse, and a design on the reverse, and shall be 6 inches in diameter. As a guide to competitors, they are informed that the bronze medal will be 3 inches, the silver 2 inches, and the gold 1½ inches in diameter.

All designs for certificate, and models for the medals, must be marked with a motto or device, and accompanied by a sealed envelope marked with the same device, containing the name and address of the author, and must be lodged at the office of the Commissioners before 12 noon on 30th September, 1888.

The Commissioners offer Premiums of 100 guineas each for the accepted design and model, which will become their property. In the event of none of the designs and models for the certificate or medals respectively, being considered of sufficient merit, the Commissioners do not bind themselves to select any of those sent in.

Secretary.
